Marabou Capes in Demand.

With the Spring buying season at hand, manufacturers of marabou capes are receiving many calls for these goods. This season the city trade has started to buy much earlier, and some of the stores have already been duplicating their original orders. Out-of-town buyers here are placing some very substantial orders for these capes that retail from $5 to $12 each.

Men's Silk Shirts Sell Well.

The sale of men's silk shirts both in the local and out-of-town trade is very satisfactory. According to the makers, most of the buying that is being done is on the higher-priced lines. Although there are a number of shirts being sold for $42 a dozen, the demand is much stronger for the lines selling from $72 to $96 a dozen. Outside of the orders being placed for immediate delivery, many are being taken for the future.

Hand Painting on Apparel.

Hand painting has been gradually making its appearance in many lines of women's apparel. It has been used on satin handbags of delicate colors and upon parasols, and the many plain satin sport skirts have offered a tempting opportunity for this form of ornamentation. Not only flowers are to be seen but different sports implements, golf clubs, &c.

Gray Goods Business Dull.

Dullness was again evident in the local gray goods market yesterday. There was very little demand and the transactions were only in a few constructions. In printcloths sales were made of 39-inch 68-72s for February and March delivery at 10 cents, of 38½-inch 64-60s at 8½ cents for delivery to April and of 60-48s of the same width at 7½ cents for this and next month's delivery. Beyond these there were a few sales of twills and sateens.

Sales of Spring Suits.

The sale of ladies' Spring suits has started in with a rush and some exceptionally large orders are now being taken by the firms in this trade. Many of the retailers from outside of the city who refused to place orders with the men when they were on the road are now in town. Most of them are buying very liberally, as they appear to realize that the prices for Spring will not be lower. According to some of the manufacturers, the new line of coats is moving very slowly, preference being given to capes and dolmans for the Spring season.

Use of Fabric Gloves.

There has been an increasing use of fabric gloves for some years, but the war and the high prices of skin gloves have made a big advance in their popularity, a New York jobber says. People have bought them for economical reasons and will continue to use them because they are porous and agreeable to wear. This particular man is looking forward to the time, he says, when they will be again imported from some of the warring countries at lower prices than the domestic article.

Lines of Women's Dresses.

Buyers who are now in the city placing orders for the Spring lines of women's dresses are more interested in the better grades of merchandise. Owing to the conditions that exist in the trade, in many cases the stock in the hands of the manufacturers is very low. It was said yesterday morning that all of the desirable goods are off of the racks, while the cheaper lines are moving rather slowly. Although Wednesday was a holiday, most of the dress houses were kept busy all day long attending to customers.

Rhinestones for Trimmings.

Summer ornaments are to be gay, and those for next Fall and Winter brilliant, it is promised. Not really on the market yet are dress accessories made with rhinestones. These will be sent in designs upon velvet bands and run over at either side upon a fine net which allows them to blend into the material of the gown without too strong a contrast. This is one of many ways in which rhinestones will be used for elaborate dress trimmings.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Trading Expands with Higher Prices—Advance Contrary to News Developments.

Trading in the stock market broadened out considerably yesterday and prices displayed strength, particularly industrial issues which were affected by special developments. Thus the shares of companies with capital invested in Mexico were bid upward persistently after reports of an interview with President Carranza on some phases of the Mexican Government's fiscal policy reached the Street. The Mexican President was quoted as saying that payment of part of the interest on foreign indebtedness would probably be begun in the near future, although the means to this end were not disclosed. With Mexican representatives making efforts here to gain financial assistance, the information from the Southern country received support in the estimation of traders, and Mexican Petroleum, Southern Pacific, and American Smelting and Refining became the subjects of fairly lively buying in the first half of the day. The chief aspects of the market were hard to define. While it was still believed that short covering was largely responsible for the continued demand, the breadth of the market seemed to indicate that buyers of long stock also were active in extending their interests to departments which had been more or less neglected for several weeks. A diversion was created late in the day by news of the application for a "limited receivership" for the New Haven Railroad, and this, besides causing an abrupt decline of New Haven stock, unsettled many other railway issues. To a certain extent the industrial group was affected, but the session ended with quotations as a whole well above their levels on Tuesday afternoon.

All this week stocks have moved forward, a development which has caused much confusion of opinion among observers of market phenomena who take their stand on economic and political developments at home and abroad. The news has hardly been of a character to create cheerfulness either over home industry and business or expectations of an early resumption on a large and profitable scale of international trade. Social unrest, centred in the spirit of Bolshevism in other countries; sharp differences of opinion at the Peace Conference; strikes, confusing reports of the state of manufacturing and new buying in the steel trade and in textile lines, and finally the serious developments in Rumania have not been reflected at all in security prices. The markets, in fact, have seemed to ignore these influences, and while the casual interpretations of rising prices are comprised chiefly in a temporary speculative movement, still, as time has gone by, with the advance continuing, a part of the market following has been moved to wonder whether a discounting process in respect to conditions some months hence is not in progress. The Liberty bond market lost a little more ground in the morning, but recovered somewhat later in the day. Secretary of the Treasury Glass is expected to discuss with bankers today some of the underlying problems of the forthcoming loan, and it would not be too much to expect that the Liberty bond market would shortly begin to shape itself in accordance with the preliminary plans for the new offering. The Russian bonds moved down a couple of points.

Call money continued firm at 5 per cent. for most of the day's loans, with 6 per cent. quoted for a moderate amount of bank accommodation.

Prices Irregular on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Prices moved irregularly on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 65 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 25 francs, 98 centimes. Five per cent. loans, 91 francs 17 centimes.

YOUNGSTOWN SHEET & TUBE

Annual Report Shows Decrease of $12,216,004 in Gross Earnings.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company reports gross earnings of $25,952,118 from all sources in 1918, a decline of $12,216,004 from the total in the preceding twelve months. After providing for depreciation and inventory adjustments as well as adjustments for cost of war plant construction, a net income of $11,363,630 remained. Dividends amounted to $4,394,721.

James A. Campbell, President, says in his annual statement that nothing was set aside for Federal taxes, as the revenue law had not been passed when the statement was prepared. Should the 80 per cent. tax be retained, he states, the taxes may amount to between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 and the payment would absorb most of the year's surplus. Shipments of steel were approximately 35,000 tons less than in 1917, owing to severe weather in January and February and the loss of business after the armistice was signed.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Marine Preferred and Ocean Rates.

Marine preferred was bid upward for a gross gain of 4 points without the stimulus of rumors about the proposed sale of the company's British tonnage. In fact, it could not be discovered that traders thought anything at all about the deal. Short covering as a result of the recent decline probably had something to do with the rise, but brokers reported buying for the long account based on prospective earnings instead of a problematical liquidation of the shipping concern. It is expected that within a few weeks all the company's vessels which were commandeered by the British Government will have been turned back, making them available for the unrestricted carrying of goods at prevailing rates. Much emphasis has been laid upon the reduction of ocean freight charges. The situation is, however, that the new tariffs are in most cases a great deal higher than the pre-war freight charges. Marine preferred edged off in the final trading, but closed with a net gain of 2¼ points.

Equipment Orders Renewed.

The Government is considering the situation of railroad equipment makers who had large war orders "suspended" when the armistice was signed. It is understood that work is to be continued on about 20,000 cars ordered originally for the army in France. These orders should help some of the companies which have faced the necessity of reducing their operating forces, and will act as a stopgap until additional contracts from the Railroad Administration are placed.

A Comment on Steel and Iron.

"The immediate situation in the industry is not nearly as bad as painted," says The Iron Trade Review. "While conditions are far from being satisfactory, or even comfortable, the better tone in the market first displayed a week ago is having a moderate though clearly discernible effect. The export business has broadened further in the week and actual business booked is heavier, while promising pending inquiries are numerous." This fairly cheerful reference to the steel and iron trade differs enough from comment heard in many quarters to show that even within the industry itself current opinions are wide apart.

Union Oil Sales and Expense.

The Union Oil Company of California reports an increase of more than $10,000,000 in gross sales last year, while profits were no more than $350,500 larger than the year before. The gross revenue was $43,990,000, and the net income $12,435,000. The figures apparently supply a commentary on the increased expenses of the year, as neither depreciation nor war taxes were counted in. The surplus after all charges and reservations was $6,023,000, compared with $7,642,284 in 1917.

Municipal Bonds.

Now that the Revenue bill has been adopted by the Senate with no alterations, as every one expected it would be, those whose business it is to sell bonds say Secretary of the Treasury Glass, and the others who will have a say in framing the terms and conditions of the next Liberty Loan will have no alternative but to offer at least part of the loan on a tax exempt basis. If they do not, it is maintained, a good deal of the so-called "rich subscriptions" will go into municipal bonds, which are tax exempt. The Government, it is contended, must appeal to these rich subscribers, as Secretary McAdoo did in the last campaign, and the best appeal, say the bond experts, will be a tax exempt bond at a fair rate of interest, say 4 per cent.

⁂

American Ice.

Yesterday was warm, very warm for February, and, according to the honored traditions of Wall Street, a warm day in February is the best kind of bull argument on American Ice. Warm Winter; poor ice crop; high prices for ice next Summer; high prices for the stock now. American Ice securities, behaving conventionally, rose about 2 points.

Copper at 17⅝ Cents?

There were persistent reports in the trade yesterday that some of the smaller producers of copper were offering comparatively small deliveries in March and April at 17⅝ cents a pound. The big producers are holding out for 18 cents, and some sales are reported at the latter figure. One dealer in scrap stated yesterday that there were more than 1,000,000,000 pounds of scrap copper in this country, and predicted there will be sales much lower than 18 cents before the end of the year. The consensus of opinion, however, seems to be that the price will range between 18 and 18½ cents for a time when the real buying movement begins.

United Railroads Reorganization.

It has been rumored persistently in the financial district that the two bondholders' committees of the United Railroads of San Francisco are about to reach an agreement on an amended plan for the reorganization of that company. It is reported that Mason B. Starring, President of the United States Railways Investment Company, is on his way to San Francisco, and that when he arrives there he will straighten out some small difficulties which have arisen, and held back the new plan.

Gillette Razor Earnings.

The Gillette Safety Razor Company had net earnings of $5,252,136 in the year ended Dec. 31 last, an increase of $648,354. This was equal to $32.95 per share of stock, before allowing for excess profits taxes. The report issued yesterday said that the company bought in the open market during the year $1,936,000 of the convertible 6 per cent. gold notes, while $734,500 par value of the notes was converted into stock, leaving $3,329,500 notes in the hands of the public. Since the end of the year further conversions and purchases have occurred until at present only $1,452,000 of the original $6,000,000 notes are outstanding.

Bond Prices and Economic Readjustments

It is generally agreed that commodity prices the world over must gradually seek lower levels.

It is therefore to be expected that there will be a consequent change in the quotations of conservative securities.

While there may be temporary fluctuations in security prices, it is our opinion that those who make investments now for a long period of years will eventually benefit.

SECRETARY GLASS TO MEET BANKERS

Expect Decision on Terms of Loan Before Return to Washington.

SEE NEED FOR TWO CLASSES

Wall Street Favors Division Into High Rate Taxable and Low Rate Nontaxable Bonds.

Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass is in New York today and is expected to remain until tomorrow afternoon. While here the Secretary, it is expected, will consult with members of the New York Liberty Loan Committee and with other local bankers, and there is a belief in financial circles that before he returns to Washington a general outline of the forthcoming Victory Liberty Loan, scheduled for flotation in the latter part of April, will be known to those who will have most to do with marketing the Government's bonds.

The Secretary, who arrived in New York last night, will visit the Federal Reserve Bank this morning, where he will see in operation the greatest of the Reserve banks which he did so much toward establishing. Mr. Glass, although the joint author of the Federal Reserve bill, has never been in the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and his tour of inspection of its many departments, especially that having to do with the collection and clearance of checks, is expected to occupy the whole forenoon.

Mr. Glass will be the guest at a luncheon at the Advertising Club, 47 East Twenty-fifth Street, and in the afternoon the local Liberty Loan Committee will hold a reception for him at the Hotel Biltmore, at which the members of the district committees will meet the Secretary. Following this, the foreign language press will meet the Secretary at a reception at the Murray Hill Hotel. Hans Rieg, Chief of the Foreign Language Division of the Treasury Department, will discuss the question of preparations for the forthcoming loan campaign with the foreign press proprietors.

In the evening Mr. Glass will be the guest at a dinner given by Governor Benjamin Strong, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and the officers and Directors of the bank at Sherry's.

Tomorrow at 11 o'clock the Secretary will address the newly appointed county Chairmen and other leaders in the War Savings Stamp movement in New York and New Jersey, at the Bankers' Club, 120 Broadway. Following that, at 12:30 o'clock, he will attend a luncheon in the club at which the editors and publishers of New York City newspapers will have an opportunity to meet him. In the late afternoon he is scheduled to leave for Washington.

May Discuss Terms of Loan.

While here, it is believed, Mr. Glass will go thoroughly into the Victory Loan problem. The recent request of the Secretary to Congress for extraordinary powers as to terms and conditions of the next offering will be talked over, and it is expected that the Secretary will hear many suggestions from bankers and bond experts here.

It is still widely believed here that the next loan will be of two classes—a low rate, tax-exempt bond to appeal to the wealthy subscribers, and a higher rated, taxable bond for popular consumption.

This idea seems to be generally entertained among bond men, and while there is fear that the tax exempt feature, if it attracted a large subscription, would hurt the tax program and cause a good deal of readjustment of taxable sources, there is also the belief that with personal taxes as heavy as they are now and as they promise to be, something of this sort will have to be offered if the Government is to receive the subscriptions which it must get if the loan offering is to be successful.

It is true that a similar offering of bonds in England was not a great success. Out of a total of something like $5,000,000,000 only a very small part represented subscriptions to the low rated, tax exempt securities, the great bulk of the subscriptions being for the higher rated taxable bonds. But bankers and bond men here feel that the British experience will not be our experience. In England, it is pointed out, the investing public, which was relatively much larger than ours before the war, had been educated to buy Government bonds on a strictly investment basis, while in this country our seasoned bond buyers have been educated to buy Government and State and municipal bonds not so much because of the apparent investment yield, but partly because of the extra attractions, such as tax exemptions, &c., which are usually attached to such securities.

WANT OPEN WOOL MARKET.

Association of Manufacturers Opposes War Industries Board Control.

The Executive Committee of the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers, headed by George B. Sanford, held a meeting recently at which these recommendations were adopted opposing the Government's regulation or control of the manufacture and sale of woolen and worsted goods through the War Industries Board:

Trading in wools, yarns, tops, noils, rags, reworked wools, and all waste stocks should be immediately freed from all governmental control and regulation.

Temporary, artificial, and arbitrary regulations of wool prices will cause suspension of business, stoppage of machinery, and unemployment of labor in all branches of the industry with their attendant evils.

It is essential in the unanimous opinion of the War Service Committee of the Wool Manufacturing Industry that a return to an open wool market should be effected with the least possible delay, and that wool in the possession of the Quartermaster's Department should be sold at public and unrestricted auction.

Group Insurance Increased.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society reports that group insurance to employes of corporations increased $80,000,000 during 1918, and payments to policy holders amounted to $65,000,000. On death claims $27,799,000 was distributed, $5,200,000 being paid out as the direct result of the influenza epidemic. The year brought an expansion in outstanding insurance and assets.

COTTON ADVANCE GENERAL.

Market Follows the Lead of Tuesday and Holds Gain Over Holiday.

Yesterday's cotton market followed the lead of that of Tuesday and enjoyed a general advance, reasonably free from besetting influences which might make for a resumption of the depression which has been so acute for several weeks. The opening after the holiday was good, prices being up a few points for near months and substantially advanced for new crop options. The trend thereafter, save for a rather sharp decline early in the afternoon, due almost entirely to profit-taking by ring traders and Wall Street houses which had bought merely for a turn, was upward and notwithstanding the professional selling shortly after midday the market held more than half of its early gains, finishing the day at 30 to 50 points improvement for the active months.

The Wednesday holiday, as it turned out, did not hurt the improvement in the market which started in the last hour of Monday and continued through Tuesday. Liverpool, which had been advancing while the local market was closed, came in somewhat better than expected yesterday morning, and it is worthy of note that even at the higher levels which this inspired Liverpool was a good buyer in our market. So was the South, and Wall Street houses, which have been favoring the short side for some weeks, were numbered among those who bought cotton yesterday. This latter buying appeared to be centred largely in the new crop position.

Of course, there was a good deal of short covering by the ring, which is always ready to run in whichever direction the market seems to be moving. This, beyond doubt, helped in the advance, but at the same time it weakened the technical position of the market, and those who have been following the trading of late were somewhat worried over this.

The general cotton situation was a little better yesterday. The labor situation in England seems working toward a compromise which, while it may not help England, will help consumption of American cotton. The same, in a general way, may be said of the textile situation here in America. This, it may be argued, is not good for the long run, but the market just now is interested chiefly in the day-to-day or week-to-week developments, and is not concerned with abstract economic problems.

The New Revenue Act, approved by both Houses of Congress, repeals all former Income Tax laws and levies greatly increased taxes on income. We have ready for immediate distribution an eight-page Summary of the Income Tax Law, containing charts and tables which appear in the Fifth Edition of our Income Tax Book now in preparation. This book contains the text of the Act and a comprehensive resume of its practical operation with index, tables and charts showing the amount of taxes on various incomes, together with a comparison of the rates levied under the previous Revenue Acts.

We shall be pleased to send a copy of this Summary of the New Income Tax Law to investors upon request, and, to those who desire it, shall later take pleasure in sending a copy of the Fifth Edition of our Income Tax Book as soon as it is ready for distribution.

We suggest you ask for Circular A-33.

Municipal Bonds Compared With Taxable Securities

Under the New Federal Income Tax Law taxable incomes must pay taxes varying in amount from 2% to 74%. In computing the yields from taxable securities it is necessary to deduct the taxes you will have to pay.

Municipal Bonds Are Exempt from all Federal Income Taxes

No certificate of ownership is necessary in collecting the coupons. The net income received from them is in many cases larger than that received from other taxable investments not so strongly secured.

A wide selection of Municipal Bonds yielding from 4.20% to 6% is contained in our

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Prices closed strong in an active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final quotations were around the high levels of the session and represented substantial advances. This was true especially of the industrials. Railroad stocks were reactionary at the close, due to the application for a temporary receivership for the New Haven. Speculative interest centred in the industrials.

TO THE HOLDERS OF

First Mortgage Sinking Fund 5% Gold Bonds

Due July 1, 1919

Over $8,800,000 or 80% of the $11,000,000 Bonds have been deposited under the Deposit Agreement dated October 10, 1918.

The Committee again calls attention to the fact that the proposed new issue of first mortgage bonds must be taken by the present bondholders, as the Company has found it impossible to effect an underwriting of the issue. Therefore, unless the plan becomes operative—and it can only be operative if deposits are made—it must fail and the bondholders will be faced with the uncertainty as to what the situation will be on July 1, 1919, when the present bonds mature.

The success of the plan is of such vital importance to the present bondholders that the Committee has extended the time for deposit of bonds. Deposits will be received by the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, Central Union Trust Company of New York, or Springfield Safe Deposit & Trust Company of Springfield, Mass., until the close of business on Thursday, February 20, 1919. No charge of any kind will be made to bondholders who deposit their bonds on or before said date. Deposited bonds must have the July 1, 1919, coupon attached. Negotiable Certificates of Deposit, listed on the New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, will be delivered by the Depositaries.

If the plan is declared operative, one of the immediate advantages to depositing bondholders will be the receipt of interest on July 1, 1919, at the rate of 7% against 5% on the present bonds, i. e. $35 instead of $25.

Copies of the Refunding Plan and of the Deposit Agreement may be obtained from either of the depositaries or from the Secretary of the Committee.

How to Invest $1,000 to Net $60 a Year

"I HAVE $1,000 to invest. Where can I place my money so that I can be assured of——complete safety of principal;
—prompt payment of interest in cash;
—protection against depreciation in value;
—freedom from care, worry, or management;
—six per cent interest?"

Such is the problem many investors are facing.

First mortgage serial bonds, safeguarded under the Straus Plan, solve all such problems. They meet each and every one of the above requirements. One thousand dollars, invested in these safe bonds, will yield $30 every six months—$60 a year. Five hundred dollars will yield $15 every six months. An investment of $5,000, netting $300 a year, may be so diversified as to yield $25 every month.

Write today for our literature telling how the Straus Plan has protected investors for 37 years without the loss of a dollar to any of our clients, and describing safe 6% investments. Ask for

INCOME TAX BLANKS SOON TO BE ISSUED

Bulky Sheet, Nearly Three Feet Long, Provided for Returns and Computations.

MOST QUESTIONS ARE CLEAR

Column Set Aside for Calculation of Wear, Tear, and Depreciation of Property.

In order to collect the revenue provided by the War Revenue bill, the Government will require every person with a taxable income to fill out and return to the office of the Collector of the district in which the person lives a blank form, on which the amount of taxable income must be computed, after all lawful deductions are made. These blanks may be obtained at the offices of Internal Revenue Collectors within the next few days.

Few persons will have any difficulty in answering without assistance the first twelve questions shown on the blank. When it comes to filling out the table that follows Question 13 and the table in which the tax is computed, some persons may need help before they can make correct answers. The taxpayer will find that the return blank is printed on both sides of a sheet, nearly three feet long, folded twice. The blank spaces on the front and back of the first page must be filled out and the page detached and sent to the Collector.

The second page, called the "work sheet," contains the same blanks to be filled out on both sides as are found on either side of the return blank. This "work sheet" is retained by the taxpayer, and it is advisable to fill this out first, so that any mistakes that may be made may be corrected in making out the form to be sent to the Collector. The third page of the form, also printed on both sides, contains instructions for the guidance of the taxpayer, and should be read with the reading of the form that goes to the Collector.

The letters "A," "E," and "I" are referred to in column 1 of the table under question 13 of the return blank. These mean the schedules under those letters to be found on page 2 of the instructions. The information called for in columns 2 to 5, inclusive, in the table under question 13 will be easily understood from the reading. When it comes to giving the rate asked for in column 6 of this table, under the heading, "Wear and tear (depreciation) and depletion charged off," this explanation may be helpful: The Department of Internal Revenue has a sort of amortization table in which the life of buildings and other property is estimated. The life of a modern skyscraper, constructed of steel and brick or stone, is estimated, for instance, to be fifty years, while that of a frame building is estimated at twenty years. The rate of wear and tear is determined by charging off each year a certain reasonable amount for depreciation, and dividing that by the cost of the property. The other columns in this table explain themselves.

Having filled out all the other blanks on the return form, the taxpayer finds near the bottom of the first page the heading "Calculation of Tax." This particular form, it must be borne in mind, is for the taxpayer having a net income of not more than $5,000. Of this amount, $1,000 of the income of a single man is exempt from taxation, and $2,000 of the income of a married man. Therefore, in this class of taxpayers there is left to be taxed, in the case of a single man, the difference between the amount of the exemption and the amount of the income, at the rate of 6 per cent. In the case of a married man he will pay a tax on the difference between the exemption of $2,000 and the remainder of the income, at the same rate. Every married man must make a return if his income equals or exceeds $2,000, and every single man must do the same thing if his income equals or exceeds $1,000.

Then, to calculate the tax, the taxpayer should add all of the deductions to which he is entitled, subtract the sum from his total income and the difference will be the amount on which he will have to pay a 6 per cent. tax. If the taxpayer be a farmer, there is a special provision in the list of instructions. The farmer must obtain from his collector and fill out a "schedule of farm income and expenses" and transfer the net farm income set down on this special schedule to line 21 of Schedule A on page 2 of the return sent to the collector.

The taxpayer whose income exceeds $4,000 and does not exceed $5,000 must make the return on Form 1040, instead of the form here described, which is Form 1040 A, if the entire family exemption has been claimed in a separate return by either the wife or the husband. He must use Form 1040, also if Form 1040 A does not provide for all the facts he has to report as, for example, if he receives income from a partnership or personal service corporation with a fiscal year falling partly in 1917 and partly in 1918.

PROPOSALS.

OFFICE OF COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC FINANCES OF THE CITY OF NEW ORLEANS.

CITY HALL.
New Orleans, Feb. 3rd, 1919.

C. S., approved May 14, 1912, and Ordinance No. 5316, Commission Council Series, approved January 28th, 1919, of said city, authorizing the present offering.

Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to-wit:

Proposals must be in writing, sealed, and marked on the outside of the envelope "Proposals for the purchase of $600,000.00 of Public Belt Railroad Bonds of the City of New Orleans," and shall be accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans, for an amount equal to one per cent. of the aggregate amount of the bid, which said check of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the City of New Orleans as a guarantee that the successful bidder or bidders will comply with its or their bids, and the said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to the successful bidder or bidders, respectively. In case of the neglect or refusal to comply with any bid, the proceeds of said check shall be forfeited to the Public Belt Railroad Commission of the City of New Orleans.

All matured interest coupons shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery. The bonds shall be paid for in cash as fast as said bonds can be signed and delivered. All bonds will be delivered within thirty days from the opening of said bids. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

Further particulars and information will be furnished on application to the Public Belt Railroad Commission or the undersigned. The final opinion of Wood & Oakley, lawyers, Chicago, Ill., as to the legality of this issue will be furnished to the successful bidder if so desired.

Commissioner of Public Finances of the City of New Orleans.

ASSAILS HOLMAN'S CHARITY.

Forfeiture of Golden Rule Alliance Charter Asked in Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 13.—Forfeiture of the charter and franchise of the Golden Rule Alliance of America, a New Jersey Corporation with headquarters in New York Clay, is asked in proceedings brought today by the State Charities Board which alleges that $17,214 of a $19,580 fund collected by the alliance through public subscriptions has been expended in overhead expense and "in other ways not accounted for." Complaint is also made that contributions were solicited ostensibly for the benefit of the blind but that "the scheme, so far as the home for blind girls is concerned, is a failure, and to permit it to continue any longer would be a fraud and a deceit upon the public."

It is further charged that the Rev. Edwin C. Holman of New York appears to be conducting the affairs of the corporation virtually as a private enterprise.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 18,873 cases. Advices indicate large shipments in transit, country markets are lower, and there are free offerings in carload lots on track. The tendency of the market is strongly downward. The tone is weak, however, and a further decline is expected as soon as arrivals at all exceed the urgent needs of the market. White eggs share in the decline, but to a less extent. There is, however, a more liberal supply of nearby white eggs arriving, and the tone is weak at present quotations. REAL ESTATE FIELD

Speculative buying by well-known operators was a strong feature of yesterday's realty market. In the lower Broadway section Frederick Brown, operator, purchased through Charles F. Noyes Company, the eleven-story fireproof building at 474-476 Broadway, extending through the block to 38 Crosby Street, covering a plot of 7,500 square feet.

The building is a comparatively new structure, and in 1902 was mortgaged for $425,000 to one of the large insurance companies. The property is valued at $475,000. Commenting on the purchase, Mr. Brown said: "The property could not be duplicated for less than $500,000. I believe Broadway ground is worth $50,000 a lot and buildings of this type will be more in demand, in my opinion, than any other class of New York City real estate."

Investor Buys Taxpayer.

A two-story taxpayer, 25 by 98.9, at 154 West Twenty-ninth Street, was sold by Henry Brady for the New York Title and Insurance Company to I. Roth, for investment. The property was acquired by the seller at foreclosure in December, 1917, at the stand of Mr. Brady.

Sales in Heights Section.

The Allview, a five-story twenty-family apartment house, on a plot 50 by 100, at 707 and 709 West 170th Street, was sold by Ennis & Sinnott, Inc., to the H. & M. Building Company, (James Murray President.) The building, which was held at $75,000 and rents for $9,000, was built by the Michael J. Martin Company, which exchanged it early in the month for a plot 50 by 100 on 141st Street, near Broadway.

Buys Dyckman Flats.

Frederick Brown sold to Max Just the five-story new-law apartment, on plot 50 by 100, at 57 Vermilyea Avenue, just north of Academy Street. The property, held at $70,000, was sold through Knap & Wasson.

East Harlem Dwelling Sold.

Arthur Halla bought the three-story brownstone dwelling on lot 15 by 100 at 127 East 123d Street from Helen M. Fanning for occupancy. George W. Brettell made the sale.

Tenement Deals.

The Courtney Development Company (Bryan L. Kennelly) sold the four-story and basement tenement with store on lot 25 by 100 at 342 East 110th Street to a client of Leon S. Altmayer.

Charles Galewski Company, Inc., has purchased from Day MacDonald Company the five-story apartment house on lot 32 by 100 at 259 West 112th Street. The property has a rent roll of $5,000 and was held at $35,000. James McCacheu was the broker.

Speculative Buying in the Bronx.

Operators were unusually busy in the Bronx yesterday when a number of sales that have been pending since the first of the week were closed. The largest transaction marked the second purchase in the east Bronx within a week by S. Morrill Banner, an old-time operator, recently returned to the speculative market.

The deal involved the properties 952 to 992 Tiffany Street, eleven modern 40-foot five-story apartment houses, held at $350,000. They were sold to Mr. Banner by the Usona Construction Company, which built the houses on land acquired from the American Real Estate Company.

The structures occupy a combined frontage of 440 feet and are 104 feet in depth, and return an annual rental of $60,000. Last week Mr. Banner purchased four 40-foot apartment houses on Longwood Avenue, formerly belonging to the George F. Johnson estate. Leitner, Brener & Starr were the brokers.

H. C. Erskine sold to Charles Wynne, operator, a five-story apartment house on lot 50 by 37 at 1,320 and 1,331 Clinton Avenue, adjoining McKinley Square. This property was taken in by the seller under foreclosure of a $40,000 mortgage in 1914. Kessler & Levy were the brokers.

The two five-story fifty-foot apartment houses on plot 100 by 97 by irregular at the northwest corner of Morris Avenue and 181st Street were bought by Max Cohen of the former operating firm of Cohen & Glauber. The buildings, which house twenty families each, were held at $115,000. Max Blau made the sale.

Frederick Brown purchased the five-story fifty-foot apartment, housing twenty families, at 2,390 Creston Avenue, near 184th Street, from the G. R. S. Building Company. The deal, which was a cash one, was negotiated by William R. Lowe.

Morris Zeramer bought for cash from the Benenson Realty Company the five-story apartment, 50 by 100, valued at $50,000, at 1,429 Bryant Avenue.

Willy Ehrenhaus resold to the Hudwill Realty Company (Hudson P. Rose, President) a two-story frame and stone residence on lot 20 by 100, at 621 Mead Street, through E. A. Polak & Holmes. The Hudwill Company immediately resold to an Italian investor. Mr. Ehrenhaus only acquired the property last Friday in a trade for a residence in Yonkers.

The three five-story apartment houses at 1,532, 1,536, and 1,540 Seabury Place, adjoining the southeast corner of Boston Road, were sold by Bernard Crausman, President of the Rosen-Craus Realty Company to a client of Heller & Sussman. The houses have an annual rental of $22,000 and were held at $130,000.

The Benenson Realty Company operators bought from the Anita Realty Company the two five-story apartment houses at 333 and 339 East 146th Street each on a plot 50 by 152, the houses being built 100 feet deep, between Courtlandt and College Avenues. They were held at $120,000, and return an annual rental of $13,000.

Morris Polsky sold to an investing client of Schoen & Weiss the six-story tenement, 348 Powers Avenue, for cash. The building houses thirty-five tenants who pay an annual rental of $9,000, and was held at $60,000. Benjamin Antin represented the seller as attorney.

The Isaac Lowenfeld Realty Corporation, Isaac Lowenfeld, President, bought the five-story new-law apartment house, on plot 68 by 100, at 265 East 181st Street, northwest corner of Valentine Avenue, from the Susskind Holding Company. The building contains twenty-five apartments and two stores, with an annual rent roll of $13,000, and was held at $95,000. S. Rosen was the broker.

Brooklyn.

A plot 40 by 100 on Seventh Street, between Second and Third Avenues, was sold to Cevasco, Cavagnaro & Ambretti by Meister Builders, Inc. The land adjoins the company's factory on Sixth Street, built two years ago by the sellers in the present deal.

Queens Borough.

Ethel Basil bought from the First National Bank of Jamaica, a two-story brick dwelling, on plot 25 by 115, at 206 Union Hall Street, Jamaica. A. G. Thompson & Co. negotiated the case.

Commercial Leases.

The four-story building at 1,679 Broadway was leased for a term of forty years for John N. Golding, represented by Dean, Stanfield & Tracy, attorneys, by Herbert Hecht & Co.

The Nathan Novelty Support Company has leased the entire seventeenth floor at 53 and 55 Fifth Avenue, corner of Twelfth Street, for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $100,000. The transaction was negotiated by the M. Rosenthal Company for Charles O'Connor, agent.

The Allied Machinery Company of America has leased the entire eighth floor of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank Building at 51 Chambers Street for a term of years for an aggregate rental of about $150,000. The transaction was made by Frederick Southack & Alwyn Ball, Jr., in conjunction with Thomas J. O'Reilly, agent for the building.

George W. Mercer & Son, in conjunction with William H. McDonald, have leased for a term of years the property 511 to 519 West Twenty-first Street, and 510 to 514 West Twenty-second Street, plot containing 20,000 square feet, upon which the owner will erect a two-story garage for commercial purposes, contract for which has been given out. The total rent involved is over $400,000.

Realty Notes.

Columbia University will build a frame recreation building, 80 by 39, to cost $10,000, for lease to the Y. M. C. A., at the northwest corner of Gun Hill Road and Bainbridge Avenue.

A first mortgage of $17,000 at 5¼ per cent. for a term of years was negotiated on the modern six-story tenement, on plot 43.6 by 100.11, at 519 and 521 East 117th Street, by Leon S. Altmayer and H. Sugarman.

ARREST LUSTGARTEN IN U.S. ARMY UNIFORM

Head of Tax Lien Co., Whose Hat Was Found in River After Failure, Taken in France.

ENLISTED IN 1917 AS 'ALLEN'

First Recognized in Washington—Succeeded by Transfers in Long Escaping Detection.

William Lustgarten, who after the wreck of the Tax Lien Company of New York disappeared on Aug. 16, 1917, leaving the impression that he would commit suicide, is returning to this country from France in custody of the military police under the name of Sergeant William H. Wilson of the 309th Engineers to face the charge of grand larceny, according to word received yesterday by District Attorney Swann.

Shortly after his disappearance, when his creditors and the police were theorizing on the basis of a hat of his found floating in the harbor, Lustgarten enlisted, using the name of Allen, at Leavenworth, Kan.

He served at various posts, escaping identification until last Summer in Washington, where he was assigned on account of his education and legal ability to the Historical Bureau of the War Department. He was recognized by two young women in the service of the Navy Department who had formerly lived at Pearl River, N. Y., where Lustgarten had for several years maintained a Summer home. One of them spoke to him in a restaurant, calling him "Mr. Lustgarten." He responded to the name, hesitatingly recalled his acquaintance with the young women and left the restaurant, saying as little as possible.

Word that he was alive and in uniform speedily got around and finally reached his creditors, but by the time District Attorney Swann learned of it Lustgarten had obtained a transfer which was succeeded by other transfers, by means of which Lustgarten for months kept a little ahead of those who were tracing him, until he was finally identified in France.

His arrest in the uniform of a soldier was no surprise to his creditors or others who had dealt with his affairs. So little did the receiver of his concern think of the chance of recovering anything on insurance of $150,000 on his life in favor of the company, that they accepted the return of the premiums and cancelled the policies. F. C. Leubuscher, who was appointed receiver immediately after the failure of the company, said yesterday:

"Lustgarten was a lawyer and knew that no insurance could be collected except on proof of the corpus delicti. It was certain that, if he were going to kill himself as he said, so that others might benefit by the insurance, he would not have drowned himself. This and the fact that no trace of a body was found was pretty conclusive proof that he had no intention of committing suicide and there was not the slightest ground for an insurance claim."

Lustgarten's losses were sustained in real estate speculations. After his firm had been put into the hands of a receiver, the accountants found the books badly mutilated, but they were able to establish evidence of such a character that Lustgarten was indicted on a charge of grand larceny in December. The liabilities of his company at the time of his disappearance amounted to $800,000. The tangible assets were very small, but it was said yesterday that prolonged search of his books failed to account in any way for about $400,000. Lustgarten, it was said, was probably the only man living who could give an explanation of the fate of this sum. The creditors expect that Lustgarten will make use of his supposed ability to deliver missing assets to the receiver in connection with a plea for leniency.

Lustgarten left a wife when he disappeared, but she recently went to Europe. She was questioned before she sailed and said she had not received any communication from her husband since his departure. For a time since her husband's disappearance she has acted as secretary to Mrs. Mary Fels, widow of Joseph Fels.

Several of those who had entrusted Lustgarten with large sums for investment were heavy losers by the crash of his firm. Among these were Frank L. Montague, $90,500; Robert Schalkenberg, $72,000, and John Martin, $43,000.

Lustgarten had been active in politics since 1910, when he was a supporter of ex-Mayor Gaynor. In 1915, he formed the Loyal American League, which was largely a paper organization, its object being to eradicate the "hyphen" from German Americans. He was active in the last Presidential campaign in support of President Wilson.

Olympic Mistaken for Mauretania.

A picture of what purported to be the Cunard liner Mauretania was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES rotogravure section last Sunday. When the original photograph was received from England it was labeled Mauretania and was passed as the Mauretania by the British censor. It has been learned since that the picture was of the White Star liner Olympic.

FINDS 10,000 BAGS OF DECAYED ONIONS

SLIGHT ADVANCE IN MEATS

Glen Falls Distributers Forced to Sell Grade B Milk at 13 Cents a Quart.

Commissioner of Public Markets Jonathan C. Day announced yesterday that following receipt of an anonymous letter telling that a great quantity of onions had been on Pier 17, near the foot of Reade Street, for nearly two weeks, an investigation by his department resulted in the discovery of more than 10,000 bags, each containing about 100 pounds, making a total of more than 1,000,000 pounds of onions. Some of the onions, he said, were reported by B. F. Byrd, Secretary of the department, who made the investigation, to be decayed and sprouting.

Commissioner Day said that it was the opinion of Mr. Byrd that the onions had been held there to help influence a scarcity on the market and in this way keep up prices. He said last night that he did not know to whom the onions belonged.

The price list of food commodities given out yesterday by Commissioner Day shows that meats are advancing slightly in price, due, the Commissioner explained, to the fact that the packers do not have to sell, and also because they are sending much of their product abroad. The price of eggs and butter remains about the same.

Milk distributers of Glens Falls, N. Y., have lowered the price of Grade B, bottled milk, to the consumer from 15 cents to 13 cents a quart as the result of a hearing in that city recently by the special committee of the State Council of Farms and Markets, said Commissioner Day. The hearing, he said, brought out the fact that the dairy farmers in 1918 sold their milk to the Glens Falls distributers at an average price of 5¼ cents a quart, while the distributers for the first nine months received 12 cents a quart and 15 cents a quart for the remaining three months. In accordance with a suggestion of the committee, the distributers agreed to restore the price of 13 cents a quart for February and March, with the prospect of a further reduction in April. The dairy farmers are members of the Dairymen's League.

Commissioner Day left last night for Syracuse to attend a hearing by the committee today and tomorrow, and on Monday and Tuesday a hearing will be held at Binghamton.

EX-CAPTAIN HELD FOR BRIBE

Former Army Officer Accued of Taking $250 for a Discharge.

Indicted by a Federal Grand Jury on a charge of having accepted a $250 bribe to obtain a Sergeant's release from the army, ex-Captain Sidney P. Corn, formerly of the Personnel Office, Camp Upton, was held in $10,000 bail when arraigned before Judge Chatfield in the Federal Court in Brooklyn yesterday.

Lloyd Mehlig is the former noncommissioned officer making the complaint. To the Federal authorities in New York he alleged that while he was still in the army he paid Corn, then a Captain, $250 for his discharge. He received his discharge the next day, he alleges.

DROP FREIGHT EMBARGO.

Administration Cancels Restrictions on Manhattan and the Bronx.

The domestic freight embargo, which had been in effect as a war measure against shipments to Manhattan Island and the Bronx for more than a year, was canceled last night. The change goes into effect tomorrow. The Railroad Administration issued this order:

Eastern Region,
New York, Feb. 13, 1919.

To the Federal, General, and Terminal Managers:

Please cancel, effective Feb. 15, 1919, the embargoes placed as a war emergency Jan. 18, 1918, against carload domestic freight for Manhattan Island, the Bronx—New York City—and station deliveries on New York Harbor, including Brooklyn terminal companies, which freight is now being moved under F. P. C. permits, issued by the Freight Traffic Committee, North Atlantic Port. Effective as above, such freight may move without permit, subject to embargoes of the delivering railroads. No change will be made in the method of permitting export carload freights for the present and carload domestic freight must not be accepted for other than regular station deliveries. Reconsignment for export or lighterage deliveries will not be allowed. Kindly acknowledge receipt.

A. H. SMITH,
Regional Director, Eastern Region.
C. H. MARKHAM,
Regional Director, Allegany Region.

The removal of the embargo, by doing away with the need for permits, will facilitate the rapid movement of freight throughout the city.

BEGIN $950,000 WILL FIGHT.

A contest of the will of Mrs. Harriet A. Curtis, who died on Jan. 23, aged 87 years, was filed in the Surrogates' Court yesterday by three granddaughters, on the ground that when the decedent executed her will giving property estimated at $950,000 to two lawyers and their families, she was not of sound mind. The lawyers who are alleged to have influenced Mrs. Curtis to make the will in their favor are C. La Rue Munson of Williamsport, Penn., and James E. Burr of Scranton, Penn.

O'LEARYS HERE 100 YEARS.

Jeremiah Got Recruits for War Also, Brother Tells Jury in Defense.

Picturing Jeremiah O'Leary as an idealist, who had no desire to injure his country, Arthur O'Leary, of the counsel for his brother, in his opening address to the jury yesterday declared that the defense would show among other things that O'Leary had induced many young men to serve in the army in the war against Germany. The defense rested at the close of the morning session. Federal Judge Hand in chambers denied a motion to dismiss the indictments against the defendant, charging him with violation of the Espionage act. Permission was given to O'Leary's counsel to renew the motion at the close of the defendant's case.

Arthur O'Leary dwelt on the ancestry of the defendant which he said dated back in the United States more than a hundred years. He spoke of what he called early historical influences which he said had resulted in his brother's anti-British stand. Finally he spoke of the fact that O'Leary had twenty-two relatives, three of whom were brothers, in the European war. The trial will be continued today.

Scott Nearing occupied the witness stand all day yesterday at the continuation of his trial before Federal Judge Julius Mayer and a jury on a charge of attempting to obstruct the draft. He was examined at length by Seymour Stedman, his chief counsel, on statements appearing in "The Great Madness," one of several books written by Nearing, on which the complaint was based. The greater part of the morning session was used up by the witness in explaining his idea of the word "plutocrat," which frequently appeared in the pages of "The Great Menace." In order to get his idea of the word before the jury, Nearing produced a chart, which he declared showed the "trustification" of the United States. He also quoted long excerpts from authors who had written on the subject.

He was asked by Assistant United States District Attorney Earl Barnes what he meant by "the preposterous phrase, armed neutrality." He explained he meant that in reality there was no such thing as armed neutrality, therefore the idea of it seemed to him preposterous. Nearing, who is his own best witness, quoted Daniel Webster as being opposed to conscription along with other public men of the present day whom he named. The trial will be resumed today.

An Apology

Wednesday, our service to Wallach Customers did not come up to the Wallach standard.

Our four stores were so crowded that at times it was impossible to give the individual attention which our Customers have learned to expect.

It was even necessary to close the doors for nearly two hours in order to restore some degree of order to our stocks, and to serve those already in the stores.

We offer sincere apologies to those who were inconvenienced either by our difficulty in serving them, or by the unavoidable wait outside our stores.

Our only excuse is the unusual value of the Hart Schaffner & Marx Suits and Overcoats which we offer for $23.50.

WILSON PRESENTS WORLD LEAGUE PLAN TO CONFERENCE; PROVIDES FOR ARBITRATION AND REDUCED ARMAMENTS WITH 'ARMED FORCE IN BACKGROUND, ONLY AS LAST RESORT'

PREPARED TO PASS BILL PERMITTING BEER AND WINES

Republican Leaders in Legislature Now Inclined to Construe Prohibition Liberally.

SAY THEY HAVE THE VOTES

HEED LABOR'S PROTEST, TOO

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 14.—The Republican leaders in the Legislature are preparing not only to resist the attempt of the Anti-Saloon League to put through a prohibition enforcement statute under the constitutional amendment which would make this State the dryest of bone-dry territory, but also to enact a measure which would sanction the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines.

The leaders have taken a secret poll of the Assembly. This, it is said, shows that twelve Assemblymen who voted for ratification have experienced a change of heart and declare their intention to support the program of the leaders.

A few of these recruits are converts. Others before they were elected were compelled to pledge support of the Federal amendment. Believing that with their affirmative vote on that measure they have discharged their obligation to constituents they have concluded to go no farther in support of the projects of William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon League.

When ratification of the amendment came up for final action in the Assembly the vote stood 81 to 66 in favor of ratification. A change of twelve votes, therefore, would give the opponents of the bone-dry bill 78 votes and leave the advocates of the League bill four short of the necessary majority of 76.

Undoubtedly angry outpouring of sentiment on the part of constituents who felt that they should have been afforded an opportunity to vote on the amendment has had something to do with the changed attitude of the leaders. But even more important factors are assurances received within the last forty-eight hours by the leaders that the next Congress, which will be under Republican control, will leave it to the several States to interpret for themselves the intent and scope of the Federal amendment.

Enforcement as Partisan Issue.

These assurances came to Speaker Sweet of the Assembly through a channel that for all practical purposes gave them the weight of an official communication. The important personage who was bearer of the message told the Speaker that the action in Congress which led to the Federal amendment being submitted to the several States was regarded by the Republicans, who will control the next Congress, as having had its origin in the dry and Democratic South, and that the Republicans were prepared to meet any partisan issue that might be made, should the Republican Congress fail to enact any statute for the enforcement of the amendment, which gives to the States "concurrent" power with Congress in framing legislation to enforce it.

Before these assurances had been received, the leaders had been puzzled over the action of the Anti-Saloon League in preparing and presenting its bone dry bill to the Legislature. The leaders had been led to believe from talks with spokesmen for the league that, instead of fighting for enforcement statutes before the Legislatures of the several States, they would make one job of it in Congress. The leaders felt that by launching opposition to the enforcement bill they would merely expose themselves to attack by Anti-Saloon League leaders and not accomplish anything real, since what was done at Albany might be undone at Washington. Since hearing from Washington, however, they are in a different frame of mind.

A large majority of the lawmakers—in fact, all exception a handful in each house—are at heart "loose" constructionists of the Eighteenth Amendment. They favor the enactment of a measure that would give legal sanction, by defining them as non-intoxicants, to the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines. Some believe in such a measure as a wise expedient, since organized labor has voiced opposition to a narrow construction. There is no doubt that the position labor organizations have taken has impressed the Republican leaders, who have absorbed the

Allies Demand Delivery of a German Long-Range Gun

COBLENZ, Feb. 14, (Associated Press.)—The Allies have taken steps to gain possession of one of the long-range guns which the Germans used to fire upon Paris. The Interallied Commission at Spa has made demands upon the German Delivering Commission that a long-range gun be included in the war material which the Germans are turning over to the Allies.

All the German officers whom the American officials have questioned regarding the long-range guns have asserted that all the crews who were assigned to the task of handling the "Big Berthas" were sworn to secrecy, and ever since the armistice was signed little has been known regarding the fate of these monster weapons. Recent reports were to the effect that one of the "Big Berthas" had been dismantled in West Prussia, while another report from a discharged soldier said that a long-range cannon had been seen on railway cars near Essen.

2 DARING HOLDUPS IN DAYLIGHT IN CITY

Madison Avenue Jewelry Store Robbed at Pistol Point of $5,000 in Diamonds.

U. S. Paymaster Arrested on Plot Charge After Taxicab Is Held Up.

Two daring daylight hold ups topped the list of criminal happenings in this city yesterday. One of them was the robbery of a jewelry store in Madison Avenue, near the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, in which $5,000 worth of jewelry was taken. While attempting to escape one of the two bandits was struck on the head with a hammer and is now in Bellevue Hospital with a fractured skull. An onlooker was shot and seriously injured.

The second robbery was the hold up of a taxicab on a crowded street in Brooklyn. Three paymasters of the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation told the police that a handbag, containing $12,000 in bills and silver, was taken from them.

James Graham, Jr., was near the front of the jewelry store of Clapp & Graham, 420 Madison Avenue, early yesterday afternoon, when two men with nothing about them to mark them as other than honest customers entered. As Graham went forward one of them drew a revolver and pointing it at him ordered him to walk without turning around to the rear of the store and to stand there where they could see him.

While Graham was obeying the order and the robber behind the gun was seeing that he did so, the other went to the show window and grabbed a diamond and platinum necklace worth $4,000 and a $1,000 diamond bracelet. Still keeping the clerk covered they backed from the store, and started running across Forty-eighth Street. On their heels came Howard Reed, the negro porter, shouting "Stop thief!"

Struck Down by Chauffeur.

The fugitives ran down Forty-eighth Street with an ever-growing crowd behind them. In Fifth Avenue they ran south, then back to Madison Avenue, through Forty-seventh Street. Hundreds had taken up the cry, "Stop thief!" Down Forty-sixth Street ran the men, and in front of the Ritz-Carlton the

Hitchcock Praises Covenant as "Greatest International Document."

REPUBLICAN LEADERS MUM

HOUSE MEMBERS APPROVE

Several Republicans Join Democrats in Expressing Satisfaction with Paris Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The American Senate, which, under the Constitution, is the particular branch of the Government that shares the treaty-making power with the President, tonight refused to take snap judgment on the Paris covenant for a League of Nations.

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, head of the powerful Committee on Foreign Relations, with a tenure of only seventeen days remaining, who some time after March 4 will relinquish that post to Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, was the only Senator of importance who was willing to discuss the terms of the covenant for publication. The attitude of the Senate was almost painfully noncommittal, one of almost complete silence. It was a situation in which no Senator other than Mr. Hitchcock cared to make a definite statement, for the very simple reason that the Senate prefers to make up its mind in its own way and time and to hear from the nation on the project.

Senator Hitchcock has been a stanch advocate of the project for a League of Nations and was very favorably impressed with the provisions centring power in an executive council from nine nations, five of which will be the present allied powers. He looks upon the proposed league as being neither a "monster" nor a "sewing circle" and considers this draft of the covenant "the greatest international document ever produced."

Republican Senators Reticent.

Senator Lodge, Knox, and Borah, all of whom have declared in speeches their conviction that "the formation of a League of Nations should follow the framing of a practical treaty of peace, refused point blank to comment on the League covenant. Although Republicans would not admit it, there was unmistakable evidence of concerted action on their part in opposition to expressions of opinion pending careful study of the project. They want to gauge the reception of the project by the country and carefully to assess the extent to which the American Government would be committed before going on record.

They wish to ascertain its bearing on the future of the Monroe Doctrine, the extent to which the American Government would be bound to go to war on issues of vital national consequence following futile resort to diplomacy, and the degree to which the American people would be sacredly bound by the League to furnish men, money, and material in support of attempts by the League to enforce its decrees in other parts of the world not contiguous to the American Hemisphere.

Senator Hitchcock was the only member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who would discuss the matter at all. Senators Lodge, Borah, and Knox are all members of this commit-

President Wilson Starts at Night for Brest; Clemenceau Congratulates Him at Station

PARIS, Feb. 14.—President Wilson left the Murat Mansion at 9:05 o'clock this evening for the invalides railway station to take the train for Brest on the first stage of his journey home. He was escorted by a detachment of the Republican Guard.

President Poincare, Premier Clemenceau, the entire French Cabinet, Jules J. Jusserand, French Ambassador at Washington, General Pershing, and scores of other notables had gathered at the station to wish Mr. Wilson farewell. The station was decorated with palms and flowers and the President's luxurious special train was brilliant with bouquets, presented to Mrs. Wilson.

The approaches to the train were carpeted and on each side stood detachments of the Republican Guard, standing at attention. As the Presidential party entered the cars, the band played the "Marseillaise."

Premier Clemenceau was especially cordial in his farewell, congratulating President Wilson upon his achievements and wishing him a safe return.

The President was accompanied to Brest, where he will board the George Washington, by Georges Leygues, French Minister of Marine; Captain André Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, and M. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States.

The Americans in the party comprise David R. Francis, Ambassador to Russia; White House employes, Secret Service men, the 300 soldiers who formed the guard around the Murat residence, Representatives George White of Ohio and P. D. Norton of North Dakota, and the representatives of three news associations. It numbers 319 persons.

All the accommodations of the liner will be utilized, for, not only will every cabin and stateroom be occupied, but also the steerage and hold will be filled with several thousand American soldiers who are going home.

President Comments as He Reads Draft of League and Illustrates With Hypothetical Questions

PARIS, Feb. 14.—President Wilson's speech at the Peace Conference at the reading of the draft of the Constitution of the League of Nations follows:

"Mr. Chairman: I have the honor, and assume it a very great privilege, of reporting in the name of the commission constituted by this conference on the formulation of a plan for the League of Nations. I am happy to say that it is a unanimous report, a unanimous report from the representatives of fourteen nations—the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Brazil, China, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, and Serbia.

"I think it will be serviceable and interesting if I, with your permission, read the document, as the only report we have to make."

President Wilson then read the draft. When he reached Article XV. and had read through the second paragraph, the President paused and said:

"I pause to point out that a misconception might arise in connection with one of the sentences I have just read—'If any party shall refuse to comply, the Council shall propose measures necessary to give effect to the recommendations.'

"A case in point, a purely hypothetical case, is this: Suppose there is in the possession of a particular power a piece of territory, or some other substantial thing in dispute, to which it is claimed that it is not entitled. Suppose that the matter is submitted to the Executive Council for recommendation as to the settlement of the dispute, diplomacy having failed, and suppose that the decison is in favor of the party which claims the subject matter of dispute, as against the party which has the subject matter in dispute.

"Then, if the party in possession of the subject matter in dispute merely sits still and does nothing, it has accepted the decision of the Council in the sense that it makes no resistance, but something must be done to see that it surrenders the subject matter in dispute.

"In such a case, the only case contemplated, it is provided that the Executive Council may then consider what steps will be necessary to oblige the party against whom judgment has been given to comply with the decisions of the Council."

Cites a Case for Use of Force.

After having read Article XIX. President Wilson also stopped and said:

"Let me say that before being embodied in this document this was the subject matter of a very careful discussion by representatives of the five greater parties, and that their unanimous conclusion is the matter embodied in this article."

After having read the entire document, President Wilson continued as follows:

"It gives me pleasure to add to this formal reading of the result of our labors that the character of the discussion which occurred at the sittings of the commission was not only of the most constructive but of the most encouraging sort. It was obvious throughout our discussions that, although there were subjects upon which there were individual differences of judgment with regard to the method by which our objects should be obtained, there was practically at no point any serious differences of opinion or motive as to the objects which we were seeking.

"Indeed, while these debates were not made the opportunity for the expression of enthusiasm and sentiment, I think the other members of the commission will agree with me that there was an undertone of high respect and of enthusiasm for the thing we were trying to do, which was heartening throughout every meeting, because we felt that in a way this conference did intrust unto us the expression of one of its highest and most important purposes, to see to it that the concord of the world in the future with regard to the objects of justice should not be subject to doubt or uncertainty, that the co-operation of the great body of nations should be assured in the maintenance of peace upon terms of honor and of international obligations.

"The compulsion of that task was constantly upon us, and at no point was there shown the slightest desire to do anything but suggest the best means to accomplish that great object. There is very great significance, therefore, in the fact that the result was reached unanimously.

Union of Wills That Cannot be Resisted.

"Fourteen nations were represented, among them all of those powers which for convenience we have called the great powers, and among the rest a representation of the greatest variety of circumstances and interests. So that I think we are justified in saying that the significance of the result, therefore, has the deepest of all meanings, the union of wills in a common purpose, a union of wills which cannot be resisted, and which, I dare say, no nation will run the risk of attempting to resist.

"Now as to the character of the document. While it has consumed some time to read this document, I think you will see at once that it is very simple, and in nothing so simple as in the structure which it suggests for a League of Nations—a body of delegates, an Executive Council, and a permanent secretariat.

"When it came to the question of determining the character of the representation in the body of delegates, we were all aware of a feeling which is current throughout the world. Inasmuch as I am stating it in the presence of the official representatives of the various Governments here present, including myself, I may say that there is a universal feeling that the world cannot rest satisfied with merely official guidance. There has reached us through many channels the feeling that if the deliberating body of the League of Nations was merely to be a body of officials representing the various Governments, the peoples of the world would not be sure that some of the mistakes which preoccupied officials had admittedly made might not be repeated.

"It was impossible to conceive a method or an assembly so large and various as to be really representative of the great body of the peoples of the world, because, as I roughly reckon it, we represent, as we sit around this table, more than twelve hundred million people. You cannot have a representative assembly of twelve hundred million people, but if you leave it to each Government to have, if it pleases, one or two or three representatives, though only with a single vote, it may vary its representation from time to time, not only, but it may [originate] the choice of its several representatives. [Wireless here unintelligible.]

"Therefore, we thought that this was a proper and a very prudent concession to the practically universal opinion of plain men everywhere that they wanted the door left open to a variety of representation, instead of being confined to a single official body with which they could or might not find themselves in sympathy.

Provision for Discussion.

"And you will notice that this body has unlimited rights of discussion—I mean of discussion of anything that falls within the field of international relations—and that it is especially agreed that war or international misunderstandings, or anything that may lead to friction or trouble, is everybody's business, because it may affect the peace of the world.

"And in order to safeguard the popular power so far as we could of this representative body, it is provided, you will notice, that when a subject is submitted, it is not to arbitration, but to discussion by the Executive Council. It can, upon the initiative of either of the parties to the dispute, be drawn out of the Executive Council into the larger forum of the general body of delegates, because through this instrument we are depending primarily and chiefly upon one great force, and this is the moral force of the public opinion of the world—the pleasing and clarifying and compelling influences of publicity, so that intrigues can no longer have their coverts, so that designs that are sinister can at any time be drawn into the open, so that those things that are destroyed by the light may be promptly destroyed by the overwhelming light of the universal expression of the condemnation of the world.

"Armed force is in the background in this program, but it is in the background, and if the moral force of the world will not suffice, the physical force of the world shall. But that is the last resort, because this is intended as a constitution of peace, not as a league of war.

"The simplicity of the document seems to me to be one of its chief virtues, because, speaking for myself, I was unable to see the variety of circumstances with which this League would have to deal, I was unable, therefore, to plan all the machinery that might be necessary to meet the differing and unexpected contingencies. Therefore, I should say of this document that it is not a straitjacket, but a vehicle of life.

A Living Thing Is Born.

"A living thing is born, and we must see to it what clothes we put on it. It is not a vehicle of power, but a vehicle in which power may be varied at the discretion of those who exercise it and in accordance with the changing circumstances of the time. And yet, while it is elastic, while it is general in its terms, it is definite in the one thing that we were called upon to make definite. It is a definite guarantee of peace. It is a definite guarantee by word against aggression. It is a definite guarantee against the things which have just come near bringing the whole structure of civilization into ruin.

"Its purposes do not for a moment lie vague. Its purposes are declared, and its powers are unmistakable. It is not in contemplation that this should be merely a league to secure the peace of the world. It is a league which can be used for co-operation in any international matter. That is the significance of the provision introduced concerning labor. There are many ameliorations of labor conditions which can be effected by conference and discussion. I anticipate that there will be a very great usefulness in the Bureau of Labor which it is contemplated shall be set up by the League. Men and women and children who work have been in the background through long ages, and sometimes seemed to be forgotten, while Governments have had their watchful and suspicious eyes upon the manoeuvres of one another, while the thought of statesmen has been about structural action and the larger transactions of commerce and finance."

"Now, if I may believe the picture which I see, there comes into the foreground the great body of the laboring people of the world, the men and women and children upon whom the great burden of sustaining the world must from day to day fall, whether we wish it to do so or not, people who go to bed tired and wake up without the stimulation of lively hope. These people will be drawn into the field of international consultation and help, and will be among the wards of the combined Governments of the world. There is, I take leave to say, a very great step in advance in the mere conception of that.

"Then, as you will notice, there is an imperative article concerning the publicity of all international agreements. Henceforth no member of the League can claim any agreement valid which it has not registered with the Secretary General, in whose office, of course, it will be subject to the examination of anybody representing a member of the League. And the duty is laid upon the Secretary General to publish every document of that sort at the earliest possible time.

"I suppose most persons who have not been conversant with the business of foreign affairs do not realize how many hundreds of these agreements are made in a single year, and how difficult it might be to publish the more unimportant of them immediately, how uninteresting it would be to most of the world to publish them immediately, but even they must be published just as soon as it is possible for the Secretary General to publish them.

Protection of the Helpless.

"Then there is a feature about this covenant which, to my mind, is one of the greatest and most satisfactory advances that has been made. We are done with annexations of helpless peoples, meant in some instances by some powers to be used merely for exploitation. We recognize in the most solemn manner that the helpless and undeveloped peoples of the world, being in that condition, put an obligation upon us to look after their interests primarily before we use them for our interests, and that in all cases of this sort hereafter it shall be the duty of the League to see that the nations who are assigned as the tutors and advisers and directors of these peoples shall look to their interests and their development before they look to the interests and desires of the mandatory nation itself.

"There has been no greater advance than this, gentlemen. If you look back upon the history of the world you will see how helpless peoples have too often been a prey to powers that had no conscience in the matter. It has been one of the many distressing revelations of recent years that the great power which has just been, happily, defeated, put intolerable burdens and injustices upon the helpless people of some of the colonies which it annexed to itself, that its interest was rather their extermination than their development, that the desire was to possess their land for European purposes and not to enjoy their confidence in order that mankind might be lifted in these places to the next higher level.

"Now, the world, expressing its conscience in law, says there is an end of that, that our consciences shall be settled to this thing. States will be picked out which have already shown that they can exercise a conscience in this matter, and under their tutelage the helpless peoples of the world will come into a new light and into a new hope.

A Practical Document.

"So I think I can say of this document that it is at one and the same time a practical document and a human document. There is a pulse of sympathy in it. There is a compulsion of conscience throughout it. It is practical, and yet it is intended to purify, to rectify, to elevate. And I want to say that so far as my observation instructs me, this is in one sense a belated document. I believe that the conscience of the world has long been prepared to express itself in some such way. We are not just now discovering our sympathy for these people and our interest in them. We are simply expressing it, for it has long been felt, and in the administration of the affairs of more than one of the great States represented here—so far as I know, all of the great States that are represented here—that humane impulse has already expressed itself in their dealings with their colonies, whose peoples were yet at a low stage of civilization.

"We have had many instances of colonies lifted into the sphere of complete self-government. This is not the discovery of a principle. It is the universal application of a principle. It is the agreement of the great nations which have tried to live by these standards in their separate administrations to unite in seeing that their common force and their common thought and intelligence are lent to this great and humane enterprise. I think it is an occasion, therefore, for the most profound satisfaction that this humane decision should have been reached in a matter for which the world has long been waiting and until a very recent period thought that it was still too early to hope.

"Many terrible things have come out of this war, gentlemen, but some very beautiful things have come out of it. Wrong has been defeated, but the rest of the world has been more conscious than it ever was before of the majority of right. People that were suspicious of one another can now live as friends and comrades in a single family, and desire to do so. The miasma of distrust, of intrigue, is cleared away. Men are looking eye to eye and saying, 'We are brothers and have a common purpose. We did not realize it before, but now we do realize it, and this is our covenant of friendship.'"

PLAN LAUDED BY LEADERS

Cecil, Orlando, Venizelos and Others Speak After President.

RESERVATION BY FRENCH

WANTS GERMANY DISARMED

Japan to Propose New Matter, Perhaps to Forbid Race Discrimination.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—President Wilson left Paris late this evening on his way home to the United States, having achieved the main object of his visit to Europe—the completion and presentation to the Peace Conference of the draft of a constitution for a League of Nations.

This document he read in person to the plenary session of the conference this afternoon, following it with a speech in which he emphasized the elasticity of the League project, and stated that armed force was in the background as the last resort because the conference was framing a constitution of peace, not a league of war.

Lord Robert Cecil, Premier Orlando of Italy, Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate, and others indorsed the plan.

M. Bourgeois, French delegate, announced that France reserved the right to offer suggestions as to details of the plan, urging anew the special necessity for safeguarding Belgium and his own country.

Baron Makino, head of the Japanese delegation, announced that he would later offer a proposition, presumably relating to action to forbid all discrimination on account of race.

Outline of the Project.

The constitution of the League of Nations, as presented, embraces these main features, the project for a world police being conspicuously absent:

It establishes a body of delegates from the signatory powers, each of which powers has one vote; an Executive Council of nine, representing the five great powers and four others, chosen in rotation, and a court of arbitration.

The League is to have a secretariat, and a stated seat of meeting.

States not signatory to the covenant may not enter the League except by approval of two-thirds of the States represented in the League after giving guarantee of good faith.

The League undertakes to respect the territorial integrity and political independence of all members.

In case of disputes the "high contracting parties will not resort to war without submitting to arbitration or to an inquiry by the Executive Council, and until three months after action by the arbitrators or the Executive Council."

If any party break or disregard covenants under the article providing for arbitration or inquiry, it shall be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members, who will take economic and financial measures against it and will join in resisting the covenant-breaking State.

Reduction of Armaments.

The Executive Council shall recommend the naval and military forces, which each member of the League shall contribute to the armed forces, necessary to protect the League covenants.

The reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety is emphasized as necessary to peace. The Executive Council shall fix the extent of armaments, and these shall not be exceeded without permission.

Colonies and territories removed from the sovereignty of the States which formerly governed them and not yet able to stand by themselves are put under the tutelage of advanced States as mandatories for the League.

All treaty obligations between the powers inconsistent with the terms of the covenant shall be abrogated, nor shall any such be entered into thereafter. All treaties shall be registered with the League and shall not be valid otherwise.

All international bureaus, already established, shall come under the protection of the League.

Amendments to the covenant shall take effect when ratified by the States represented in the Executive Council and by three-fourths of the States represented in the body of delegates.

There was special interest to the conference session today, as it was the last gathering of the delegates prior to the President's departure, as well as being the occasion of presenting the document with which his name is identified.

The President was received with military honors as he arrived at the Foreign Office, and the large crowds which had congregated gave him a cordial welcome as he passed through.

The delegates were already assembled when the President entered the council chamber. He was greeted by Premier Clemenceau, Foreign Secretary Balfour, and Viscount Milner of Great Britain and the American delegates, at the head of the table.

There was little formality. Premier Clemenceau, who is President of the conference, called the conference to order, and President Wilson arose and addressed the gathering.

"I have very great pleasure," said President Wilson as he began, "in presenting the report of the commission which has framed the constitution of a League of Nations. I am particularly happy to be able to say it is a unanimous report, signed by the representatives of all the powers on the committee."

President Wilson spoke earnestly, but without oratorical effect.

"The best report I can make," the President continued, "is to read the document itself."

Thereupon he read from a printed sheet the constitution of the League, while the assembly followed his reading with the closest attention.

While the President was reading, Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by the President's naval aid, was escorted to a place back of the delegates' table.

The reading continued thirty-five minutes without interruption or applause. As he closed, the President laid aside the document and spoke of what had been accomplished. The deliberations of the commission had been most instructive, and throughout the proceedings there was an undertone of enthusiasm in the great work being accomplished, he said.

The results, said President Wilson, represented the judgment of fourteen nations represented on the commission, and these fourteen nations were a representative group of the conference itself.

Not a "Straitjacket" Plan.

"This is a union of will in a common purpose," the President proceeded. "It is a union which cannot be resisted, and, I dare say, one which no nation will attempt to resist."

The President pointed out that the document was no "straitjacket." It was elastic, and not a vehicle of might, he said. It was yet to be developed, and as yet care should be taken as to the clothes put on it. While elastic, yet it was definite.

"It is definite," continued President Wilson, "as a guarantee of peace. It is definite as a guarantee against aggression. It is definite against renewal of such a cataclysm as has just shaken civilization."

The President spoke with especial emphasis as he referred to the wrongs committed against helpless peoples.

"There is one especially notable feature in this document," he said. "We are done with annexations of helpless peoples, at times accomplished in the past for the purposes of the exploiting of these peoples. In this document we recognize that these helpless communities are first to be helped and developed, and that their own interests and well-being shall come before any material advantage to the mandatory intrusted with their case."

Too often in the past, the President added, the world had seen the lands of helpless communities appropriated for political purposes.

"And so," he said, "while this is a practical document, it is above all a human document. It is practical, and at the same time it is designed to purify, to rectify, to elevate."

President Wilson closed his address at 4:30 o'clock, having read and spoken for just one hour. An interpreter then proceeded to render the discourse, which occupied another hour.

Lord Robert Cecil, head of the British Commission on the League of Nations, followed the interpreter in an earnest speech. It was a good omen, said Lord Robert, that this document had been laid before the world before being finally enacted, so that people everywhere could advise upon and criticise it. The problem had been one of great difficulty, for it was to preserve the peace of the world with the least possible interference with national sovereignty.

The results accomplished, he continued, embraced two main principles—first, no nation shall go to war until every other means of settlement shall be fully and fairly tried; second, no nation shall forcibly seek to disturb a territory's integrity or interfere with the political independence of the nations of the world.

These were the great principles, but later another great principle must be laid down, namely, that no nation should retain armaments fit only for aggressive purposes.

Dr. Vittorio Orlando, the Italian Prime Minister, expressed deep satisfaction at having collaborated in what was going to be one of the greatest documents of history. He would not speak of the merits of the scheme, Dr. Orlando continued, as these had been explained by one whose noble inspiration had brought it into existence. The war had brought forth the necessity for this document.

"Thus born out of the pains of war," the Premier exclaimed, "this is a document of freedom and right which represents the redemption of humanity by sacrifice."

France Makes Some Reservations.

Léon Bourgeois of the French delegation spoke in behalf of France on the good-will which, he said, had prevailed in formulating the project. At the same time, he said, the French delegates reserved the right to present their views on certain details of the plan as a whole, which was a work of right and justice and knew no distinction between great and small States.

Later, he said, this beginning must be extended by a limitation of armaments. One of the chief results of the victory was in permitting the disarmament of the barbarous nation that had stood in the way of world disarmament.

Dangers to States were not all equal, M. Bourgeois said. Some States, like France and Belgium, were especially exposed and required additional guarantees. He urged a system of permanent inspection of existing armaments and forces as one means of avoiding a renewal of warfare.

Baron Makino of Japan, after approving the high purposes of the League, added that a proposal would be submitted later, which, it was hoped, would receive favorable attention. The nature of this proposal he did not make known, but it is supposed to refer to an amendment abolishing racial distinctions in international affairs.

George Nicoll Barnes, British Minister of Labor, and Premier Venizelos of Greece also spoke approvingly of the League of Nations.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, the Chinese delegate, gave China's adherence to the League.

The Arabian delegate pointed out that the constitution of the League recognized the right of self-determination, but said that certain secret treaties were in existence that would prevent this self-determination. He therefore hoped that such treaties as affected Asiatic Turkey would be declared by the powers null and void.

Premier Hughes of Australia asked if full opportunity was to be given for discussion of the proposed League, and when. Premier Clemenceau replied that President Wilson had presented the document with the expectation that there would be the fullest opportunity for discussion, but when this would occur would be determined later.

The conference adjourned at 7 o'clock, and President Wilson hastened homeward to prepare for the journey to the United States.

FRANCE'S FINAL FIGHT FOR A WORLD ARMY

Vain Attempt of Bourgeois to Overcome Anglo-American Constitutional Objections.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless and Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—President Wilson will leave Paris on Friday night to sail from Brest Saturday, carrying the constitution of the League of Nations, approved unanimously by the League Commission and by the Peace Conference as a whole.

At the final session of the commission, with President Wilson absent because he was attending the War Council, the French made a last effort to obtain the adoption of their proposal for an international army. When the question was put to a vote the Czechoslovak delegate was the only member who supported the French. The French withdrew the proposal and a unanimous agreement was reached.

The ultimate agreement obtained was a compromise. On the whole, the constitution appears to please those most interested. Oscar S. Straus, who is here as representative of the League to Enforce Peace, said: "It is a golden day in the history of the world."

The readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES dispatches from Paris are familiar with the French position, which constituted the crux of the long discussion. France contended that she could not be safeguarded from German aggression unless there was a binding arrangement for the creation of an international army to meet any such aggression. Up to a few days ago it was thought that the French apprehension on this score had been overcome. Then Léon Bourgeois, the leading representative of France on the League Commission, interposed objections to the article covering the responsibilities of the Governments to deal with aggressive measures in violation of the League covenant. After that, the battle waged around the attempt to frame an article which would recognize the principle of the French view without requiring the impossible from the British and American delegations in promising in advance that their Governments would go to war in certain contingencies.

The change in the critical tone of the Paris press was due somewhat to a misunderstanding of the American and British proposal involved in the redrafted article. French newspapers got the impression, on what amounted to semi-official authority, that an agreement had been reached for the creation of an international army placed automatically at the disposal of the League of Nations if any Government committed an act in violation of the new armistice conditions, which lay the covenant.

But if the French press and public are disappointed when the text of the League Constitution is published, they will find cause for satisfaction in the foundation for placing Germany in a position of military impotency. Perhaps it doesn't do to be too optimistic in this period of uncertainty, but there is an air of satisfaction everywhere, indicating a rather general belief that the outlook for complete harmony is in sight.

SENATE TO GET PLAN WITH PEACE TREATY

Two Are Held to be Interdependent—Our Delegates Sure Plan Is Constitutional.

PARIS, Feb. 14, (Associated Press.)—The plan for the creation of the League of Nations which President Wilson takes with him to the United States will not be in condition to permit action by the United States Senate until the treaty of peace is confirmed.

The Society of Nations project and the treaty of peace, which is to be framed, will be interdependent. Many features of the peace treaty will require adjustment or settlement under the provisions of the league's project, so that they will have to be submitted to the Senate as a whole or in combination. President Wilson therefore, during the few days he is in Washington before his return to France, will devote himself to a discussion of the league's project with members of the Senate and House Committees on Foreign Affairs.

The desire that public opinion in the United States may be in condition to express itself definitely when the final stages of the peace settlement are reached and the combined treaties are presented for action.

In the opinion of American delegates, the league plan is safe against attack on the ground of unconstitutionality. If it does involve an alliance, requiring the use of American troops in combination with those of other nations, against an offender against the law of nations, as laid down by the Conference, it is recalled that there is precedent for such an alliance in a treaty between the United States and France more than a century ago.

It is also pointed out by authorities here that power is reserved to Congress to carry out the pledge in its own way through its control of appropriations and war-making power. The Senate, especially, has distinctive powers in its right to approve or disapprove treaties such as that which is necessary to give life to the Society of Nations.

ALL RUSSIAN FACTIONS EXPECTED AT PRINKIPO

Officials and Diplomats in Washington Hopeful of Outcome of Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The State Department has received official information indicating that all the Russian factions, including those regional governments which had provisionally rejected the proposal of the Associated Powers to meet in conference at Princes' Islands, will participate in the conference. While final action has not yet been taken by the Omsk Government, the postponement by the Allies and America of the date of the conference, which was to have opened on Feb. 13, makes it possible for Admiral Kolchak and his supporters to send representatives.

It was intimated at the State Department that the Archangel Government might not be able to send delegatess, as it is at present impossible for them to pass through the Bolshevist lines. President Tchaikovsky, who is in Paris, probably will not attend the conference in person, as it is not expected that the heads of the other Russian Governments, including the Bolsheviki, will send their executives.

There appears to be optimism on the part of officials and diplomats here concerning the possibilities of the Russo-Allied Conference. The interests and factions which would be represented have it in their combined power to unite Russia, but while this measure of success is not immediately expected it is believed that great progress will be made toward stabilizing the several governmental administrations which are already established with provision made for sectional and national elections in which the people may determine the form of government they desire and elect their administrators.

In the event of failure on the part of the Associated Powers' representatives to persuade the antagonistic elements to consolidate it may be recommended that they institute some form of co-operation in the interest of the people, so that provisions may be supplied to them without interference from any quarter, and also that the warfare which is now being waged in Russia shall cease.

Text of the Proposed Constitution of the League of Nations

PARIS, Feb. 14.—Following is the text of the covenant and draft of the Constitution of the League of Nations as read by President Wilson to the plenary session of the Peace Conference today:

COVENANT.

PREAMBLE—In order to promote international co-operation and to secure international peace and security by the acceptance of obligations not to resort to war, by the prescription of open, just and honorable relations between nations, by the firm establishment of the understandings of international law as the actual rule of conduct among governments, and by the maintenance of justice and a scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized people with one another, the powers signatory to this covenant adopt this constitution of the League of Nations:

ARTICLE I.

The action of the high contracting parties under the terms of this covenant shall be effected through the instrumentality of a meeting of a body of delegates representing the high contracting parties, of meetings at more frequent intervals of an Executive Council, and of a permanent international secretariat to be established at the seat of the League.

ARTICLE II.

Meetings of the body of delegates shall be held at stated intervals and from time to time, as occasion may require, for the purpose of dealing with matters within the sphere of action of the League. Meetings of the body of delegates shall be held at the seat of the League, or at such other places as may be found convenient, and shall consist of representatives of the high contracting parties. Each of the high contracting parties shall have one vote, but may have not more than three representatives.

ARTICLE III.

The Executive Council shall consist of representatives of the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan, together with representatives of four other States, members of the League. The selection of these four States shall be made by the body of delegates on such principles and in such manner as they think fit. Pending the appointment of these representatives of the other States, representatives of —— shall be members of the Executive Council.

Meetings of the council shall be held from time to time as occasion may require, and at least once a year, at whatever place may be decided on, or, failing any such decision, at the seat of the League, and any matter within the sphere of action of the League or affecting the peace of the world may be dealt with at such meetings.

Invitations shall be sent to any power to attend a meeting of the council, at which such matters directly affecting its interests are to be discussed, and no decision taken at any meeting will be binding on such powers unless so invited.

ARTICLE IV.

All matters of procedure at meetings of the body of delegates or the Executive Council, including the appointment of committees to investigate particular matters, shall be regulated by the body of delegates or the Executive Council, and may be decided by a majority of the States represented at the meeting.

The first meeting of the body of delegates and of the Executive Council shall be summoned by the President of the United States of America.

ARTICLE V.

The permanent secretariat of the League shall be established at ——, which shall constitute the seat of the League. The secretariat shall comprise such secretaries and staff as may be required, under the general direction and control of a Secretary General of the League, who shall be chosen by the Executive Council. The secretariat shall be appointed by the Secretary General subject to confirmation by the Executive Council.

The Secretary General shall act in that capacity at all meetings of the body of delegates or of the Executive Council.

The expenses of the secretariat shall be borne by the States members of the League, in accordance with the apportionment of the expenses of the International Bureau of the Universal Postal Union.

ARTICLE VI.

Representatives of the high contracting parties and officials of the League, when engaged in the business of the League, shall enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities, and the buildings occupied by the League or its officials, or by representatives attending its meetings, shall enjoy the benefits of extraterritoriality.

ARTICLE VII.

Admission to the League of States, not signatories to the covenant and not named in the protocol hereto as States to be invited to adhere to the covenant, requires the assent of not less than two-thirds of the States represented in the body of delegates, and shall be limited to fully self-governing countries, including dominions and colonies.

No State shall be admitted to the League unless it is able to give effective guarantees of its sincere intention to observe its international obligations and unless it shall conform to such principles as may be prescribed by the League in regard to its naval and military forces and armaments.

ARTICLE VIII.

The high contracting parties recognize the principle that the maintenance of peace will require the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety, and the enforcement by common action of international obligations, having special regard to the geographical situation and circumstances of each State, and the Executive Council shall formulate plans for effecting such reduction. The Executive Council shall also determine for the consideration and action of the several Governments what military equipment and armament is fair and reasonable in proportion to the scale of forces laid down in the program of disarmament; and these limits, when adopted, shall not be exceeded without the permission of the Executive Council.

The high contracting parties agree that the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war lends itself to grave objections, and direct the Executive Council to advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented, due regard being had to the necessities of those countries which are not able to manufacture for themselves the munitions and implements of war necessary for their safety.

The high contracting parties undertake in no way to conceal from each other the condition of such of their industries as are capable of being adapted to warlike purposes or the scale of their armaments, and agree that there shall be full and frank interchange of information as to their military and naval programs.

ARTICLE IX.

A permanent commission shall be constituted to advise the League on the execution of the provisions of Article VIII. and on military and naval questions generally.

ARTICLE X.

The high contracting parties shall undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial intergrity and existing political independence of all States members of the League. In case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the Executive Council shall advise upon the means by which the obligation shall be fulfilled.

ARTICLE XI.

Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the high contracting parties or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the League, and the high contracting parties reserve the right to take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations.

It is hereby also declared and agreed to be the friendly right of each of the high contracting parties to draw the attention of the body of delegates or of the Executive Council to any circumstance affecting international intercourse which threatens to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.

ARTICLE XII.

The high contracting parties agree that should disputes arise between them which cannot be adjusted by the ordinary processes of diplomacy they will in no case resort to war without previously submitting the questions and matters involved either to arbitration or to inquiry by the Executive Council and until three months after the award by the arbitrators or a recommendation by the Executive Council, and that they will not even then resort to war as against a member of the League which complies with the award of the arbitrators or the recommendation of the Executive Council.

In any case under this article the award of the arbitrators shall be made within a reasonable time, and the recommendation of the Executive Council shall be made within six months after the submission of the dispute.

ARTICLE XIII.

The high contracting parties agree that whenever any dispute or difficulty shall arise between them, which they recognize to be suitable for submission to arbitration and which cannot be satisfactorily settled by diplomacy, they will submit the whole matter to arbitration. For this purpose the court of arbitration to which the case is referred shall be the court agreed on by the parties or stipulated in any convention existing between them. The high contracting parties agree that they will carry out in full good faith any award that may be rendered. In the event of any failure to carry out the award the Executive Council shall propose what steps can best be taken to give effect thereto.

ARTICLE XIV.

The Executive Council shall formulate plans for the establishment of a permanent court of international justice, and this court shall, when established, be competent to hear and determine any matter which the parties recognized as suitable for submission to it for arbitration under the foregoing article.

ARTICLE XV.

If there should arise between States, members of the League, any dispute likely to lead to rupture, which is not submitted to arbitration as above, the high contracting parties agree that they will refer the matter to the Executive Council; either party to the dispute may give notice of the existence of the dispute to the Secretary General, who will make all necessary arrangements for a full investigation and consideration thereof. For this purpose the parties agree to communicate to the Secretary General, as promptly as possible, statements of their case, with all the relevant facts and papers, and the Executive Council may forthwith direct the publication thereof.

Where the efforts of the council lead to the settlement of the dispute, a statement shall be published, indicating the nature of the dispute and the terms of settlement, together with such explanations as may be appropriate. If the dispute has not been settled, a report by the council shall be published, setting forth with all necessary facts and explanations the recommendation which the council think just and proper for the settlement of the dispute. If the report is unanimously agreed to by the members of the council, other than the parties to the dispute, the high contracting parties agree that they will not go to war with any party which complies with the recommendations, and that, if any party shall refuse so to comply the council shall propose measures necessary to give effect to the recommendations. If no such unanimous report can be made it shall be the duty of the majority and the privilege of the minority to issue statements, indicating what they believe to be the facts, and containing the reasons which they consider to be just and proper.

The Executive Council may in any case under this article refer the dispute to the body of delegates. The dispute shall be so referred at the request of either party to the dispute, provided that such request must be made within fourteen days after the submission of the dispute. In a case, referred to the body of delegates, all the provisions of this article, and of Article XII., relating to the action and powers of the Executive Council, shall apply to the action and powers of the body of delegates.

ARTICLE XVI.

Should any of the high contracting parties break or disregard its covenants under Article XII. it shall thereby ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all the other members of the League, which hereby undertakes immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking State and the prevention of all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking State and the nationals of any other State, whether a member of the League or not.

It shall be the duty of the Executive Council in such case to recommend what effective military or naval force the members of the League shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the League.

The high contracting parties agree, further, that they will mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures which may be taken under this article in order to minimize the loss and inconvenience resulting from the above measures, and that they will mutually support one another in resisting any special measures aimed at one of their number by the covenant-breaking State and that they will afford passage through their territory to the forces of any of the high contracting parties who are co-operating to protect the covenants of the League.

ARTICLE XVII.

In the event of disputes between one State member of the League and another State which is not a member of the League, or between States not members of the League, the high contracting parties agree that the State or States, not members of the League, shall be invited to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of such dispute, upon such conditions as the Executive Council may deem just, and upon acceptance of any such invitation, the above provisions shall be applied with such modifications as may be deemed necessary by the League.

Upon such invitation being given the Executive Council shall immediately institute an inquiry into the circumstances and merits of the dispute and recommend such action as may seem best and most effectual in the circumstances.

In the event of a power so invited refusing to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purposes of the League, which in the case of a State member of the League would constitute a breach of Article XII., the provisions of Article XVI. shall be applicable as against the State taking such action.

If both parties to the dispute, when so invited, refuse to accept the obligations of membership in the League for the purpose of such dispute, the Executive Council may take such action and make such recommendations as will prevent hostilities and will result in the settlement of the dispute.

ARTICLE XVIII.

The high contracting parties agree that the League shall be intrusted with general supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition with the countries in which the control of this traffic is necessary in the common interest.

ARTICLE XIX.

To those colonies and territories which, as a consequence of the late war, have ceased to be under the sovereignty of the States which formerly governed them and which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, there should be applied the principle that the well being and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in the constitution of the League.

The best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be intrusted to advanced nations, who by reason of their resources, their experience, or their geographical position, can best undertake this responsibility, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as mandatories on behalf of the League.

The character of the mandate must differ according to the stage of the development of the people, the geographical situation of the territory, its economic conditions and other similar circumstances.

Certain communities, formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire, have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized, subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a mandatory power until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the mandatory power.

Other peoples, especially those of Central Africa, are at such a stage that the mandatory must be responsible for the administration of the territory, subject to conditions which will guarantee freedom of conscience or religion, subject only to the maintenance of public order and morals, the prohibition of abuses such as the slave trade, the arms traffic, and the liquor traffic, and the prevention of the establishment of fortifications or military and naval bases and of military training of the natives for other than police purposes and the defense of territory, and will also secure equal opportunities for the trade and commerce of other members of the League.

There are territories, such as Southwest Africa and certain of the South Pacific Isles, which, owing to the sparseness of the population, or their small size, or their remoteness from the centres of civilization, or their geographical contiguity to the mandatory State and other circumstances, can be best administered under the laws of the mandatory States as integral portions thereof, subject to the safeguards above mentioned in the interests of the indigenous population.

In every case of mandate, the mandatory State shall render to the League an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

The degree of authority, control, or administration, to be exercised by the mandatory State, shall, if not previously agreed upon by the high contracting parties in each case, be explicitly defined by the Executive Council in a special act or charter.

The high contracting parties further agree to establish at the seat of the League a mandatory commission to receive and examine the annual reports of the mandatory powers, and to assist the League in insuring the observance of the terms of all mandates.

ARTICLE XX.

The high contracting parties will endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women, and children, both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend; and to that end agree to establish as part of the organization of the League a permanent bureau of labor.

ARTICLE XXI.

The high contracting parties agree that provision shall be made through the instrumentality of the League to secure and maintain freedom of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all States members of the League, having in mind, among other things, special arrangements with regard to the necessities of the regions devastated during the war of 1914-1918.

ARTICLE XXII.

The high contracting parties agree to place under the control of the League all international bureaus already established by general treaties, if the parties to such treaties consent. Furthermore, they agree that all such international bureaus to be constituted in future shall be placed under control of the League.

ARTICLE XXIII.

The high contracting parties agree that every treaty or international engagement entered into hereafter by any State member of the League shall be forthwith registered with the Secretary General and as soon as possible published by him, and that no such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.

ARTICLE XXIV.

It shall be the right of the body of delegates from time to time to advise the reconsideration by States members of the League of treaties which have become inapplicable and of international conditions of which the continuance may endanger the peace of the world.

ARTICLE XXV.

The high contracting parties severally agree that the present covenant is accepted as abrogating all obligations inter se which are inconsistent with the terms thereof, and solemnly engage that they will not hereafter enter into any engagements inconsistent with the terms thereof. In case any of the powers signatory hereto or subsequently admitted to the League shall, before becoming a party to this covenant, have undertaken any obligations which are inconsistent with the terms of this covenant, it shall be the duty of such power to take immediate steps to procure its release from such obligations.

ARTICLE XXVI.

Amendments to this covenant will take effect when ratified by the States whose representatives compose the Executive Council and by three-fourths of the States whose representatives compose the body of delegates.

tee, and among its prominent Democratic members are John Sharp Williams of Mississippi and Senators Swanson, Pomerene, Saulsbury, Thomas, and Pittman. James Hamilton Lewis, one of the strongest defenders of the foreign policies of the President, who has frequently championed his course in Paris, was likewise silent.

The refusal of the Republican leaders, who will be in control of the Senate after March 4, to express their views followed a conference of an informal character between Senators Lodge, Penrose, Knox, and Smoot early in the afternoon, after copies of the text of the covenant had been received in news dispatches from Paris.

While Senators do not understand that the final text of the League of Nations treaty itself will be ready for submission to the Senate in the next seventeen days, Republican members of that body are apprehensive that the President, who is leaving Paris tonight and hastening back to Washington, will seek to obtain a formal expression of opinion by the Senate in favor of the League of Nations project. Ratification of the treaty itself would require the two-thirds vote necessary under the Constitution for the approval of all treaties. The Senate is so evenly divided at the present time that the Republicans, should their stand, when taken, be against the treaty, could easily muster the necessary one-third vote for halting action on the covenant until they come into control of the Senate in their own right. Should Republicans take their stand for the treaty they would easily furnish the Democrats enough votes for approval.

Fear Effort to Commit Senate.

What the Republican leaders of the Senate really fear is that Democratic leaders, acting for the President, will between now and March 4 try to put through a resolution by way of expression of the sense of the Senate in indorsement of the treaty. This might be attempted by a majority vote but would merely serve as an expression of a sense of the majority of the Senate unless two-thirds of the Senate indorsed the plan, because the Constitution throws around treaty consideration the safeguard of a two-thirds vote, and the covenant can be made binding on the nation only when submitted formally as a treaty.

Hot Senate Debates in Prospect.

Despite the reticence of Republican Senators tonight, the fact could not be concealed that, as the situation is now viewed by them, some contemplate discussion of the covenant in debate in the next few days. Unless there is a party decision meanwhile to the contrary, it appears that the liveliest controversy will be raised in the discussion on whether the covenant, if approved in its present form, would force this country to take a hand in the international settlements and issues of the Eastern Hemisphere, at the same time permitting nations of that half of the world to have a part in disputes in the Western Hemisphere, regardless of, and perhaps in contravention of, the Monroe Doctrine.

The question was also raised tonight whether the covenant might not involve an invasion of the sovereignty of the United States by forcing the submission to arbitration, or to the decision of the all-powerful Executive Council of the proposed league, of matters such as the questions of Chinese and Japanese labor, or issues with Mexico. While this attitude was detected among some prominent members of the Senate who refused to talk for publication, it was openly reflected by Representative John Jacob Rogers of Massachusetts, one of the leading Republican members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Republican Senators eagerly await the expression of ex-President Taft's views. Mr. Taft has been one of the foremost advocates of a League of Nations. He has been touring this country and part of Canada on a trans-continental trip in advocacy of the League of Nations and has been favoring support of President Wilson's efforts in this direction. If he should give his complete and unqualified indorsement of the project, a very interesting situation will develop in the Senate. He recently made it plain that if the President should succeed at Paris in bringing about the approval of a league plan which he could support he would not only figuratively, but actually, if necessary, remove his coat and roll up his sleeves in order to fight for its adoption by the Senate.

While sentiment has had no opportunity to crystalize in legislative circles, and opinions are largely concealed, it is evident from what was gathered in cloakroom gossip today that the sixteenth paragraph of the proposed charter for the suggested League so defines a state of war that it may involve the possibility of going to war without the consent of the war-making bodies of the individual nations required by the Constitutions of some of them, including that of the United States.

It was also suggested that the Executive Council might act secretly and in contravention of the idea of open covenants openly arrived at, publicity as to its decision and action coming only after action of a binding character on members of the League had been taken.

One prominent Senator whose name cannot now be used suggested that it would produce a bad effect if the whole scheme should fall through because the world is "gun-shy of war and wants some sort of combination of nations to cling to, Europe especially feeling this way."

The paragraph concerning limitation of armaments will undoubtedly develop much comment, and there will be strong opposition by some Senators as well as by certain House members to the idea that representatives of other nations have the right, even through the Executive Council of a League of Nations, to fix the limits of armament which American statesmen might regard as necessary to the vital protection of the United States. West Coast members, in particular, were not inclined to relish the idea of Japan having something to say about this. There was considerable speculation as to the part Mexico will play in the League, and the question was asked several times, "Will she get in or not?"

Hitchcock Is Enthusiastic.

"The proposed constitution of the League of Nations impresses me very favorably," said Senator Hitchcock, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. "It is not the monster that those who have attacked the plan predicted it would be. Neither is it the helpless sewing circle that the sneering critic predicted it might be. It is the union of nations, and these nations intrust the real power to an Executive Council of nine nations. Four of these are elected from time to time by the member nations, but five of the nine members of the Executive Council are permanent members, so that the control of the Executive Council will always be in the hands of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan. This element of permanency and strength in the Executive Council is a highly important feature. In a sense the Executive Council possesses legislative and judicial powers, but its jurisdiction and its powers are limited in the constitution.

"In some respects, the covenants which nations make when they join the League resemble arbitration or peace treaties. They agree never to go to war without submitting differences to arbitration, the arbitrators to be agreed upon, or to an examination by the Executive Council, and not even then for three months after the decision. This pledge guarantees against sudden war, and assures a cooling-off time. Any nation violating this pledge even by threatening war prematurely will be considered as making war upon every member of the League, and then the Executive Council is authorized to determine and recommend what force each member of the League shall contribute in defense. Before this, however, each nation is also required to suspend all financial, commercial, business, and social relations with the offending nation. This prospect constitutes a most formidable reason why no nation will thus violate its promise to arbitrate.

"Another important covenant made by the nations joining the League is the agreement to make such reductions of national armaments to the lowest possible point consistent with national safety as the Executive Council shall determine and recommend. In this covenant the League constitution is strong, clear and emphatic.

"With regard to the admission of new members of the League it is significant that a two-thirds vote is required.

"German colonies and dependent territories are to be under League guardianship, one member, however, being made the mandatory to carry out the League policy. This represents the highest plan of altruistic service.

"While this particular draft of the constitution is not final and will probably be changed somewhat it constitutes, in my opinion, the greatest international document ever produced. The nations that enter into this League get an enormous benefit from its protection, and secure permanent relief from enormous expenditures for war. Most of the power of the League is permanently intrusted to the Executive Council, and the other five are permanent members comprising nations now associated with the United States in forming the League."

Speaker Clark: "I have always favored disarmament, and the only way it can be obtained is by an agreement of the nations as provided by the Constitution of the League to Enforce Peace. I am in hearty accord with that section of the principles of the League."

Sees Extra Session Necessary.

Representative Butler, Republican, of Pennsylvania, ranking minority member of the House Naval Affairs Committee: "As I read the proposed constitution of the League of Nations, it is left to the Advisory Committee to advise the size of the army and navy of various nations party to it, and for the League to inforce its terms. That being true, it seems to me that no contract for increased naval expenditures should be let, which would involve this nation in financial obligations that under the size of the navy fixed by the League would be wasted. We should wait, both in legislation for the size of the army and navy, until we know the size it is going to be.

"It all points to a revision of our army and navy bills in an extra session of Congress, and such an extra session seems not only very likely, but an absolute necessity, since it appears that the Senate will not be able to complete consideration of all the bills that must be passed by March 4."

Representative Cooper, Republican, of Wisconsin, member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee:

"The idea of a League of Nations to enforce world peace permanently has all the elements of the sublime to me. The very fact that we have had placed before us a tentative program looking to the formation of such a league is inspiring. Manifestly it is too early for any one here to discuss intelligently details of the proposed agreements, and I cannot attempt it.

"I wish to emphasize, however, that when our own Constitution was in process of adoption it met with many of the same objections that are being raised against the League of Nations. Patrick Henry and George Mason, opposing the adoption of our Constitution, went back to their States insisting that the sovereignty of the States could never be maintained under such a Constitution.

"I hope that public opinion in the world will support the formation of a league to enforce peace, because I believe that it is the one way by which permanent peace would be obtained."

Representative Saunders, Democrat, of Virginia, prominent among advocates of a small navy—"The suggestion that the League of Nations shall fix the size of the army and navy of nations, parties to the league, brings us at once to the question of the size we shall fix for our army and navy now, and it seems to me that we must consider both questions while formulating legislation dealing with a naval and military policy."

Representative Claude Kitchin, Democratic leader of the House—"I am gratified indeed that the League of Nations has been perfected. The war would have been fought in vain if such a moral organization had not been formed—a league which certainly will prevent many wars, if it does not make war impossible in the future. The agreement coming at this time may make necessary a change in the present army and navy bills, but as to whether it will be necessary to modify the bills in this session I cannot say until we have formed a better idea of the full effect of the league."

Representative W. S. Greene, Republican, Massachusetts—I am opposed to the League of Nations being formed before we have declared peace. The people of the United States are more interested in seeing peace declared and the boys returned from Europe and Russia than the formation of such a league. Peace should have come first, and after that the league might have been created as a natural consequence of the peace terms. I do not think that the Congress of the United States will look with good grace upon the League of Nations deciding how large shall be the navy and army of the United States.

Representative James A. Gallivan, Democrat, of Massachusetts, a member of the House Committee on Appropriations—This is good news. The League as outlined must have a most powerful moral effect in all the countries of the world in the years to come. But, naturally, I wonder why we are expected here in Congress now to vote great sums for the army establishment and the navy establishment of America. If, as I understand it, the League of Nations is to fix the size of all the armies and all the navies of the constituent bodies of the League, why should we now continue to spend millions of the people's money? Surely, Congress has something to think about.

What of a Magdalena Bay Dispute?

Representative John Jacob Rogers, Republican of Massachusetts, a member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs—My comment is that of a sincere friend and advocate of the principle of a League of Nations whose only anxiety is that the United States should not commit itself to a permanent policy which should later prove subversive of its vital interests, or which, in a specific case to arise under the purview of the League, should involve obligations which the nation would find itself unable or unwilling to undertake.

Article XII. of the covenant provides for arbitration or inquiry in case of dispute, and that the parties shall not even thereafter "resort to war as against a member of the League, which complies with the award."

Article XIII. provides that the parties shall abide by the award, and that in the event of any failure to carry it out the council shall propose the steps which "can best be taken to give effect thereto."

"Article XV. provides that no party shall go to war with any party which complies with the recommendations, and, in the event of refusal, that the 'Council shall propose measures necessary to give effect to the recommendation.'

"Article XVI. provides that, in case of a breach of Article XII., the offender shall 'be deemed to have committed an act of war' against all the other members of the League, and that in this event the council shall recommend 'what effective military or naval force the members of the League shall severally contribute to the armed forces to be used to protect the covenants of the League.'

"Does this mean that in a Magdalena Bay case the United States must not only submit her cause to a tribunal, but that it must necessarily abide by the decision of the tribunal without protest or right of appeal? If this is true, what is left of the Monroe Doctrine? And does it mean that, after she has submitted her cause to the tribunal, she must adhere to its finding, whatever it may be, on pain of finding herself the target for all the armies and navies of the world if she resists? It is, I think, important for us to understand the extent of our commitment before we accept it.

"Take the other type of case—a controversy in the Balkans, for example. Do the foregoing citations mean that we must in honor land our army and our navy in case a Balkan State proves refractory? Is it certain that national sentiment would approve and respond when the test came?"

Senator Spencer, Republican, of Missouri: "There may be some elements of good in the constitution of the League of Nations as submitted. I have not had time to read the constitution carefully, but what reading I have made recalls to mind a little story of a preacher who used to be in Missouri. One time we asked him to speak before the Young Men's Christian Association. He laughed a little and then said: 'Boys, I cannot make a speech, but in the days when sound was needed more than sense, I was a daisy.'"

FRENCH ANXIETY YIELDS TO RELIEF

STOCKS REFLECT OPTIMISM

Upward Movement Resumed—Few Traces of Hostility to the American Attitude.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—The anxiety that clouded the Paris atmosphere during the last few days has given way to relief and satisfaction. Government stocks, which had fallen on the average three-quarters of a point in forty-eight hours, yesterday resumed their upward movement that has been steady since the armistice. The press today reflects the general sentiment that the Supreme Allied Council has reached an agreement which fully safeguards France's interests. There are but few traces of the so-called hostile attitude toward the American point of view which, Frenchmen say, was rather an expression of French patriotic alarm than of a deliberate wish to find fault. The headlines in almost every newspaper emphasize the unity and determination of the Supreme Council to "draw Germany's war teeth," as an editorial of Clemenceau's L'Homme Libre puts it.

Thus the Matin, in big type beside Foch's photograph, says: "The results of the deliberations have shown perfect unity of the nations that fought Germany." The Petit Journal says: "Agreement between the Allies is reached." The Petit Parisien: "Armistice clauses settled." The Journal: "High War Council fixes conditions—total disarmament of Germany from military, naval, aerial, and financial standpoint. All German operations against Poland forbidden." The Figaro: "Decision," with the subhead, "Excellent day."

Chief Interest in Armistice Terms.

It is evident at the first glance that French opinion is far more preoccupied with the immediate problem of the armistice than the remoter subject of the constitution of the League of Nations, regarding which, however, the French also feel that their country should be protected by a clause relating to the use of armed force by the League in case of wanton aggression on the part of an enemy or group of enemies against one or more signatory members.

In a leading front-page column the Matin summarizes the general sentiment:

"The statesmen left the armistice conference last night with radiant faces, showing deep satisfaction.

"'It has been a good, a very good day,' said Finance Minister Klotz.

"'Excellent work has been accomplished,' said M. Leygues, Minister of Marine.

"'We allied military leaders are fully satisfied. Nothing remains now save to leave matters to the best of Ambassadors, Marshal Foch,' said the Italian Generalissimo Diaz. Yesterday's meeting was of utmost importance because it was to decide the attitude of Germany toward her conquerors. Weakness would have been disastrous, whereas vigorous and unanimous resolution meant proof positive that our victory would know no sabotage. These resolutions, unanimous and vigorous, have been taken."

Regarding the League of Nations, the Matin shows equal gratification:

"In another department of the conference highly satisfactory results were achieved. The text agreed upon by the League of Nations Committee makes the whole edifice of the future world covenant repose upon a mutual engagement of the powers that have co-operated in victory. That is, the United States has formally entered that alliance of European powers in participation in the reciprocal guarantees which these powers give among themselves for their future security."

The majority of other newspapers show similar optimism about the armistice.

"Marshal Foch appears to have received satisfaction for all his propositions," says Clemenceau's newspaper.

"Germany will realize that her hope of disagreement among the Allies is vain," declares the Petit Journal.

Figaro says: "The conference's decision was awaited with special anxiety. For some time our whole victory seemed in question. Germany seemed inclined to contest it, and we had the air of hesitating to pluck its fruits. The Entente chiefs, under the vigorous incentive of Clemenceau, understood this admirably, and have re-established the situation. They have proved to Germany in categorical fashion that she cannot count upon chance or upon our weakness."

Two Journals Unreconciled.

The Echo de Paris and Journal, however, still show traces of that disagreement with the views of the American plenipotentiaries, which in the case of the former bore evidence of a regular anti-Wilson campaign. The Echo de Paris prides itself on being paramountly patriotic; but its patriotism is of the narrow-minded brand that distrusts and decries nearly everything that is not French. Many a rap over the knuckles has been dealt to Italy, Great Britain, and more recently America by its editorial writer who signs himself Pertinax. During the last there months the Pertinax diatribes have been reinforced by cable dispatches from Washington which have been generally as anti-Wilson as his most ardent opponent could desire.

Today Pertinax, after expressing satisfaction that the armistice conditions have been settled unanimously, adds:

"Compromises are reached by annulation or addition of various claims. It was the method of addition that was followed in this case. The French Government wanted to use the language of command. America, on the other hand, was inclined to consider the armistice as a sort of contract that one party thereto could not modify alone. Anxious to liquidate the food and industrial supplies accumulated for a long war—for certain of which she had guaranteed minimum prices to producers—America solicited the relaxation, if not the abolition, of the blockade. The new method takes in both points of view, and it must be admitted that it gives a certain cohesion to the decision as a whole."

The Journal article contains no such sneer, but insists on the fact that if Germany had been victorious she would have treated the Allies with scant "chivalry" or "idealism"—words which in the phraseology of the Echo de Paris and Journal have come to mean the "mistaken generosity of the American President toward Germany." The whole article is a frank, if not very far-sighted, expression of the theory that an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth would be better treatment than Germany deserves.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—The newspapers unanimously approve the decision of the Supreme Council regarding Germany and rejoice that the Allied and Associated Governments reached a complete understanding as to the terms to be submitted to Germany on February 17.

The Petit Parisien says that Germany must take a decisive attitude within the next few days, because she will have to realize that despite apparent differences of opinion the alliance among her conquerors remains intact.

FOCH FULLY SATISFIED.

Has Authority to Take Instant Action Against Germans if Necessary.

LONDON, Feb. 14, (British Wireless Service.)—With reference to the new terms of armistice to be presented to Germany, the Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail says that when these terms are ready the Allies will give notice to Germany, not in a threatening sense, but in order to provide for the presentation of new conditions.

"With reference to the renewal of Monday," the correspondent says, "it is understood that Marshal Foch has been given definite verbal instructions by the Supreme War Council to deal on his own authority with any situation created by the Germans which demands instant action. He will require a strict observance of the demand already made for the evacuation of German Poland by all German troops, thus removing the menace to Poland. This formed part of a general undertaking by the Germans not to take aggressive action against the Poles; but their recent behavior has been just the opposite, and Field Marshal von Hindenburg has moved his headquarters to Kolberg, in Pomerania.

"With the general line of the terms to be embodied in the subsequent renewal of the armistice Marshal Foch is completely satisfied. The drafting of them is left open to a commission of eight set up last Monday, which is under the general direction of the Marshal. The drafting will proceed on Foch's return [from Treves] and it is anticipated will be completed at the end of next week. It will be ratified by the War Council. The terms will limit the size of the German army and the amount of military stores which may be maintained, and they will prescribe where the army corps are to be stationed.

"The Economic Commission, the British members of which are Lord Robert Cecil and Sir John Beale, is, meantime, considering a clause to be inserted in the armistice terms safeguarding the allied indemnity and preventing the export, and consequent disappearance, of German gold and other assets. Subject to compliance by Germany with the military terms, consideration will thereafter be given to the questions of lightening the blockade and German reconstruction."

Today's Newspapers on League Plan

NEW YORK CITY.

The Great Beginning.

From The World.

"The impossible will happen tomorrow," said Disraeli, and the impossible has happened. The constitution of the League of Nations is a living, organic fact.

Even five years ago such a constitution would have been received with derision as the work of amiable and impracticable dreamers. Today it is not only the most important but the most profoundly serious political document of the century, for it marks a new stage in the political and social progress of mankind.

It became evident that no international military forces could be placed at the disposal of the League to enforce its decrees, and that nations like Great Britain and the United States could not constitutionally bind themselves to employ troops indiscriminately in carrying out the provisions of a treaty without waiting for the consent of the lawmaking authority. This has been avoided by providing for the severance of diplomatic relations and the employment of economic blockades, leaving to each of the signatory powers final freedom of action in respect to a formal declaration of war if circumstances so require.

There will be criticisms of this constitution because it does not go far enough in this respect, and these criticisms will come mainly from opponents of any League of Nations, who will complain that the covenant is worthless because it is without teeth. We have to remember, however, that it was seventy-six years after the adoption of the Constitution of the United States before the principle was established that a sovereign State could be coerced; yet in that period a great and wonderful Government was built up which proved in the crisis that it could sustain itself. All this may come about again in respect to the League of Nations. Coercion is the last resort, not the first resort, and what the Declaration of Independence calls "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind" is something that cannot safely be defied, as Imperial Germany learned to her complete destruction.

Some Gain for Peace.

From The Tribune.

There is no direct safeguarding of peace. To each nation is reserved liberty of action. There is no limitation on armaments, no international police force under the control of the League. Every serious question is referable to home Governments for the real decision. The Executive Committee provided for is in the nature of an ambassadorial council, such as is a commonplace of diplomacy. The only advance is the slight one in the provision for meetings at stated times instead of as now on call.

But indirectly there is a gain. We have before us something in the nature of an entente cordiale such as was established between Great Britain and France when they agreed not to act together, but to confer with a view to action when trouble threatened. In the recognition of this entente principle there is a great victory for French ideas.

No sanction in the way of military power for any direct enforcement of the judgments of the League is provided, but there is a qualified economic sanction. What degree of effectiveness such pressure, if applied, would have is problematical, but in some measure it would probably be deterrent. The weakness of the article is that, should the decision not be unanimous—and it might easily not be with many nations participating in the council—there is no sanction except the protection of majority and minority reports. With respect to non-league members the action proposed is more peremptory. If it does not appear when cited or does not submit to a decision, a boycott is to be proclaimed. On the whole, therefore, there is some gain for peace.

A Half Accomplished Task.

From The Herald.

The first half of his Odyssey in quest of peace being completed, President Wilson turns homeward today. He does not leave behind him his signature to a treaty of peace, nor does he bring with him a copy of a League of Nations which has been duly ratified; but a good deal has been done in the direction of those two ends, and the draft of the constitution of a League of Nations which President Wilson read to the Peace Conference at its plenary session yesterday contains features which, if complete agreement is arrived at by the principal parties, should assure the peace of the world for many generations, if not for all time.

But the day of large standing armies and general military conscription seems to be at an end, and apparently the freedom of the seas will be safeguarded and maintained mainly by the American and British Navies.

Meanwhile the President returns temporarily to the United States with only half of his task accomplished, but with Germany apparently in a much more subdued and submissive mood than she has been at any time since she admitted that she was beaten, and the armistice is to be renewed on terms which should put it out of her power to cause fresh trouble pending the return of the President to France and the signature of the peace treaty.

Constitutional Objections.

From The Sun.

"Without an amendment of the Constitution the President and the Senate, the Government's treaty makers, can no more engage Congress to go to the Executive Council of a League of Nations for instruction as to the reasonable size of our armament and for permission, on the advice of the permanent commission established by Article 9, to extend our armament when occasion requires such extension, than they can snatch from Congress the war initiative and lodge it in an international organization abroad.

Article 12 engages the members of the League not to go to war without submitting the war quarrel either to arbitration or to the Executive Council for inquiry, and then waiting three months after an award or a decision is rendered. The Constitution of the United States contains no provision which enables Congress to divest itself of its exclusive and inalienable power to declare war.

The same general remark seems to us to apply to the provisions attempting to enforce the League's decisions by economic pressure or retribution by tariff. Not less distinctly than does the Constitution vest in Congress the war declaring power, that instrument provides that all bills for raising revenue—and bills for raising revenue are the agents of economic pressure—shall originate in the House of Representatives.

An even more striking illustration of the invasion of constitutional strongholds may be found in Article 23. Therein it is provided, amazing as the statement may seem, that if this nation becomes a member of the League it can make no valid treaty or international engagement of any sort without registering the same with the Secretary General of the League. However desirable such a project may be in the interest of open diplomacy, the fact remains that it adds another process to the processes described in the Constitution of the United States and cannot become a matter of constitutional compact until the Constitution is so amended as to permit its introduction.

PHILADELPHIA.

No Loss of National Identity.

From The Inquirer.

The document which the Commission on the League of Nations has produced is one which sane persons will accept. It has been drawn up with much skill. Its object is to keep the world free from wars; and, while that object may not always be attained with certainty, it is difficult to see how another such upheaval as the German militarists deliberately resorted to can easily be repeated.

The United States does not lose its national identity. It is not governed by a super-Government. Its principles are not disturbed. On the contrary, its love for liberty, independence, and justice is bulwarked. It takes its proper place in a family of nations not combined for selfish purposes, but to make the world indeed a safe place to live in.

BOSTON.

Great Landmark in History.

From The Herald.

The document which President Wilson read at yesterday's session of the preliminary Peace Conference is likely to rank as one of the great landmarks in human history. The world has waited more than twenty centuries for something of this sort—for a sincere attempt to bring the ideal of international peace into the realm of concrete realities. It may be that these twenty-six articles will not provide mankind with certain means of avoiding war, but their adoption will at any rate prefigure the longest step that the world has ever taken in this direction.

BALTIMORE.

World Court of Justice.

From The American.

Practically all the diplomatic and internationalist experiences of the world have been drafted upon to frame this covenant between the peoples that will stand out as the most important document in its aims that the world has ever witnessed. Without regard for its full practicability, its meaning, its purpose, and its aims are sublime. Idealism finds practical insurance, and humanity is invited to see the formation of a world court of justice and arbitration.

PROVIDENCE.

A New Feature.

From The Journal.

There is one feature of the new plan that has been little discussed if at all in the advance dispatches from Paris. This is the provision that no treaty between individual nations of the league shall be effective unless it has been registered with the league's permanent Secretariat. This embodies the growing sentiment against secret diplomacy, and in principle at least will be widely indorsed. Whether it will survive in the final and accepted draft is a question, but it certainly marks an ethical advance on the dangerous diplomatic intrigues of the past.

LOUISVILLE.

Opportunity to Criticise.

From the Courier Journal.

Those who hold that the abolition of war is the chief desideratum in the progress of men and nations will hail this plan as the most important practical proposal for accomplishing that end that has been offered. Others who think that there are some things of more concern to men and nations than the abolition of war will object to this plan, as they would object to any other plan which would operate through the limitation of national independence and, while this plan is the best that has been drafted, its involved instruments and processes of operation, of course, afford abundant material for criticism by such as are unfavorable to the general idea of a world confederation.

ST. PAUL.

No Doubt of Acceptance.

From The Pioneer Press.

The Pioneer Press entertains no doubt of the acceptance and the acquiescence of the American people to the text of the covenant for a Society of Nations—not necessarily to the covenant in the precise form in which it is now before them, but to the completed agreement which finally shall receive the sanction of the Plenary Peace Council. There can be no doubt of this eventually. It is inconceivable that the United States could put itself in the position of rejecting an agreement which is upon lines its people proposed and approved, and which, following those lines, embodies in itself the combined wisdom and judgment of the profoundest minds of the earth's leading nations.

ST. LOUIS.

Primarily a Moral Force.

From The Globe Democrat.

The League of Nations, as it is now officially outlined, is primarily a moral force. Any nation is reluctant to bind itself to go to war upon the decision of some agency outside of itself, and it is probable that a compact of that character could not receive the support of the people involved. No doubt the commission at Paris has gone as far as is now practical in providing the means of enforcement of the agreements of the League. But we are inclined to think that the main value of the League, both in the preservation of peace and in the promotion of the welfare of mankind, will be found in the machinery of international co-operation which it creates, and in the habit of mutual consideration it will establish. It is sufficient for the moment that it's born, and no birth of history, save one, is of greater importance to mankind.

EARLY OPPONENTS WON TO PROJECT

Great Difficulties Had to be Overcome in Framing Complete Plan.

NO HARD FEELINGS REMAIN

Much Importance Attached to Provision for Admitting Neutral and Enemy States.

PARIS, Feb. 14, (Associated Press.)—Now that the project for the creation of a League of Nations has been successfully launched, it may be proper to tell of some of the difficulties encountered and to indicate the status of some of the great issues remaining to be adjusted by the Peace Conference.

While there was unanimity as to the desirability of a League of Nations, it soon developed that some delegates, skeptical of its immediate efficiency, desired to maintain the old order of balances of power and protected frontiers until the new system had demonstrated its capacity to meet the needs of peace-loving nations. Patient endeavor and many long sessions of the Supreme Council itself, and afterward of the special commission created to deal with the subject, were necessary to establish to the satisfaction of these threatened dissenters the impossibility of continuing the old order while installing the new.

It was only within the last week that the difficulties facing the League of Nations were overcome, although with some misgivings. The doubting nations were induced to try the experiment of relying upon the honor and common interest of the other nations to insure the success of the project. Then there was the difference over the question of mandatories for backward peoples. Rather heated arguments developed at times, but these differences also were adjusted with unanimity in the end.

Various big issues presented themselves, some of which were skillfully diverted to commissions which are to report afterward to the League of Nations, while others were rather suddenly disapproved in the light of the development of the plan for the League of Nations.

Of such was the vexed question of freedom of the seas that jeopardized the support of Great Britain. It was realized that with a perfect League of Nations there would be no neutrals, and that consequently no questions could arise as to freedom of the seas in time of war, while in time of peace equitable relations between nations were guaranteed by special provisions of the covenant.

Enemy State Can't Enter Yet.

Finally, after these discussions were over, it can be stated that no hard feelings remained. There was absolute unanimity, so far as the special commission was concerned, and those nations which at first had doubted the efficiency of the project came out of the discussions in an attitude of its firmest advocates.

Looking to the future, the special commission attaches much importance to the provision made for the admission to the League of neutral and enemy States.

The enemy States are known to be anxious to adhere, but the commission has taken every precaution to make sure that they enter with proper motives and prepared to live up to the obligations of the league.

The point was made that such adhesion should be encouraged, as it was highly desirable, having at heart the interest of the whole world, that the industries of enemy States and neutral countries, which suffered from the blockade, be set in motion at the earliest possible moment.

This decision was not based upon sympathy for Germany, but upon the conviction that the safety of Continental Europe, and perhaps of the world, depended upon turning the German population into ways of industry, so that it might be able to produce goods to pay off the enormous indemnities which are to be imposed upon it. It was the conviction that otherwise Germany might soon drift into the condition of Russia, and that there would be no responsible Government with which the peace treaty could be concluded. In that case it would be necessary for the Peace Congress to continue indefinitely in existence, awaiting the social and economic reorganization that might follow an era of Bolshevism lasting, perhaps, for years.

Russia itself was regarded by the delegates as the great problem yet to be settled, although the hope was expressed that the Prinkipo conference would be realized and something like peaceful relations restored between the factions. It was regarded as necessary at the outset to convince the Bolshevist elements that the Peace Conference had no desire to force upon them settlements of debts and other such matters as conditions of a successful conference.

Rapid Work on Last Day.

Yesterday was one of the most eventful days of the Peace Conference, and the Presidents' departure was for a time in the balance pending agreement on the League.

The President was not present when the final result was reached late in the day. He had attended the morning session, which passed only six articles, leaving twenty uncompleted.

The President then decided to attend the afternoon session of the Supreme War Council, leaving Lord Robert Cecil to preside over the League of Nations Commission. It was under Lord Robert's skilful guidance that the final session completed its task at 6:30 o'clock Friday night.

The members separated with an outburst of good feeling and congratulation after the period of tension through which they had just passed.

President Wilson went to American headquarters last night, and was congratulated heartily on the outcome.

The agreement on the constitution for the League was effected on President Wilson's lucky day—the 13th—and there are just twice thirteen articles in the document.

SAYS MEXICO FAVORS LEAGUE OF NATIONS

De la Barra Outlines Program of Rehabilitation for Nation Based on Friendship with Us.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—Mexico needs a peace not imposed by arms but an organic peace, declared Francisco de la Barra, former Provisional President of Mexico, in a statement to The Associated Press today. He said that Mexico had a direct interest in participating in a practical manner with the league's organizers in the great work of strengthening right and justice.

"I know," he added, "that this remedy will not cure all the evils and that, unfortunately, the time has not yet come to 'substitute the plowshare for the sword,' but it is useful to encourage the general effort toward orderly life in each country as well as order in international life.

"For countries in the same condition as Mexico a League of Nations will represent another guarantee in addition to the ordinary guarantees contemplated by international law. Mexico, the same as other neutrals, has not been asked thus far to participate in the league, but opinion in Mexico is favorable to the idea and will show itself from now on not only in the spirit animating the Government, but also through all organs of its national life.

"We Mexicans must show the entire world that we deserve as a nation to participate in the 'formal concert of the powers,' as President Wilson has called it. In this solemn moment of history every Mexican must earnestly consider the special obligations imposed upon us by the present situation.

"Mexico needs peace, not a peace imposed by arms, but an organic peace, if I may so call it, which must be the result of free expression under a legal, firm, and democratic régime in which the liberty of the press, liberty of meeting, and liberty of conscience and of franchise will contribute to the adequate solution of the problems of labor, of the land, and of the nation.

"All this must have as a basis a feeling of frank cordiality and friendship with the United States and the Allies, and not only in appearance. In this way will the necessary guarantees be given to our own countrymen and to foreigners."

LOOKS EFFECTIVE, SAYS TAFT.

Reads Between Trains in Montana Part of the Covenant.

MILES CITY, Mon., Feb. 14.—"This appears to be a very effective document, though there are many things left to be worked out later," said Ex-President William H. Taft tonight, after a hurried reading of the first eighteen articles of the covenant for the League of Nations.

While reading the first articles during the minutes that his train waited here, Mr. Taft remarked that they appeared to deal mainly with generalities, but he nodded approval as he read the sections which referred to the manner in which a covenant breaking should be treated and to disarmament.

WANTS ENVOY NAMED SOON.

London Times Says Lord Reading's Stay Here Will Be Short.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The London Times in an editorial referring to the announcement that Lord Reading is about to resume his duties at Washington, points out that it is well known that he does not return to the United States to remain there, his duties as Lord Chief Justice requiring him to settle in London before many monthhs are over.

"In these circumstances," says the Times, "satisfaction at his return cannot but be diluted by anxiety as to who his successor will be. All intelligence from America points to the urgent need of an early and adequate appointment. Lord Reading left Washington as long ago as last July for a flying visit home, and he has been detained until this week by a series of unexpected duties in London and Paris. Doubtless these duties have been of great importance to the affairs of the Allies, but his failure to return to the United States has not prevented serious heart-searching among our friends across the Atlantic.

"There is abundant evidence of dissatisfaction there that during the last six critical months the Embassy in Washington should have been left without a head. Evidence accumulates by every American mail, until it is obvious that, however much modern means of swift intercourse may have impaired the independence and hence the prestige of Ambassadors, Americans are convinced that their local conditions require as one of the keystones of really satisfactory Anglo-American relations a first-class British representative in Washington.

"It is to be hoped, therefore, that the Government will not procrastinate over the selection of Lord Reading's successor. The selection is doubtless a difficult one. It has to be decided, first of all, whether we are to continue the American practice of choosing an Ambassador from the ranks of public men at home, or whether we are to revert to the appointment of a diplomatist de carrière. In either case, two things are certain: The Washington Embassy will require the best that we can give it, and will require it at once. Whatever Lord Reading may find to do on his return to Washington, nothing in our opinion can be more important than that he should make the Government realize the necessity of choosing an adequate successor as quickly as possible."

DOUBT RUMANIAN REVOLT.

Paris Lacks Official Confirmation of Reported Rising.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—In discussing rumors of a revolt in Rumania, the Petit Parisien in an editorial says that the reports should be received with caution. It says that official circles have no knowledge of an insurrection.

A Bucharest dispatch dated Tuesday has been received by the Rumanian Legation here. It made no mention of any trouble in Rumania.

Vienna and Budapest reports received in Berlin on Wednesday said that a general insurrection had broken out in Rumania. It was added that there had been serious disorders in Bucharest and that King Ferdinand had been wounded slightly in an attack on the royal palace.

TO PLAN RED CROSS FUTURE

International Conference Will Follow Signing of Peace Treaty.

GENEVA, Feb. 14.—The meeting of the allied Red Cross Societies and the Red Cross International Committee has decided to invite all committees to report on plans for the transfer of the efforts of the organization from a war to a peace footing, notably in the direction of such activities as child welfare, public health, the fight against tuberculosis, and the assistance of victims of the war.

These reports will be considered by an international conference of Red Cross delegates, which it is proposed to summon to meet here a month after the signing of the treaty of peace. This meeting has the indorsement of the allied Governments. At that time a plan of action will be elaborated.

LONDON WELCOMES DRAFT OF LEAGUE

Considered to Mark a Great Step Toward the Avoidance of War.

RELIEF ON FREEDOM OF SEAS

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Feb. 15.—The London papers this morning greet the League of Nations draft with hearty sympathy and find much to commend in its specific clauses.

The Daily Chronicle says editorially:

"The draft of the League of Nations covenant contains no surprises and strikes us as a very hopeful and satisfactory rendering of the conclusions to which opinion throughout the allied world is coming round."

The Daily Mail says that the vital question is how far the new league is likely to prevent war and guarantee its members against a treacherous attack such as that delivered by the Germans on Belgium in defiance of solemn treaties and assurances.

"On points of detail," it proceeds, "there will doubtless be an improvement later, but the general outline will everywhere be received with sympathy. It represents a noble effort to achieve a great ideal."

The Daily News welcomes the proposal that existing agreements inconsistent with the spirit and purpose of the League shall be abrogated. It continues:

"There can be no infallible proof of the effectiveness of the League until it actually is in being and at work, but the Paris draft is in itself a convincing answer to those critics who saw in the whole conception of a League merely the dream of amiable idealists. It is manifest that the League is a profoundly practical proposition which, though it may not abolish war in a week, will beyond all question make so smooth the way of peace and so hard the path of war that fear of impending hostilities will immediately be lifted from the earth."

The Daily News thinks that there are three points, around which criticism may be expected to centre, namely, the constitution of the League, the voting strength of its members and the arrangements for the admission of new States. The paper remarks:

"It is important that the League should be no mere alliance of the Entente powers and the sooner neutral and enemy States can be accepted into membership the sooner will the League reach its maximum effectiveness."

The Daily Express calls the covenant a "Magna Charta of the world." It notes that many of the extreme ideas with which the League project was encumbered in its early stages of development have been toned down.

"The dangerous dogma about the freedom of the seas," it says, "seems to have evolved into a statement that the League shall 'secure and maintain freedom of transit and equitable treatment for the commerce of all States.' One clause suggests that offensive and defensive alliances such as that, for instance, between Japan and England, shall be abrogated, but this is only where such treaties contravene the fundamental principles of the League.

"Taken altogether, the covenant is one pregnant with good for the peace and prosperity of the world. It has justified the labor spent on it and in its modified form it is an indication that President Wilson has learned a great deal since he came to Europe."

Morning Post Is Critical.

The Morning Post is severely critical of the covenant. In part it says:

"It is obvious that arms and the readiness to use them in the common cause has constituted the sole claim to eminence in this constitutional hierarchy.

"It amounts to the recognition of the deplorable fact that in the last event violence is the only means of meeting violence, and force the only means of overcoming force.

"It opens to Germany to work for qualification in this League or to form another League of its own in which latter case we should have two Leagues, corresponding in a rough sort of way to the present division of powers.

"The armament of a nation depends not so much upon the arms, prepared before the outbreak of war, as the capacity and means for manufacture of these arms. Thus, for example, a power like Germany, which produced before the war, twice as much steel as we produced, could count upon producing twice as many weapons as we could produce. So [illegible] the weapon of blockade a power like the United States, which produces all it needs within its own borders, is not much threatened by a weapon which would be fatal to a nation like ourselves which depends upon sea communications for the means of existence. Thus all these measures which have the appearance of impartiality in reality support the strongest industrial and economic power.

"The scheme makes provision only for national wars but history and experience prove that the most deadly fatal and cruel wars are those between classes or factions within a nation, as, for example, the war in Russia today or the civil war in America."

The Morning Post finds one or two points on which it can congratulate the framers of the covenant, saying:

"It achieves a remarkable likeness in several main respects to our old and trusty friend, the Entente, enlarged and consolidated by the formal entry of the United States. If it does not give us an effectual means of preventing war, it gives us at least what we hope and trust may be a solid alliance between the five powers which count, France, Italy, United States, Japan, and the British empire, and that in itself is no mean achievement in the cause of peace."

PRESIDENT ACCEPTS SHARP'S RESIGNATION

Ambassador to Serve Till Successor Qualifies—Vance McCormick's Name Mentioned.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—President Wilson has accepted the resignation of William Graves Sharp as Ambassador to France, to take effect when a successor qualifies. This was revealed by correspondence between the President and the Ambassador made public tonight at the White House without comment.

There was no information in official circles tonight as to whom the President had in mind for the Paris post, but at the time the resignation of Vance McCormick as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee was made known by the Associated Press last month it was said that Mr. McCormick would become Ambassador to France.

Mr. McCormick is now in Paris, having been summoned there by the President more than a month ago for work in connection with the Peace Conference. When he left Washington he told friends that he expected this work would occupy him for several months at least.

Mr. Sharp's letter to the President, made public tonight, was under date of Dec. 19, and revealed that he had first asked to be relieved immediately after the signing of the armistice, his resignation to become effective before the end of 1918. This request was more formally renewed in the letter of Dec. 19, and brought a reply from the President under date of Dec. 21 accepting the resignation and asking that Mr. Sharp remain in Paris until his successor could qualify. This Mr. Sharp has agreed to do.

The letter from the President accepting Mr. Sharp's resignation, written at the Palais Murat in Paris, said:

"In view of what you have so fully explained to me with regard to the circumstances which make you feel it your duty to retire from your present post and give your close personal attention to business affairs which depend upon you, I cannot in conscience refuse to accept your resignation as Ambassador of the United States to the Government of France, and I do so with the understanding that the resignation is to take effect when your successor qualifies.

"I am sincerely obliged to you that you are willing to make this arrangement and to remain in France until your successor can actually take your place. It is an arrangement which relieves me of a good deal of anxiety, because I should not wish the highly important post at Paris to be vacant for even a short time.

"Let me tell you again how highly I have valued the unusual services which you have rendered our Government. They have, at every turn of the critical events of recent years been of the highest value, and it has been a source of confidence and of strength to feel that we had such a representative here. I am expressing not only my personal feeling, but the feeling of all those who have been familiar with your service here. You are certainly entitled to your release and I assure you that you carry with you the affectionate regard and confidence of those who have had the pleasure of being your co-laborers for the Government."

MORE AMERICAN TROOPS MOVE INTO GERMANY

Going to Berlin and Then to Prison Camps to Care for Russians.

COBLENZ, Feb. 14, (Associated Press.)—Two special trains carrying sixty officers and 300 men left Coblenz today for Brandenburg and other prison camps where they are to undertake supervision of the care of Russian prisoners. The Americans will go to Berlin and there will be assigned to thirty camps in each of which there are from 1,200 to 2,000 Russians imprisoned.

Members of the contingent were picked from men of the First and Second Army, many of them speaking Russian and also German. They arrived in Coblenz early on Friday from areas beyond the Meuse where they were assembled. The Americans are [illegible], but carry bedding and rations for sixty days.

The duties of the Americans will include the improvement of conditions generally, while German soldiers will guard the prisoners as heretofore. Two officers and twenty men will be assigned to each camp.

Army and Navy Experts Report Hammond Device a Success.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Army and navy experts have reported as a success the device of John Hays Hammond, Jr., for radio control of surface craft to be sent laden with explosives against enemy ships, and predict similar results with submerged craft showing above water only wireless antennae.

Results of tests were made public today in connection with the new Fortifications Appropriation bill, which carries $417,000 for construction of an experimental submerged boat.

ARMISTICE PROTEST URGED AT WEIMAR

EBERT BARS BERNSTORFF

Ex-Envoy Not to Go to Peace Conference—President Disclaims Draft Menace.

WEIMAR, Feb. 14.—At the meeting of the German National Assembly today Herr Huitzé put forward a motion inviting the Assembly to adopt a resolution containing a declaration that the German people would never accept a peace of violence and protesting against the "exaggerated" conditions of the armistice as tending to ruin Germany.

The resolution also protests against the denial of self-determination to Alsace-Lorraine.

WEIMAR, Feb. 13, (Associated Press.)—Count von Bernstorff will not go to the Peace Conference as a German delegate; Germany plans, for the time being at least, a people's army on the basis of general conscription; Germany will announce within a few days her intention to carry out complete disarmament and demobilization, and a commission made up of the Centrist, Democratic, and Socialist parties is now discussing details of the new governmental program.

These points were made by Friedrich Ebert, the new President of Germany, in an informal talk with foreign newspaper men today. They answered questions of American and English correspondents, asked after he had read a formal, innocuous statement which virtually followed the lines of his address on Wednesday, in which he emphasized Germany's intention to rehabilitate herself.

President Ebert was informality itself. Seating himself at a large table after having shaken hands with the score of correspondents present, he read his statement rapidly, and then signified his willingness to answer questions, an opportunity of which the newspaper men made immediate use.

Says Army Is for Defense.

The question of disarmament was first raised, since reports from the Peace Conference in Paris indicated that it was occupying a large place in discussion there. President Ebert frankly astonished his hearers by his declaration that a commission was already working on the problem.

He said that Germany in future was going to have only an army of defense. It was at the very end of his talk that he admitted that this guard would be raised by conscription, and he left the room before further details could be elicited.

The assurance that the borders of the country would be protected, he said, was absolutely essential, although he would welcome universal disarmament, which would make such protection unnecessary.

He announced that an understanding had already been reached by which various branches of industry would be united and operated socialistically, adding that only monopolized business would be socialized. In answer to a question relative to foodstuffs in Germany, he said he regarded the situation as very gloomy, since the conditions were very hard. Germany, he said, had but a minimum number of foreign securities with which she could purchase food.

Sees Hope of Rehabilitation.

"Our gold, as the whole world knows, has in large part gone to the Entente," he said. "All the gold and securities now on hand would not suffice to cover more than the most urgent needs.

"Germany would be glad to repay honorably and uprightly as soon as possible. If food and raw materials are furnished and Germany is given assistance toward rehabilitation, I believe that the economic and general situation can be brought into an orderly and progressive path."

Count Brockdorf-Rantzau, the Forengn Minister in the Provisional Cabinet; Dr. Eduard David, the President of the National Assembly, and many persons experienced on economic lines, President Ebert said, would probably attend the Peace Conference for Germany, "but not Bernstorff," he added instantly to a questioner. It was the first time that Count von Bernstorff's participation, which had been advertised freely, was denied authoritatively.

The German peace delegates, President Ebert continued, would appear with definite proposals, including plans for a League of Nations, workingmen's protective laws, and a court to decide international disputes.

SCHEIDEMANN WARNS OF 'GERMANY TRAMPLED'

Says She Would Be as Dangerous to the World as Before—Trusts Wilson's Policy.

WEIMAR, Feb. 13, (Associated Press.)—Philipp Scheidemann, Chancellor in the new German Provisional Government, speaking in the National Assembly today, elaborated upon the Government's recent statement of its policy. His speech was an effective one and the representatives of all the parties in the Assembly, from right to left, listened to him attentively and for the most part sympathetically.

The Independent Socialists from time to time, however, interrupted the speaker with sarcastic remarks or laughed derisively, but the remainder of the House was in no temper to listen to these interruptions and there were many who joined in the frequent attempts to repress them by free use of the sibilant sound. This hushing process was particularly directed against one of the Independent Socialist woman members.

Herr Scheidemann gained the greatest applause when he declared that President Wilson's program had been wholly accepted by the Government and by a reference he made to the retention by the allies of the German prisoners.

He sharply attacked the advocates of a minority dictatorship, upon whom he laid all the blame for all the bloodshed in the early days of the German revolution. The Independent Socialists who entered the Cabinet were, said Scheidemann, "cursed with inherited sin against the spirit of democracy."

An interruption by the Independents at this point was drowned by the applause from the remainder of the House, while at other times the speaker's utterances were liberally applauded.

Warns of "Germany Trampled."

BASLE, Feb. 14.—In addressing the National Assembly at Weimar yesterday, Chancellor Scheidemann declared that the first essential of the Government's policy was the maintenance of unity in the nation by means of a strong central authority.

The immediate restoration of peace, he said, came next, which should be secured by adherence to the program of President Wilson and the rejection of a peace of violence. The program, he said, called for the restoration of the German colonies and the admission of Germany to the League of Nations with equal rights.

After reference to other points in the program as it related to foreign affairs, the Chancellor outlined the domestic and economic ideas of the Government. There would be a considerable reduction of the period of service in the new army to be created, and the troops now in barracks, including the 1899 class, would be demobilized.

Many reforms were planned, the Chancellor said, including better sanitation and housing, protective measures for the young, the regulation of supply and demand in labor and the development of agriculture. War profits would be confiscated to carry out these reforms, while the tax on incomes of more than a certain amount would be doubled and a tax on large fortunes would be levied for the purpose of scaling down the national debt.

"The era of world domination is over," said the Chancellor at one point in his speech, "and no power can, without let or hindrance, risk the violation of the equal political rights of all."

Urging the maintenance of the Wilson program, the Chancellor said that if that program were followed Germany would be the Fatherland of all who desired to be Germans, and that they would be free Germans. Germany trampled under foot, however, would be as dangerous to all the peoples of the world as the Pan Germans had been.

Regarding the co-operation of the nation as a whole with the individual States, the Chancellor declared himself in favor of the principle of "unity in liberty."

Says Bismarck Policy Failed.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 13.—Philipp Scheidemann attacks Prince Bismarck's conception of foreign affairs in an interview with the Zeitung am Mittag of Berlin. He says that Bismarck's policy was a failure almost everywhere, adding:

"We had to pay for its mistakes in North Schleswig and in Alsace and Lorraine."

"The policy of new Germany," he continues, "must be based, not as Bismarck planned, on opposition to, but in harmony with Austria; not on the slender pillar of egotistical might of a single federal government, but on the broad democratic basis of the united will of all the German tribes.

"The League of Nations has warmest supporters in Germany. We hope America will succeed in convincing other countries that it is to the interest of the entire world that, instead of a heap of ruins in the centre of Europe, there should be a newly constructed social democracy.

"Not in Russia, but in Germany, will the Socialist solution of the labor question be found. The heavier the conditions imposed upon Germany, the quicker will Bolshevism spread. World chaos is preferable to slow death by torture.

"The Entente may conclude a peace corresponding to its interests, but for us there are limits beyond which it is impossible to go. The moment might therefore arise when we must leave the conference table, not to take up arms again, for that is impossible, but to place the responsibility for the terrible results of such a peace on the shoulders of those who think they can answer to history for it."

The interview concludes with an expression of deep regret that Germany's position is almost nowhere appreciated abroad. It is admitted that all Germans, even those who formerly doubted American disinterestedness, "now see that America seriously intends to fight for the policy of reconciliation of the peoples."

FIGHTING AT BRESLAU; NEW REVOLT PLANNED

Radek Papers Reveal Plot for German Rising in March, with Russian Invasion.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 14.—There has been violent fighting at Breslau, where the soldiers have been attempting to prevent strikers from releasing imprisoned Spartacides. Ten persons have been killed.

Papers and letters found in the home of Karl Radek, the Russian Bolshevist emissary whose arrest by the Berlin police was announced yesterday, indicated that he was planning a Spartacide uprising in March, not only in Berlin but in the entire country at the same time, according to Berlin dispatches received here.

A Bolshevist army was planning to attack the east frontier at the date fixed for the uprising, it is said. Radek is reported to have been disguised in a German officer's uniform on many occasions.

BERLIN, Feb. 12, (Associated Press.)—The Red Flag, the Spartacide organ, in a detailed and specific indictment today, recites the episodes and the names of the men alleged to have been involved in connection with the deaths of Dr. Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, the Spartacide leaders, on the night of Jan. 15.

The allegations set forth the individual part played by each private and officer in what the newspaper describes as "the two murders." Lieut. Capt. Pfluck-Hastung is charged with having killed Dr. Liebknecht and First Lieutenant Vogel with having killed Rosa Luxemburg. Privates Rundge, Treger, and Zöttinger of the Mounted Rifle Guards are named as accomplices, and Captain Pabst is accused of having protected the instigators.

Director Ott of the Eden Hotel, to which Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg were taken, is charged by the newspaper with having facilitated the crimes and with having induced the hotel employes to commit perjury by misrepresenting facts.

Captain Pfluck-Hastung is charged with having fired the first shot at Liebknecht when the automobile in which the latter was being taken to jail stopped in the Tiergarten. Rundge, the paper says, beat Rosa Luxemburg with the butt of a rifle, and Lieutenant Vogel is charged with having fired the fatal shot at her just as the automobile left the Eden Hotel.

PLEAD FOR FREEING PRISONERS

Germans Ask Dutch Sympathy—Expect Austrian Union.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 9.—By means of a large advertisement in the pro-German Vaderland, the "German people" make an appeal to "the conscience of the world" for the freeing of the German prisoners still in enemy hands. The advertisement states that 800 German civilians are prisoners of war still in the hands of the enemy and, according to the enemy press, are likely to be retained after peace.

In order to attain their freedom a Reichsbund for German Prisoners has been founded. The appeal is made to Germans in neutral countries to join a Dutch group and also to "Netherlanders who were friendly in regard to the exchange of war prisoners" to show sympathy by joining the league.

The Vienna Neue Freie Presse states that in well informed circles in Germany Austria's annexation to Germany is considered a fait accompli and that Germany is ready to give support to both Austria and Hungary in the solution of their economic problems.

The Weser Zeitung of Bremen asserts that the German Austrian Minister in Berlin has been taken off the list as a foreign diplomat and has now become the representative of a single State of the German Republic at the Weimar Assembly. The paper rejoices over this fact.

STRIKERS SCATTER SHOPPERS.

Invade Big Berlin Stores and Persuade Clerks to Quit Work.

BERLIN, Feb. 13, (Associated Press.)—The big department stores and specialty shops in Central Berlin, whose packing and delivery forces are on strike, attempted to remain open today, but were forced to close by the strikers.

The shops were entered by the strikers, who dispersed the shoppers and induced the clerks to join the walkout. Virtually every shop in Leipzigerstrasse is closed.

Late this afternoon the strikers were parading the downtown streets and holding open-air meetings. No untoward incidents have been reported.

The employers and the arbitration court met again today to adjust the wage demands of the strikers, of whom there are 20,000.

FACE MUNITION SHORTAGE

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LAUSANNE, Feb. 13.—The only positive achievement of the Bolsheviki has been the creation of a strong army. At a time when the entire civilised world is striving to realise disarmament, Lenine and Trotzky are reviving militarism. I am able to send the first comprehensive statement concerning the command and organization of the red army.

My information was furnished by Stupak, a former member of the Executive Committee of the Duma, and one of the Russian delegates at Berne. In Moscow, Stupak says, the strength of the entire red army, which is at present fighting on five fronts—the Don district, the Northern Caucasus, the Ukraine, Poland and Lithuania, and Siberia—is estimated at 750,000 men.

Trotzky is, of course, nominally in command by virtue of his position as Commissary for War, although he was never a soldier. He now invariably wears a fantastic uniform of his own invention and appears on horseback at parades in Moscow, where he distributes crosses of the Legion of the Revolution. the Bolshevist military decoration, among the soldiers, and presents red flags to regiments which have distinguished themselves.

Vacetis in Actual Command.

Trotzky, however, does not control military operations, which are directed by General Vacetis, who is in supreme command of all the Bolshevist armies. Vacetis, who was a Colonel on the staff of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaievitch, is a Lett and a strategist of repute. His general headquarters are at Arzamas, near Kazan, where Trotzky frequently visits him.

In military matters Vacetis dominates Trotzky completely. He is described as a striking looking, clean shaven man who may well be pursuing ambitious aims of his own and whose loyalty to the Bolshevist faith is doubtful.

Vacetis's principal lieutenants are Antonoff, who commands the Bolshevist forces opposed to General Krasnoff in the Don district and who fought as an officer in the Russo-Japanese war, and Horokin, a former school teacher who displayed remarkable military talents in the Czar's army during the war and is in command in the Northern Caucasus against General Denikin's troops.

The Bolshevist operations in the Ukraine are conducted by Stupin, one of the late Czar's generals.

All these leaders are efficient, and while by no means fanatical adepts in the Lenine doctrine, they take a certain pride in their military exploits and the exercise of their profession. Their staff is composed of former officers of the Czar's army who are compelled to serve in fear of death.

Trotzky Threatens Officers.

To 1,200 retired officers whom he had imprisoned and starved into submission in Moscow Trotzky declared roundly:

"Don't imagine you are going to have a chance of making reactionary propaganda in my army. Each of you will have two guardian angels constantly beside you."

With these words he pointed significantly to his Chinese bodyguard.

There is only one punishment in Lenine's army for offenses against discipline, and that is death. Nevertheless the soldiers, who are mostly peasants and not workmen, have been lately growing unreliable, and in some cases have refused to suppress peasant revolts, forcing Lenine to dispatch Chinese mercenaries to subdue the disaffected villages. Of these Chinese there are about 60,000 in all.

The Bolsheviki are threatened with a shortage of ammunition. Even with all their despotic ruthlessness Lenine and Trotzky cannot get the workmen of the munition factories to work. All the old plants are closed and the Red Army is still supplied with ammunition from the immense stocks accumulated during the last months of the Czar's régime.

These supplies are sufficient for six months more, but then they will be exhausted if military operations are not interrupted. For this reason and many others Lenine is anxious to obtain a breathing space by concluding a temporary armistice with his adversaries.

'RAVISHED ARMENIA' IN FILM.

Mrs. Harriman Speaks at Showing of Turkish and German Devastation.

Many persons prominent in society attended a private showing of "Ravished Armenia," the official photo-drama of the National Motion Picture Committee of the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, held yesterday in the east ballroom of the Hotel Commodore. The regular showing starts tomorrow afternoon at the Hotel Plaza and will be continued for ten days.

The first half of the picture consists of four reels of scenes showing Armenia as it was before Turkish and German devastation, and led up to the deportation of priests and thousands of families into the desert. One of the concluding scenes showed young Armenian women flogged for their refusal to enter Turkish harems and depicted the Turkish slave markets.

Aurora Mardiganian, whose experiences in Armenia furnished the story on which the picture was founded, and who was injured in an accident that occurred during the making of the picture, was carried into the ballroom on a chair.

Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Chairman of the National Motion Picture Committee, delivered an address in which she said that Miss Mardiganian had come to this country because she was a typical case selected form among her people as one of many victims of the terrible desolation wrought in Armenia by the Turk. The young woman, said Mrs. Harriman, established direct contact between a stricken people and a generous human America.

"The whole purpose of the picture is to acquaint America with ravished Armenia," said Mrs. Harriman, "to visualize conditions so that there will be no misunderstanding in the mind of any one about the terrible things which have transpired. It was deemed essential that the leaders, social and intellectual, should first learn the story, but later the general public shall be informed. It is proposed that before this campaign of information is completed, as many adults as possible shall know the story of Armenia, and the screen was selected as the medium because it reaches the millions, where the printed word reaches the thousands."

FEARS PACKERS' POWER TO NULLIFY INQUIRIES

Murdock Says Even Hoover Could Not Reach "a Great Malefactor" in Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Victor Murdock, member of the Federal Trade Commission, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee today that he feared the five big packers had acquired so much power that even the United States Government might not be strong enough to combat them

"Even Food Administrator Hoover," Mr. Murdock said, "could not reach into Chicago and take the license of a great malefactor, although he could rescind the license of one of the little fellows."

The testimony of the Trade Commissioner followed his statement that facts gathered during the commission's investigation of the meat packing industry had been turned over to the Department of Justice, and that he had no doubt that proceedings under the anti-trust law would result.

Mr. Murdock expressed fear that the legislative branch of the Government would deal weakly instead of vigorously with the packers. His statement that the latter were well aware what bodies would consider their case, and that they would try to see to it that "their friends" got on these committees as vacancies occurred, brought sharp questioning from members of the committee. Mr. Murdock said he did not mean that any improper means would be used, and that he did not in any way mean to infer that there had been "stuffing or padding" of committees in the past.

OUR ARCHANGEL FORCE IN GOOD CONDITION

LONDON, Feb. 14.—An official report on the condition of the troops in Northern Russia, dated Feb. 1 and made public by the War Office today, says that the medical arrangements are excellent.

The health of the American troops, the report says, is very good, and less than 4 per cent. are in hospitals from all causes. The Winter has been mild, the food suitable and sufficient, and the sanitation has been improved as much as possible, the report adds. There have been no infectious diseases.

There are hospital accommodations, it is added, for 20 per cent. of the American and allied troops, and they are being increased. There is an ambulance train for 100 cases, and 100 ambulances and sleighs. The trying period of the climatic conditions on the Murmansk coast has passed. The report says that special clothing has been provided and that the soldiers will be no more inconvenienced than are Englishmen during a cold spell in England.

THE SIMPLE LIFE

The exigencies of war forced many to adopt a simpler mode of living than they had known for many a day.

But it was soon found that they were healthier and happier for the change—they were driven back to Nature.

Now that the war is over, what was formerly obligatory has become preferable—the simple life has come to stay.

About Fifty Million sensible people sought this sane and simple life at CHILDS last year—and found it.

Plain, wholesome foods, such as griddle cakes, milk, eggs, cereals and vegetables, are specialties at CHILDS.

A cereal with milk, some crispy bacon with eggs, a bit of hot toast, and a cup of CHILDS coffee—a breakfast fit for a president.

Protest to New York State Republican Committee From Women Voters' Anti-Suffrage Party

WHEREAS: The suffrage victory in New York State was not a deliberate expression of the popular will, but a political fluke due to extraordinary temporary conditions, one of which was the use of the Republican machine as a suffrage tool by the then Governor of New York State; and

WHEREAS: Indignation of Republican men and women at this misuse of the Republican organization was one of the chief factors that resulted in said Governor running 180,000 behind his ticket "Up-State," and in his polling 16,000 fewer votes in New York City with men and women voting in 1918 than he received in 1916 from men alone; and

WHEREAS: New York State is now represented on the men's Republican National Committee by Mr. Herbert Parsons, a pronounced suffragist, (who advised the pickets that what they got from politicians they would get through fear,) and on the so-called "Women's Committee" by Miss Mary Garrett Hay of the National Woman's Suffrage Association; and

WHEREAS: There is reason to believe that the so-called Woman's National Committee, due to Mr. Hays, is really a suffrage committee, (the official organ of the National Woman's Party reporting on January 4th that said Committee "planned to take up work for the immediate passage of the Federal Suffrage Amendment in the Senate"); and

WHEREAS: According to the official organ of the National Woman's Party, Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, picket leader, was the only person not a delegate called upon to speak at the Chicago meeting of the National Republican Committee, January 10th; and

WHEREAS: This deliberate singling out of aggressive suffragists as representative Republicans is a direct affront to the great majority, and will be resented as such, not only by women voters in this State, but by Republican men and women throughout the country who oppose coercive minority tactics; THEREFORE, BE IT

RESOLVED: That Chairman Hays be urged to refrain from such future activities as would continue to identify the Republican Party in the minds of the people as a manipulated vehicle for "Votes for Women," and inevitably create two factions within the ranks of the party.

OMSK ARCHBISHOP TELLS OF ATROCITIES

Gruesome Picture of Bolshevist Rule Drawn in Letter to Archbishop of Canterbury.

IS READ IN CONVOCATION

Details Confirmed by Information Reaching the Foreign Office, English Primate Says.

Copyright, 1919, by The New York Times Company.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—An appalling arraignment of the Bolshevist régime was read by the Archbishop of Canterbury in the convocation today. It was contained in the following message from the Archbishop of Omsk, President of the supreme administration of the Orthodox Church:

"Having seized supreme power in Russia in 1917 the Maximalists proceeded to destroy not only the cultivated classes of society but have also swept away religion itself, the representatives of the Church, and religious monuments venerated by all.

"The Kremlin cathedrals of Moscow and those in the towns of Yaroslav and Simferopol have been sacked and many churches have been defiled. Historical sacristies as well as the famous libraries of the Patriarichs of Moscow and Petrograd have been pillaged. Vladimer, Metropolitan of Kiev, twenty Bishops, and hundreds of priests have been assassinated. Before killing them the Bolsheviki cut off the limbs of their victims, some of whom were buried alive. Religious processions followed by great masses of people at Petrograd, Toula, Kharkov, and Eoligalitch were fired upon.

"Wherever the Bolsheviki are in power the Christian Church is persecuted with even greater ferocity than in the first three centuries of the Christian era. Nuns are being violated, women made common property and license, and the lowest passions are rampant. One sees everywhere death, misery, and famine. The population is utterly cast down and subjected to most terrifying experiences. Some are purified by their sufferings, but others succumb.

"Only in Serbia and the region of the Ural Mountains, where the Bolsheviki have been expelled, is the existence of the civil and religious population protected under the aegis of law and order.

"It is with most profound sadness that we acquaint your Grace with the misery from which millions of real Russians are suffering. In the name of human solidarity, and in the spirit of Christian brotherhood, we trust we shall be able to count upon your Grace's compassion."

The Primate, who reported that he had sent an appropriate reply, said it was one of those matters in which they were pitifully helpless and unable, as far as the Church was concerned, to take any practical step that would be of avail to their brothers who were suffering in these appalling ways. Apparently there was no question as to the truth of the facts contained in it. Further information had reached the Foreign Office, which, unhappily, was of a kind that prevented them regarding the matter as in any way doubtful.

TAFT DEPRECATES BOOM.

Tells His Friends Not to Press Presidency uQestion Now

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 14.—When asked point blank if he would accept the Republican nomination for President if it were offered to him by the next National Convention of the party, ex-President Taft, who is attending the Northern Congress of the League to Enforce Peace, replied:

"That question isn't fair, because I don't know. I can't say now. There are no circumstances or conditions to warrant the thought that the honor will be tendered me.

"If it were, I cannot say now that I would not accept, nor can I saw now that I would. Circumstances and conditions hedge such a contingency.

"You have placed me in a predicament. I could not sincerely and conscientiously say I would not appreciate the great honor of being selected again to head my party. No American citizen could say that with sincerity, and yet this matter of nominations for President is so far off, things are so nebulous in their shaping, sentiment is so indefinite, conditions are so far from being stable, that it is difficult for me to answer your question, yes or no.

"I think you can say for me, that to my friends who have asked me that question I have replied, 'If you are sincere, do not press the question at this time. Let us give that honor to some one else, who will be in a better position and better qualified to serve his country.'"

AWAIT LOCALS' VOTE ON STRIKE FOR BEER

Central Federated Union Likely to Announce the Verdict Early Next Week.

SALOON MEN ARE NEUTRAL

Spokesman of Liquor Dealers Says Movement Lacks Scope—Carpenters Threaten Renewal of Strike.

The proposed "No Beer, No Work" strike did not come up for discussion in the regular business of the Central Federated Union meeting at Labor Temple in East Eighty-fourth Street last night, but Edward Hanna, President of the union and Chairman of the meeting, brought cheers from the assembled delegates when he pointed out that ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard, who addressed them on pre-war labor conditions in Germany, was wearing two of the "No Beer, No Work" lapel buttons.

Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the C. F. U., said he expected early replies to the circular letters sent to all the locals urging immediate action on the proposed anti-prohibition strike set for July 1 if the sale of beer was prohibited, and that the vote of the locals probably would be compiled before the meeting next week. The vote on whether or not 750,000 workers in this city would go on strike July 4 as a protest against the conviction of Thomas Mooney and Warren K. Billings, Mr. Bohm said, was being compiled and soon would be announced.

The only definite action taken thus far by local labor toward the so-called "beer strike" is that of District Council 1 of pavers, rammermen, wood block, brick, and iron slag pavers, bridge and stone curb setters, which indorsed the movement at a meeting held at Tammany Hall, 88 Willoughby Street, Brooklyn, on last Sunday night.

A letter from that organization to the Central Federated Union said that "a resolution was adopted on 'No Beer, No Work,' and we pledged our co-operation with the organized labor movement in the battle for justice and liberty." The pavers and rammermen's union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Liquor Dealers Hold Aloof.

It was learned yesterday that the Manhattan Liquor Dealers' Association, at a meeting on Wednesday had decided to hold aloof from the "No Beer, No Work" campaign, on the ground that it represented a movement solely in favor of the brewery interests. Bartenders in the 6,000 saloons of members of the organization, it was said, had been instructed to be neutral on the question, and to cease giving out "No Beer, No Work" buttons.

In explaining the action of the association yesterday Charles H. Hussey, President of the Central Board of Retail Liquor Dealers of Manhattan, said:

"The liquor dealers consider that the campaign has its merits, but there is not enough scope to it. The movement as it now stands only affects beer and does not mention other beverages. The average saloon would go out of business in the Winter months if it relied solely upon the beer sold. In Summer, of course, the business would be good."

Threaten Renewal of Strike.

The Executive Council of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor would not reach this city until Monday, it was said last night, and therefore sanction of a general strike in the allied building trades in aid of the striking carpenters would be held up until the situation had been reviewed by the council. The truce in the building trades will expire at noon today, and if no settlement was reached by that time the carpenters' and bricklayers' strike would be renewed, the union leaders said yesterday.

The Executive Council, when it meets here, will determine whether or not approval shall be given to a strike of the twenty-four other basic trades engaged on construction contracts of members of the Building Trades Employers' Association, which on Thursday refused to grant the striking carpenters an increase of $1 a day. Had this increase been granted to the carpenters, a man familiar with the situation said yesterday, it would have been a signal to the other trades to take similar action, as many of these trades had received no increase in ten years, and several in thirteen years.

A dispatch from Washington last night said that to prevent a nation-wide strike in the building trades the Department of Labor had assigned Henry J. Skeffington of Boston and Walter D. Davidge of Washington to act as conciliators in the dispute which centres in New York. The conciliators will meet the representatives of the men there today.

Benjamin Schlesinger, President of the International Garment Workers' Union, said last night that a third picketing demonstration by garment workers who are on strike against the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association would be held on Monday morning between Fourth and Fifth Avenues in the Thirties, and that "persons interested in knowing the truth about the conduct of the so-called detectives and police who are abusing and intimidating the strikers will be on the picket lines."

"Judging by the number of applications for settlement received by the union during the last few days from members of the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association," said a statement issued by the union last night, "it is probable that by the time the association's leaders have made up their minds to settle there will be little left of the association itself."

Harry Gordon, counsel for the association, said last night that there had been no dissension among the manufacturers, and that the association was still admitting new members from the ranks of the independent manufacturers.

BIG FIRE SWEEPS SAVANNAH TERMINALS

Loss of Millions to Seaboard Air Line and Fertilizer Plant—Smoke Hampers Firemen.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 14.—Fed by large quantities of resin and turpentine, fire late today destroyed the plant of the Southern Fertilizer and Chemical Company here and burned a swath three city blocks long and about 200 feet wide through the terminals of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad on Hutchinson Island, with a loss estimated at millions of dollars.

Cotton, naval stores, sugar, lumber, and nitrate of soda added to the intensity of the flames, which were controlled after five hours of fighting by the combined forces of the railroad company and the city, aided by fire tugs. The efforts of the firemen were hindered by a thick, suffocating smoke arising from the burning resin and turpentine, and by a wind which was almost a gale.

Explosions which for nearly half an hour were heard in rapid succession through the city were said to come from the flames breaking into the nitrate of soda.

The fire, the origin of which has not been determined, was discovered in the railroad terminal at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and quickly spread to the fertilizer plant. It was brought under control at 8 o'clock.

Railroad officials were unable to estimate the loss to the terminals and the materials stored there. With the fertilizer plant more than thirty loaded freight cars were destroyed. The nitrate of soda burned was valued at [illegible]00,000. The terminal is across the Savannah River from the business section of the city.

first of the pursuers came so near that one of the robbers turned quickly and fired one shot. The crowd fell back hurriedly, and as they did so John McGovern of 925 Summit Avenue, the Bronx, crumpled in a heap on the sidewalk. He had been shot in the stomach.

In front of the hotel entrance was a line of taxicabs. Leaning over the hood of one was Charles Vogenberger, a chauffeur. As the pursuit broke around the corner he straightened up and as the robber stopped to fire his revolver again the chauffeur ran quickly forward, and struck him a smashing blow on the head with the hammer he had been using. The other bandit, with the jewelry in his pocket, made his escape.

A stolen taxicab, two battered cloth hats and a revolver were the only clues the Brooklyn police had in the hold-up of the three Emergency Fleet Corporation paymasters until last night when it was discovered that the fingerprints of one of them corresponded with those of a man accused of forgery in 1909. This robbery was so well planned and so well executed that the police could find no one in the immediate vicinity of the robbery who knew that it had occurred.

Drew $12,035 at Sub-Treasury.

Paymaster Neal Sheftall of 487 Forty-seventh Street, Brooklyn, and his assistants, Harold Graham of 389 Sixth Street, Brooklyn, and Herman Lefkowit of 1,780 Park Place, Brooklyn, left the Sub-Treasury, Nassau and Wall Streets, Manhattan, about noon for the Tebo Yacht Basin, at the foot of Twenty-third Street, Brooklyn. In a small leather bag they carried $12,035, payroll money in small bills and silver. They crossed Wall Street, walked down Broad Street, and in front of the Mills Building Sheftall hailed a taxicab and the trio got in, placing the bag on the floor.

Their route to the shipyard was up Broadway and Park Row to the Brooklyn Bridge, thence through Liberty Street in Brooklyn and through Clinton Street. At Clinton and Carroll Streets the chauffeur turned the corner, and as he did so his engine stopped. He ran the car to the curb and got out, apparently to see what the trouble was.

Two men stepped from a doorway, the Paymaster told the police, and approached the taxi from either side. Each flung open a door and the occupants looked into the muzzles of two revolvers.

"Get out and leave what you have with you behind!" was the command of the man who stood on the sidewalk. Then he stepped back so as to allow the paymasters to get out. In the open street, apparently unnoticed, he stood with revolver drawn and waited for the men to leave the taxicab.

While this was going on the chauffeur, without haste, had climbed back on the seat and started his engine. As the three got out of the car the man on the far side entered it. "Now keep going," admonished the other robber, and as he said it he deftly pushed past them, got in and slammed the door shut. In an instant the car was moving and in a minute it was in high speed and speeding down Carroll Street.

Paymaster Accused by Police.

The man who had given the orders was described as being about 25 years old, 5 feet 10 inches in height, and wore a gray cloth hat and a dark tan raincoat. The other men the three paymasters did not notice and they could give the detectives no description.

After attempting to telephone from one house, one of the victims used the telephone in the home of Mrs. J. B. Boobcock, 431 Clinton Street, and notified Brooklyn Police Headquarters of the robbery. The first to arrive were several detectives and Captain Butler of the Butler Street Station. They were followed by Acting Captain John Coughlin, in charge of detectives. The men were taken to the Butler Street Station and questioned.

Captain Coughlin late last night ordered the arrest of Sheftall. He was booked as charged with assault, and acting in concert with two unidentified men in the robbery. Graham and Lefkowitz were not held.

While the questioning was in progress the Bergen Street Station notified Butler Street that the taxicab had been found abandoned in front of a saloon at Fourth Avenue and Sackett Street, Brooklyn. It was taken to the Butler Street Station.

The left door had been smashed. Inside were two soft hats. One was brown and the other gray. One was a Knox, size 6⅞ and the other bore the name of Logue, Philadelphia, and was size 7. The police also found a loaded 32-calibre revolver, three paper bags and the leather thong, with a slipknot to go around the wrist, which had been attached to the bag.

The car bore the 1919 license plate 152,341, N. Y., and subsequent investigation showed that this number had been issued to James B. Lane, 364 East 164th Street, the Bronx. The police found that no such man lived there nor was he known in the neighborhood. On the hood of the car was soldered the hack license number 612. This number should have been repeated on the two lamps. Only one bore a number and that was 341 and it was fastened to the lamp by a rubber band.

Taxicab Used Was Stolen.

Taxi license 612 was issued to Joseph Levine, 1,450 Madison Avenue. He was taken to Borough headquarters in Brooklyn. Levine said that on Wednesday night a man and woman engaged his cab to take them to a restaurant at Thirtieth Street and Broadway. He went inside in order to collect his fare and when he came out his taxicab was gone. He reported his loss to the police and the records of the West Thirtieth Street station confirmed his story. He was not detained.

Acting Captain Coughlin said that Sheftall's fingerprints correspond with those of a man named Charles Tharles, who was arrested at the Bleecker Street subway station in April, 1909. He was charged with forgery that involved a check transaction but was discharged for lack of evidence in a Magistrate's Court.

The chauffeur was described as smooth shaven, about twenty-five years old, and wearing a cap and overcoat.

After Captain Coughlin had Sheftall booked on the charge of having conspired in the robbery the latter turned to him and said:

"Will you come back into the room with me again, Captain?" Both went back. Half an hour later, when Captain Coughlin came out, he said that Sheftall had admitted that the record of Charles Tharles, who had also been known to the police as Neal Sheftall, was really his own record. "There is no use denying it," he told the Captain. "That is my record and that is my photograph."

Sheftall denied that he had taken any part in the robbery. He said that some one who knew his record had "pulled off the job," knowing that he would be blamed for it.

Regarding their trip from Brooklyn to the Sub-Treasury Sheftall's assistants said that after they had started for Wall Street, Sheftall left them, saying he had business to attend to and would meet them at the Sub-Treasury. The two came to Manhattan alone and were there joined by the paymaster.

It was Sheftall, they said, who led the way down Broad Street to where the taxicab was waiting. He stopped in front of the taxicab, the chauffeur of which was then holding the door open as though inviting them to enter. The paymaster and the driver first argued over the amount of fare to be paid, and then Sheftall directed the driver what route to take, they said.

Sheftall admitted to the police that he had left his companions but refused to tell where he had gone.

Charles F. Dietz, Assistant Superintendent for the Emergency Fleet Corporation at Tebo's Basin, commenting on the fact that his men were sent unarmed to transport large sums through the city, said they had been unable to obtain pistol permits from the police because the Board of Aldermen are still debating whether the fee for permits shall be $1 or $25, and the issuance of all 1919 permits has been held up pending the action of the Aldermen.

DEFER STOCK ISSUE SUIT.

City Counsel Asks Delay in Citizens Union Injunction Appeal.

The application of the Citizens Union for an injunction restraining the city from issuing $4,500,000 in corporate stock to cover the overhead expenses of the Public Service Commission, in connection with the construction of the dual system of rapid transit, will be argued this morning before Justice Cropsey of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn. It was expected that the matter would be thrashed out yesterday, but the Corporation Counsel asked for the delay because the application came as a complete surprise to him and it was necessary to make some preparations in order to properly represent the city.

It is the claim of the applicant that the issue of the stock would be illegal because it was partly for the purpose of paying debts that had already been paid out of taxes. The Public Service Commission is anxious that its expenses in connection with rapid transit work should not be met by the issue of corporate stock because that would be charged against the borrowing capacity of the city and might endanger the chance of obtaining the $25,000,000 needed to complete the work. It wants the money paid out of the taxes instead, but it was said that the Controller is opposed to this for the reason that he is seeking to keep the tax rate down to the lowest possible point.

BEGINS A POLICE INQUIRY.

Grand Jury Starts Investigation of Rumors Following a Raid.

Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith began yesterday to place before the Grand Jury evidence relating to the failure of the police to establish the identity of the person who shot Policemen John McLoughlin and John J. Walsh in a raid on the gambling game in West Fifty-seventh Street on Jan. 19.

The immediate purpose of the investigation is to discover if there is any basis for rumors that several thousand dollars were spent by a wealthy gambler to keep the facts hidden and prevent prosecution, but other police matters may go before the Grand Jury. The last sweeping investigation of the Police Department started with a specific inquiry into the failure of the police in the Ruth Cruger case, and soon spread from that case into a general investigation of graft charges, detective methods and police affairs in general. Friends of Police Capt. "Honest Dan" Costigan believe that the reasons for his demotion may eventually be inquired into by this Grand Jury, together with other features of the administration of Police Commissioner Richard Enright.

PORTUGUESE REVOLT FAILS.

People of Oporto and Troops Re-establish the Republic in North.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The people of Oporto, supported by Republican forces, have restored the republic in Northern Portugal, according to a Lisbon dispatch received by the Portuguese Legation.

Pavia Couceiro, the Royalist leader, has been arrested.

The news created enthusiasm at Lisbon. The fighting at Oporto lasted ninety minutes. A part of the Government is proceeding there.

AWARD WAR WORK MEDALS.

75 Women at West Side Workroom Rewarded by Red Cross.

The American Red Cross will recognize with medals and certificates of faithful service the efforts of patriotic women who devoted their time during the war to the making of surgical dressings and knitted articles, it was announced yesterday. Seventy-five such medals and certificates were presented yesterday afternoon to women of the West Side Workroom of the New York County Chapter, 140 West Sixty-eighth Street, on the occasion of the celebration of the third anniversary of the workroom.

The West Side Workroom was formerly known as the West Side Branch of the New York County Chapter. Miss Annie S. Wiltse, Vice Chairman of the workroom, reported yesterday that enough hospital garments for 12,200 men had been turned out. In addition 5,000 garments had been made for refugees. Enough knitted garments, said Miss Wiltse, had been made by west side workers to supply seven regiments of infantry, at war strength, or 3,700 men each

HYLAN'S GREETERS HOPE FOR HARMONY

18 MORE QUIT IN BROOKLYN

Savings Bank President Joins Others Who Demand Return of Their Subscriptions.

Although the proposal for a State commission to welcome home-coming troops was adopted in response to appeals from citizens and organizations who resent the presence of William Randolph Hearst on the Mayor's Committee of Welcome, it is the expectation of members of the local committee that there will be no antagonism between the two organizations of official greeters.

It was the original proposal of the Independent Citizens' Committee, organized as a protest against Hearst, that Governor Smith appoint a State committee to supersede the Mayor's Committee and to force it out of existence. The independent committee continued its fight after the suggestion had been ignored by Governor Smith, and sought to organize support for the resolution introduced last week in the Assembly by Joseph Steinberg.

Grover A. Whalen, Secretary to Mayor Hylan and also Secretary of the Mayor's committee, thought yesterday that it would be possible for the two committees to co-operate. Neither Mr. Whalen nor Rodman Wanamaker, Chairman of the General Committee, had received official notice of the proposal for a State committee, and consequently no plans had been formed. Alfred J. Johnson, ex-City Chamberlain, who was designated yesterday by Daniel G. Reid, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Mayor's committee, to comment upon the relations of the two committees, said he though the organizations could work together amicably. Similar opinions were expressed by other members.

Approval of the idea of a State Committee composed of the Governor, all elective State officers and members of the Legislature was expressed yesterday by the Independent Citizens' Committee in a letter to Thaddeus C. Sweet, Speaker of the Assembly, who announced in Albany on Thursday that a bill would be reported by the Ways and Means Committee. The letter recalled that the proposal had been made to Governor Smith on Jan. 3, and continued:

"We shall be very glad to do what we can to aid in the passage of the proposed resolution as we believe that the matter of welcoming the returning troops concerns the State itself, especially as the Legislatures of South Dakota, Ohio, and Pennsylvania have passed resolutions which have been forwarded to Congress urging that their troops be not returned home by way of New York in view of the disgraceful conditions which have been permitted to establish themselves here."

At the headquarters of the Mayor's committee all requests for information were referred to Grover Whalen at City Hall. Conditions at headquarters were described as "chaotic" by employes because John J. Reardon, the Publicity Director and two of his assistants had been dismissed to put into effect a "retrenchment policy." It was said then that reporters from Hearst's newspapers would take up the work, but they had not arrived. Director Reardon was reinstated for a few days, but quit when he learned that wages would not be forthcoming.

Nathan S. Jonas, who resigned as chairman of the Brooklyn Victory Celebration in protest against the efforts of Hearst to dictate the action of the executive committee, yesterday expressed pleasure at the proposal for a State committee. Eighteen more resignations from the Brooklyn Committee were reported yesterday, all of the letters declaring that the action was taken in protest against the threat of Hearst domination. Those whose letters were made public were: John B. Creighton, Secretary of the Municipal Club; Joseph B. Sheffield, Victor E. B. Fuller, Dr. Isham G. Harris, Superintendent of the Brooklyn State Hospital; Charles J. Obermeyer, Howard L. Bartell, Andrew J. Colvin, Louis E. Bomeisler, Miss Jessie W. Post, Mrs. James H. Post, William Obermeyer, Herbert L. Bridgman, William Carroll Low, Mrs. J. G. Beattie, Louis Charles Wills, James L. Robinson, the Rev. A. A. Shaw, pastor of Emanuel Baptist Church, and Crowell Hadden, president of the Brooklyn Savings Bank.

"Because of occurrences with which you are familiar," wrote Mr. Hadden to Borough President Riegelmann, "I sent you a letter requesting that you drop my name from the committee. As there has been no public notice taken of the letter, I fear the possibility that it may have gone astray, and I wish to go squarely on record as disapproving the political jumble which has been made of what should have been a high-minded project. I also wish to go on record as requesting that my contribution be returned."

David Hirschfield, Commissioner of Accounts, who took an active part in the campaign of Hylan for Mayor, yesterday made public a letter he wrote to Borough President Riegelmann on Thursday. He congratulated Mr. Riegelmann for his demand upon the Brooklyn Victory Celebration Committee that James M. Beck should not be allowed to speak at the meeting in the Academy of Music. Mr. Beck's speech at the Republican Club, he said, revealed a plan of the "interests" to control the Presidential election in 1920.

John J. Delany, the new Chairman of the Brooklyn Committee, said yesterday that the personnel of his new Executive Committee would be announced within a few days. No action has been taken yet upon the demands for the return of contributions to the fund for a permanent memorial to the soldiers who died in the service.

PREPARED TO PASS BEER AND WINE BILL

views of men prominent in the industrial and financial world who are represented to be alive to the importance of doing nothing to increase social unrest.

The celerity with which the lawmakers went about ratifying the amendment has been ascribed in no small degree to the farmers' attitude at the time. The farmers furnish Republican majorities and wield a potent influence. Prohibition sentiment in this State began and found its most fertile field in the rural sections. Letters received by lawmakers, however, have led lawmakers to believe that a reaction has set in among the farmers. A cynic at the Capitol suggested today that the provision in the league's inforcement bill, under which cider would be rendered unfit for drinking as soon as it began to contain a kick, might have had something to do with this. In Maine, the solons who wrote the prohibition clause into the State Constitution years ago in order to insure for it long life and prosperity left cider unaffected. They went further even. By indirection they created a market for this product of the farm by—officially, if not effectively—putting the ban on the rival product of the distillery.

William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, sent an open letter to Governor Smith in regard to this inforcement bill in which he said:

"As you are a part of the lawmaking power of the State, it is fair and proper that your views should be considered. If this measure as drafted does not meet with your entire approval, we invite a public statement of your objections to it.

"Any suggestions which you may make that are calculated better to carry out the spirit of the amendment and which will not interfere with the efficient enforcement of the law will receive most respectful consideration, and, so far as possible, will be incorporated to the extent of acceptance by the backers of the bill. If this measure cannot be made satisfactory so that you will approve it if it comes before you we respectfully request that you state in general terms what kind of an enforcement bill, if any, will be satisfactory to you.

Governor Smith, before leaving for New York this afternoon, said he had no comment to make on the letter.

CONDEMNS DICTOGRAPH USE

Federal Court of Appeals Reverses Convictions Obtained by Eavesdropping.

The conviction last Fall of John J. McGinniss, a lawyer, and Frank D'Ambrosia, a lawyer's clerk, of conspiring to get Henry Tichenor Allison into West Point on alleged false credentials, has been reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals. In the opinion, written by Judge Manton, the method of obtaining evidence by aid of a dictograph, was severely criticised.

"The dictograph record of a conversation in McGinniss's law office was offered in evidence by the Government.

Third to Over Half Off Usual Prices.

THE SIZE of this sale is in some measure due to the unusual conditions existing in Books as well as other business, which have led many publishers to conclude that the money was better placed to their account than locked up in reserve stocks.

Therefore they have let go of many interesting volumes at prices much lower than such specimens of the bookmaker's art could now be produced.

Many 1918 Publications Among Them

It is an interesting fact that most of these Books are clean, new and fresh, and that there is a large proportion of recent titles among them, some that have been published only a month or two.

OPERATE ON SOLDIER AS WAVES TOSS SHIP

Surgeons on Cruiser Charleston Successfully Trepan Skull Crushed at Sea.

FINLAND ALSO ARRIVES

Total of 4,625 Troops Brought Back by Two Vessels After a Stormy Voyage.

Fog and drizzly rain made the harbor look somewhat dismal yesterday when the United States cruiser Charleston and the United States transport Finland arrived yesterday from France with 4,625 troops on board, which included a number of sick and wounded. Some of the gloom caused by the weather was dispelled when the Patrol with the Mayor's Welcome Committee and band met the ships and cheered the heroes who lined the rails leaning on their crutches, while others stood with empty sleeves.

The soldiers cheered heartily in response to the greetings and shouted: "Are we down-hearted? No!" Both the Finland and the Charleston were delayed by the severe westerly gales and high seas they encountered on the way across from the French coast, and the soldiers were very glad when they sighted Sandy Hook and knew that they would be able to stand on something soon that would not move wildly under their feet.

When the storm was at its height last Monday afternoon, and the wind was blowing with hurricane force, Private Theodore Caron of the 50th United States Coast Artillery was looking through a closed port on the gun deck when a huge wave, estimated to have been nearly forty-five feet high, thundered against the glass and smashed it to pieces with such force that the soldier's skull was fractured and his eye torn loose.

Operate During Tempest.

In order to save the man's life it was necessary to operate at once, and Caron was conveyed to the operating room and laid on the table. As the cruiser was rolling and pitching considerably, it was a difficult task for the surgeons to perform. Two seamen and the chaplain, Father F. J. Hurney, held the patient on the table while Dr. E. P. Genereau and Dr. W. A. J. Wright, with six seamen braced against them for steadiness, successfully trepanned Caron's skull, replaced the eye, and took four stitches in the big wound on his cheek.

Altogether, the operation occupied two hours, as the surgeons were only able to work when the vessel was on an even keel for a few minutes in between the rolls. When the Charleston was made fast at her pier in Hoboken yesterday at 1 o'clock, Private Caron was doing well, the surgeons said, and on the high road to recovery.

Among the 1,271 officers and men on the cruiser were 34 officers and 1,196 men of the 50th United States Coast Artillery, under command of Colonel Ellis, which was organized in Virginia and sailed for France last October, arriving too late to take part in the fighting. Nearly all the States were represented in the regiment. There were also fifty men of the old 9th Coast Artillery on board, and Casual Company 228.

War Cross Wearer on Board.

Among the wounded was Private Edward Hirschman of Columbus, Ohio, of Company I, 166th Infantry, who had been wounded three times during the nine months he served at the front. He received the French War Cross for bravery at Château-Thierry.

One of the army aviators returning on the Charleston was Lieutenant W. D. Frayne of the 50th Aero Squad, who had been flying in France for a year and was recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross. He has two enemy planes to his credit, and on Oct. 7 at Verenz the Lieutenant was shot down in flames, but managed to land safely and saved the life of his observer, Lieutenant French of Oregon.

The transport Finland, which was berthed at Pier 3, Hoboken, had 3,354 officers and men, which included fifteen casual companies composed of men who had been in action during the war and were incapacitated for further service in the field. There was also Base Hospital Unit 18, from Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, and twenty-four aviators.

After the transport had been made fast Commander J. Snyder, surgical aid to Admiral Gleaves, went through the hospitals with Lieutenant E. E. Wolland and told the sick and wounded soldiers that they would be sent to a local hospital for a few days and then sent to another one in the vicinity of their homes.

There were 939 hospital cases on the Finland, including fifty-three which developed on the voyage over, and seven deaths. They were Private Eskel Hayes, 485th Gas Company of Ponita, La.; Private S. Moody of the same company of Monford, Texas; Corporal L. L. Tuft, 496th Gas Company of Erskine, Minn; Corporal Robert I. Dester, Company B, 309th Infantry, 224 State Street, Batavia, N. Y.; Private William H. Bruns, Company Six, 9th Infantry, St. Louis, Mo.; Private William E. Rogerson, Battalion [illegible] 129th Field Artillery, 4,523 Montcalm St., Kansas City, and Lieutenant John [illegible] Parsons, Dixon, Ill. Four deaths were from pneumonia, two from tuberculosis and one from liver complaint.

There were soldiers on the Finland from the 42d Division, including some from the 165th Regiment, and from the 27th and 77th Divisions; fifteen companies of casuals of whom two officers and 100 men were from New York.

Johns Hopkins Unit Back.

The Johns Hopkins unit went to France in May, 1917, and returned under the command of Major R. F. Kiefer of Hagerstown, Md. They established the first American base hospital in France at Bozoilles. During the twenty months at Bozoilles the Johns Hopkins unit treated 18,000 patients. The mortality was just over 1 per cent.

Among the men of the 165th Regiment was Private Patrick O'Keefe, 385 East 134th Street, Company G, who was wounded and gassed on July 31 at Château-Thierry, and rejoined his regiment on Oct. 18. He was wounded again at Sedan on Nov. 6 by a machine-gun bullet.

NEGRO TROOPS TO PARADE.

Governor Will Review Soldiers Marching on Fifth Avenue.

Final arrangements for the parade and reception to the 369th Infantry, the old 15th Regiment of the National Guard, on Monday next were announced yesterday by Grover A. Whalen, Secretary to the Mayor's Committee to Welcome Homecoming Troops. Governor Smith and his staff will assemble at the City Hall at 10 o'clock. The Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimate will assemble at the same place at the same time, as well as the members of the Mayor's committee. The official party will then proceed to the reviewing stand at Fifth Avenue and Sixtieth Street.

The parade of the famous negro regiment will start at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third Street at 11 A. M., the only escort being a platoon of mounted police of 100 men with the police band. The parade will proceed up the avenue to 110th Street, where it will turn west on 110th Street to Lenox Avenue and north on Lenox Avenue to 135th Street, where there will be another reviewing stand. At 145th Street the parade will disband and the men will go by special subway trains to the Seventy-first Regiment Armory.

At the armory a dinner will be served to the soldiers. The relatives of the members of the regiment will receive tickets of admission to the galleries of the armory, which hold 2,500 persons. A special table will be arranged for the officers of the regiment on the floor of the armory. There will be an entertainment following the dinner in the form of boxing bouts, singing, and vaudeville acts.

DAY-ELDER (D-E WORM-DRIVE) MOTOR TRUCKS

The weights given below on the left are the chassis carrying capacity of the various models, including weight of body.

The Most Attractive Line in the Show

Judging from the number of new dealers with whom we have already closed during the past week, practically every desirable territory east of Pittsburg will be gone before the exhibition closes.

It isn't the force of advertising that has brought DAY-ELDER trucks into the limelight—but the weight of value. The DAY-ELDER line is such a phenomenally successful one because it is the greatest value-giving line in the United States—bar none. That's what sells them—the superior quality that they represent at their prices. Other worm-drive trucks of the same quality and carrying capacity are priced hundreds of dollars more!

See this complete line in centre section, Madison Square Garden. It will impress you far more favorably than any other line on exhibition, 1 to 6 tons. Made in Newark within easy drive-away distance for the average Eastern dealer.

GIVES FUND TO TEACH BRITISH WORKERS

Sir Ernest Cassel Turns Over $2,500,000 to Balfour and Other Trustees.

WOMEN ALSO TO BE HELPED

Provision Made for Faculty of Commerce at University of London.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Sir Ernest Cassel, the financier, has placed £500,000 in the hands of trustees for educational purposes, particularly the following:

First—The promotion of adult education in connection with the Workers' Educational Association or any other association or body approved by the trustees.

Second—Scholarships for encouraging the education of workmen or their sons and daughters.

Third—The promotion of the higher education of women by assistance to colleges for women.

Fourth—The promotion of the study of foreign languages.

Fifth—Toward the establishment of a faculty of commerce in the University of London on such terms as the Trustees may approve.

The Trustees are A. J. Balfour, Secretary for Foreign Affairs; Herbert H. Asquith, former Premier; H. A. L. Fisher, Minister of Education; Viscount Haldane, Sir George Murray, Sidney Webb, and Miss Philippe Fawcett.

Sir Ernest Cassel amassed a fortune in projects in Egypt, Mexico, Argentina, and China, as well as in investments in railroads and other industries in England. When he retired from the banking business in London in 1910 he was rated as one of the wealthiest men in England.

He was the chief financial adviser of King Edward, and one of his intimate friends. In 1902 he placed $1,000,000 at the disposal of the King for the establishment of a sanitarium, and a hospital for consumptives was organized at Midhurst in Sussex. After the death of King Edward, Sir Ernest created another fund of $1,000,000 as a memorial to aid needy Englishmen who were out of work in Germany, with a similar benefit for Germans out of work in England.

Because he was born and educated in Cologne Sir Ernest found reason to assert his sympathy with the allied cause early in the war. He pointed out in a letter that he emigrated to England when he was only 16 years old and for fifty years, he said, "his unfailing loyalty and devotion to the country have never varied or been questioned."

He visited the United States as a member of the Anglo-French Commission in September, 1915, and it was reported that his subscription of $5,000,000 to the allied war loan being floated in this country was opposed by his Government because they did not wish the gold to flow here.

Sir Ernest is 67 years old.

BARRIENTOS SINGS GILDA.

Reappears at the Metropolitan in Season's First "Rigoletto."

Maria Barrientos, back from Spain and some 20,000 miles of ocean travel since last she sang here, made her reentrance at the Metropolitan last evening for the final ten weeks of the opera season. She brought again that cool, sure touch, that exquisiteness of artistic delicacy and personal distinction, which should long hold a place in Mr. Gatti's company of stars. Her "Caro Nome" was heard throughout the great house, where personality counts as well as limpid purity of voice, qualities of which Oscar Hammerstein prophesied truly when he once planned to offer Barrientos as first star of his Lexington Theatre.

Metropolitan patrons welcomed the season's first "Rigoletto," as they have every year since Caruso put Italian opera to the fore. For the first time Charles Hackett essayed a Caruso rôle last evening, tossing off the "Donna e mobile" lightly, with easy humor and fine art, and acting the aristocrat as the rakish Duke. Sophie Braslau, though not in the printed bill, sang Maddalena with opulent voice, and de Luca was admirable, notably in the third act, as the Jester. The quartet held the audience to the close.

In minor rôles were Mattfeld, Egener, Phyllis White, Rossi, Bada, Laurenti, Reschiglian, and Moranzoni conducted.

Louis Grunberg in Piano Recital.

Louis Grunberg, pianist in ensemble music hitherto, essayed his first solo recital in Aeolian Hall last evening, with Beethoven's sonata op. 109 as a serious test of musicianship. He first and last paid homage to his teacher, Busoni, in that artist's arrangement of a Bach toccata, and of Liszt's "Mephisto" waltz, and he produced an agreeable series of "Impressions," so entitled, in music of his own.

Helen Jeffrey, Violinist, Plays.

Helen Jeffrey, a violinist of picturesque presence, gave her second recital yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall, playing with Francis Moore a sonata of Brahms, in D minor, and the B minor concerto of Saint-Saëns, which she brought to a brilliant finish without the spur of orchestral support. There were smaller violin pieces by Kreisler, Samuel Gardner, and Mr. Moore, and the "Habañera" of Sarasate.

CITY BREVITIES.

A conference on the restoration of disabled men to self-support, international in its representation and scope of subjects to be discussed, will be held at Carnegie Hall from March 18 to March 22, under the auspices of the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men. Representatives of practically all the governmental agencies in the allied countries dealing with the disabled soldiers will attend.

A dinner for Francis Burton Harrison, Governor General of the Philippine Islands, will be given in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel tonight by former and present residents of the island and others who are interested in the general welfare of the Philippines. P. J. Hibbard of the Philippine National Bank of this city will have charge of the dinner.

OPERA

By James Gibbons Huneker

Mary Garden Juggles.

It was a positive inspiration for Maestro Oscar Hammerstein to have made over Mary Garden into the image of a lovely youth, when years ago he froze the scalp of Massenet by suggesting that Jean in "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame" be sung by a girl instead of a tenor. The end justified the means. Too many males would have spoilt the broth. Miss Garden sang and enacted Jean for the first time this season at the Lexington Theatre last night. It is a familiar assumption and much admired. From the sultry paganism of Cleopatre to the unforced pathos of the beloved vagabond is traversing a world.

But Miss Garden is nothing if not versatile. That slender fluting glide, her naïve charm, the joy of life which she expressed in Act I., are wonderfully appealing. Her acolyte looked like the head of a Fra Angelica angel. She even wears her tonsure with a difference. The death scene was touching, though the halo of the adorable scapegrace did not fit. That she was a trifle fatigued was evident, and her voice sometimes sounded weary. The usual triumph was awaiting her all the same. Her Jean is a masterpiece in miniature.

Auguste Bouilliez, an artist who should be heard oftener, was Boniface. He received a spontaneous tribute after his solo in Act III. Gustave Huberdeau was the Prior; further criticism is unnecessary. The performance was a smooth one under Mr. Charlier, who exposed the transparency of the orchestration with his accustomed tact. He had the juste milieu in his tonal balance. The opera was followed by a ballet divertissement in which Andreas Pavley and Serge Oukrainsky with the Russian ballet appeared.

Several important changes have been made in next week's scheme and the list has been amended to read as follows: Monday, "Crispino e la Comare"; Tuesday, "Werther"; Wednesday, "Thaïs"; Thursday, "Dinorah"; Friday, "Carmen"; Saturday matinee, "Madam Butterfly"; Saturday night, "Trovatore."

John Galsworthy to Speak.

John Galsworthy will give an address before the members of the New York Drama League at a meeting of the organization on Sunday, March 2. The place of the meeting has not yet been selected.

Did YOU Save That Dollar On Your Sunday Dinner?

An ordinary dinner on the last Sunday in January cost a dollar less than it did the Sunday before, according to one market expert, who is showing how the tide of food prices so long at the flood is beginning to turn. The Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger considers the "dissolution of the league of rations" to be in sight when "eggs have begun the Humpty-Dumpty act; butter charges are in a melting mood," and "meat bills are facing a decline." The drop may not be any "shocking, joyous surprise," but the Boston Globe is certain that "gradually it will wiggle its way down to the things we buy at the corner store."

THE CONSTITUTION AGAIN FOLLOWS THE FLAG

FOR forty years and more we have sold theatre tickets to an increasing clientele.

For forty years our charge for service has been fifty cents per ticket over the box office price. It is the cornerstone of our policy.

We consider it a nice compliment to the soundness of that policy and the scope of our service that the City of New York has recently passed an ordinance limiting all theatre ticket offices to a 50 cent service charge.

We thank the City of New York for the compliment.

CONSTITUTION OF THE LEAGUE.

Reduced to its substantive provisions and actual meaning, the draft of the Constitution of the League of Nations takes the form indicated in the most recent dispatches from Paris, that simple form which has been insisted upon in these columns as essential to its acceptance by all the nations. The substance of the League is this: The high contracting parties agree in Article XII. that should disputes arise between them which diplomacy fails to adjust "they will in "no case resort to war without pre-"viously submitting the questions "and matters involved either to ar-"bitration or inquiry by the Execu-"tive Council." The arbitral tribunal may be either one chosen by the parties to the dispute or it may be the Permanent Court of International Justice, established by the Executive Council. This committee is to consist of representatives of the United States, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan, with representatives of four other States, members of the League. Should a dispute be referred to the Executive Council, it is to make full investigation, it may publish the briefs or statements of both parties; if its efforts do not lead to a settlement, the Council will make public the facts and explanations together with its recommendation of a proper settlement. If the Council's report is unanimous, all the members of the League agree that "they will not go to war with any "party which complies with the rec-"ommendations," and the Council will consider measures necessary to give effect to its finding. Also the Executive Council may refer the dispute to the whole body of delegates representing the entire League.

Next as to the sanctions, the means of enforcing peace. It is provided in Article XVI. that any of the members of the League breaking or disregarding the covenant of peace contained in Article XII., > shall thereby de facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all the other members of the League, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nationals and the nationals of the covenant-breaking State, and the prevention of all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking State and the nationals of any other State, whether a member of the League or not.

No nation not blinded by fury or by the spirit of militarism now pretty well extinguished would wish to bring down upon itself this terrible penalty for transgression. But provision is made for sterner measures, and made in a manner any [illegible] can accept whatever may be [illegible]tional formula in respect to declarations of war. It will be the duty of the Executive Council, in case of violations of the compact, "to recommend what effect-"ive military or naval force the mem-"bers of the League shall severally "contribute to the armed force to be "used to protect the covenants of the "League." Opponents of the League in this country will at once pounce upon the word "shall" as indicating a compulsion upon the members, including the United States, to contribute their part of the military force employed against the offending nation. Article XVI. of the Constitution of the League will not bear that construction. The Executive Committee has power only "to recommend." If the use of military force is compulsory upon one, it is compulsory upon all, and the language used at the end of the article shows that that is not contemplated. It is provided that the contracting parties will support one another in the financial and economic measures taken "and that they "will afford passage through their "territory to the force of any of the "high contracting parties who are co-"operating to protect the covenants "of the League." This makes it evident that some members of the League may employ military force, others may not, and the idea of compulsion disappears. Participation in the use of military force will be optional with the United States, or with any other Power which cannot make a general pledge to go to war in contingencies arising quite beyond its control, because it must first consult its Parliament or Congress. That removes one of the objections to the League upon which chief emphasis has been placed in this country.

This is the meat and meaning of the draft in so far as it immediately relates to the preservation of the world's peace. In respect to the German colonies, and to certain other peoples set free as the result of the war, the mandatory principle is applied. The interests of these peoples are to be considered as "a sacred trust of civ-"ilization," and the advanced nations, qualified for the task by reason of their resources and experience and their geographical position, are to act as mandatories on behalf of the League for the protection of these races who are "not yet able to stand "by themselves." "Certain communi-"ties" formerly under the oppressive rule of Turkey may be provisionally recognized as independent, but they will be advised and aided by some mandatory Power, their own wishes being "a principal consideration in "the selection of the mandatory "Power." Powers exercising the trust over the African colonies of Germany will be responsible also for administration and the protection of the natives against abuses such as the slave trade and traffic in arms or liquor. The interests of the Union of South Africa and of Australia have plainly been consulted in the provision that territories in Southwestern Africa and certain of the Pacific islands will be intrusted to the care of mandatories in geographical proximity, and the laws of the mandatory State will apply to them. Secret treaties made during the war are disposed of by Article XXV., in which the contracting parties agree that the covenant of the League "is accepted as abrogat-"ing all obligations inter se which "are inconsistent with the terms "thereof."

The preamble is part of the covenant, and that lays down the prescription "of open, just, and honorable re-"lations between nations by the firm "establishment of the understandings "of international law as the actual "rule of conduct among Govern-"ments, and by the maintenance of "justice."

There is no specific reference to the islands of the Marshall and Caroline groups, claimed by Japan. But it would seem to be plain that the acceptance of this covenant would require of Japan that she submit her title to those islands to be passed on by the Peace Conference, the determination to be reached with due regard to international justice and the interests of all the nations.

The authors of this draft have so far yielded to the pacifist belief that wars are brought on and prolonged by the makers of munitions that they require in Article VIII. that the Executive Council shall advise "how the evil "effects attendant upon such manu-"facture can be prevented." This is not going very far, and it is well that the question should be considered with great care. It has been often enough pointed out that if the manufacture of munitions is to be restricted to State authority, peacefully disposed nations and the world's peace might shortly be at the mercy of Powers devoted, as Germany was so long devoted, to the development of military strength as the leading policy of the State. Labor has a plank in this draft, of which it may be slow to understand the full meaning. The members of the League will endeavor "to secure and maintain fair and "humane conditions of labor for men, "women, and children both in their "own countries and in all the coun-"tries to which their commercial and "industrial relations extend"; they will also establish a permanent Bureau of Labor. This at once brings the labor unions before the great tribunal of the nations. Any attempt on their part to secure something more than "fair and humane conditions of la-"bor" will meet the challenge of the League, which is based upon principles of justice and of common interest, the interest not of class, but of all the people of the world.

The decision to make the draft public, in order that it might have full consideration, was wisely taken, it is in accord with Mr. Wilson's principle of "covenants openly arrived at."

The draft must undergo severe revision. It must be reduced to statutory precision; it is too wordy and is clumsily put together. Article XII., which contains the foundation covenant, should have been put first, to be followed by the provisions for reference to the Council or to arbitration and the measures of enforcement. We must read through eleven almost administrative articles before we reach the covenant which should naturally have the place of honor.

PRESIDENT EBERT'S SPEECH.

President Ebert's speech of acceptance, so far as it has reached this country, is precise and definite enough for all purposes, so far as the declaration of a policy is concerned. When he says, "I will administer my office "not as the leader of a single party, "but I belong to the Socialist Party "and cannot forget my origin and "training," he appears to say no more than a partisan President elected in this country might say if he wanted to announce that he was no Mugwump. But the conditions in Germany are so different that the announcement carries a different meaning.

Here there are no classes, no aristocracy, and religion does not enter into politics. In Germany there are classes, there is an aristocracy, and there is a sectarian political party. Therefore, a Socialist President cannot say that he is the President of the whole people in any such sense as an American, however partisan, might say it. Wherever the interests of the people do not clash with those of the aristocracy, he means to say, he will be impartial; where they do he will only be as impartial as he can. Apparently he also means to say that in religious matters he will deal equally with all, and that if any sectarian party demands anything at his hands it will probably not get it, unless it conflicts with the interests of no other sect. When he says, "The privileges "of birth have already been elimi-"nated from politics and are being "eliminated from social life," he gives an idea of some of the difficulties of a German President who should think of being "President of the whole peo-"ple" in an American sense.

He says: "We shall combat domina-"tion by force to the utmost from "whatever direction it may come." By that he means that he will fight equally against an imperialist reaction and domination by the Allies. He probably means, too, that he will resist any attempt to broaden the terms of the armistice or to disarm the Rhine provinces, since these are the only things that could possibly be construed even by a German as "domination by "force" by the Allies. The same implication is to be found in what he says about "our freedom to shape our "destinies at home and abroad." That freedom is not threatened, unless Germans think it is threatened by the two proposals mentioned. The sentence, too, may contain a warning to the friends of the Kaiser. This declaration of policy is unexpectedly clear and candid. The Allies now know what to expect from the new Government; and so does Hindenburg.

COURT-MARTIAL REFORM.

Only a sense of duty would have prompted Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, acting Judge Advocate General, who is a West Pointer, to condemn the court-martial authority of the army as it has been exercised since the United States entered the war. Summoned before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, General Ansell said on Thursday:

> The sentences imposed for slight offenses by the courts-martial have shocked every sense of justice. They have reached the heights of injustice. The sentences in many instances bore no reasonable relationship to the offenses committed.

General Ansell did not defend court-martial sentences of the past, the pre-war period; they had often been harsh, and the system being archaic the victims could obtain no relief, unless the President intervened. But there were recent proceedings that were particularly revolting, and which General Ansell, with no encouragement from his superiors, had taken charge of to see that justice was done. There was the case of the twelve non-commissioned officers who were dishonorably discharged and sentenced to from three to five years' imprisonment on account of a "minor disagree-"ment" in one of the army camps with some West Point soldiers.

In spite of a ruling of the War Department that there was no authority for review beyond that of the commanding officer, General Ansell asserted his right of review under a statute of 1862, reopened the case, set the sentences aside, and restored the men to duty. He did more. He wrote to the Secretary of War and told him: "You cannot approve the iniquity of "such a system." According to the General's testimony before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, Mr. Baker did not support him, being advised, it seems, that General Ansell had no right to review proceedings. Nevertheless, he has persisted in what he considers the line of his duty. To resolve any doubt, Senator Chamberlain has introduced a bill giving the Judge Advocate General the power of review, so that a commanding officer shall not exercise it exclusively.

A flagrant case of abuse of court-martial authority cited by General Ansell—it seems incredible in this age—was that of a recruit, a mere boy, who for refusing to give up some cigarettes he was smoking in a camp kitchen and for defying his superiors with an oath was tried, convicted, dishonorably discharged, and sentenced to forty years in jail. The Colonel of the regiment reduced the sentence to ten years, but the reduction was, at the best, an admission that the proceeding had been indefensible. Oppression is not discipline. There are methods not cruelly punitive of bringing an insubordinate recruit to his senses. They are known at every post. Said General Ansell: "In "many instances—I am not citing ex-"ceptions—the same brutally exces-"sive sentences have been imposed for "trivial offenses."

That he was not citing exceptions appeared when he communicated these cases to the committee: A boy who deserted from the army at West Point and remained for five months with a father dying of paralysis reported for duty the day after his father's death, and was court-martialed and sentence of death imposed. (Set aside by General Ansell, who could not say what was done with the boy afterward.) Another young soldier "got" fifteen years for going to the home of a sick wife without leave and staying there forty days. A soldier was sentenced to death for refusing to drill in France after extreme exposure to cold for twenty-four hours. Two others were sentenced to death for sleeping on post when they had scarcely closed their eyes in four days of exacting duty. "These men," said General Ansell, "seldom have adequate counsel, and "don't know how to defend them-"selves."

Contrast these terrible sentences for offenses committed under extenuating circumstances with the release from prison of "conscientious objectors" who had refused to do any soldierly duty at all. Consider, that scores of them received their liberty with back pay and what was practically an apology from the Government. It is very difficult to reconcile this amiable clemency to slackers, honest or otherwise, with failure to support General Ansell's insistence upon the right—or privilege—of review in court-martial cases. He had the courage to tell Secretary Baker that abuse of court-martial authority was "personal ab-"solutism." There must be a reform in methods in the War Department.

NATIONAL PORT DANGERS.

There is to be a meeting of the leading officials of New York and New Jersey today with a view of uniting their efforts for the protection of this port against the dangers which threaten it, and which are not fanciful. The Chamber of Commerce has just issued its report showing that "since 1913, "when this port did 47.15 per cent. "of the total foreign business, there "has been a decline to 41.20 per cent. "in 1918. In 1917 we did 44.46 per "cent., and the decline this year to "41.20 per cent. represents a very "rapid falling off in the commerce "passing through the port." This is the more remarkable because New York's decrease was in spite of a large national increase of foreign trade. This port, therefore, is falling off in comparison with the nation because other ports are gaining at the expense of New York.

The reasons are so plentiful that they seem malicious. This port no longer complains alone of Federal neglect. Now it complains of Federal intention to reduce New York's trade because of a congestion alleged to exist. It would benefit the country if we were to have the means of doing the business, but the method taken is to divert trade. It is immemorial custom to give other ports a differential rate in order that they may do business in competition with New York's advantages, but that no longer suffices. The Director General has refused to prorate with the canal on which New York State and City have spent near $150,000,000 in order that the nation may starve its facilities. Meanwhile, trade is overtly routed via other ports of export, and they are crowding the newspapers with advertisements to attract business which otherwise would come to New York. Railways ending in New Jersey are always under temptation to promote the establishment of trade on that side the harbor in order to collect the rate which includes lighterage delivery, without performing the costly service. There was a time when this motive caused separatist tendencies in New Jersey itself, but happily this danger to the unity of the port is averted for the present. New Jersey no longer is seeking to divide the port, but is loyally co-operating against the danger which threatens both States alike if not equally.

There is a measure of reassurance in progress with the vehicular tunnel to provide access to the great terminals which must grow up on the New Jersey side of the harbor if the port is unified. There was a time when the meeting at the Chamber of Commerce today would not have been without risk of casualties, and then there might have been hope of popular interest. Nothing of that sort is likely, but a fillip is given by publication of Mr. Lindenthal's great scheme. It might be called too great if it would have to be taken or left as a whole. The scale of the proposal may be indicated by the small share the vehicular tunnel plays in it. That would remove the reproach that while it costs 27 cents to bring a ton here from Philadelphia it costs $3.65 to handle it at this terminal. It would cost less with the vehicular tunnel, but it would transfer the cost from the railways to the users of the tunnel.

The case calls for delivery in railway vehicles anywhere within the port. That calls for a railway bridge or tunnels, great classification yards on both sides the Hudson, union stations and elevated freight tracks in Manhattan, a freight tunnel to connect New England with the West via the New York Central Railroad, and many other things to complete the list. But one more of Mr. Lindenthal's suggestions must be mentioned. He lends the weight of his engineering authority to the suggestion of a passenger moving platform along Fifty-seventh Street to give rapid transit throughout Manhattan to all users of the unified railways. The situation on Forty-second Street is so like Fifty-seventh that it is hard to resist the inference that what is good for one case is good for the other.

At a time soon to come, when once more we shall be boasting of great undertakings rather than groaning under them, this plan will appeal to all who have imagination to visualize the proposals of an engineering master mind. Nothing like this has been proposed before. It rivals the dual subways in cost and utility, and will increase their profits along with their accommodations. It is not for the present, with its burden of war debt. Today's meeting may approve it, but cannot adopt it. Disapproval has never been the fate of Mr. Lindenthal's schemes, but they take fractions of centuries for their execution. Today's business is the treaty between New York and New Jersey, making co-operators out of competitors. That is business enough for one day, and perhaps it will appear that the vehicular tunnel will fit into the larger plan.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Inspiration Toward Americanism. There is, or can be made to be, a close relation between the efforts of the various organizations interested in the passage of the so-called Americanization bill now under consideration by the Education Committees of both houses of Congress and the "Roosevelt Exhibition" which has been planned by Professor W. A. Braun, the Director of Columbia House. This exhibition, too, is part of an Americanization plan—that of Columbia University—and no name is better calculated than that of Colonel Roosevelt to call public attention to the need for making the people in this country, and as nearly all of them as possible, something more than merely residents of it.

Himself so distinctly and distinctively American in every good sense of that word, the Colonel was entirely, and therefore unusually, free from the spirit or instinct of Know-Nothingism which lingers in so many representatives who, like him, are of the old American stocks. He did not judge a man by the date at which he or his ancestors came to this country; he judged the man by what he was and thought and did, and he enthusiastically admitted—often vehemently asserted, indeed—that among our more recent arrivals there were some as truly American as were the best of those whose ancestors settled the original Thirteen Colonies.

So every visitor who is attracted to the proposed Roosevelt Exhibition will get something and perhaps much of inspiration from the many reminders that will there be seen of the Colonel's varied activities, and it will be inspiration toward the real and strenuous Americanism which his whole life typified so well—an Americanism exempt from prejudices and proud only of achievement.

He Had All the Law He Needed. If there exists anywhere the impression that the present Mayor of Seattle, the now nation widely known Ole Hanson, is merely a man who met well a single emergency in his own vicinage, that impression should be short lived. There is more to him than that, and one indication of how much more, as well as a hint of its quality, is to be found in a brief telegram that was sent by him to The Times in response to a request that he tell the paper, at whatever length he chose, what action he thought should be taken to counteract Bolshevism in the United States. The reply showed both wisdom and caution. Also it was brief. Here it is:

> Legislation for this purpose should be careful or else laws may be enacted which, while apparently meeting the present emergency, would threaten the rights of the American people. I am not prepared at this time to recommend any definite program. It is well to wait a few days until calmness and deliberation take the place of furor and tumult. Few if any repressive laws are needed if public officials fulfill their oath of office.

The last sentence in this communication is especially worthy of thoughtful consideration. Too often, when trouble arises, the first thought is the passage of a new and fierce law. Mayor Hanson overcame the "revolution" in his city without any such help. He made it plain to the "revolutionists" that he was going to enforce the law as it was, according to the oath he took when he became Mayor, and—well, as he put it, "the revolution never reached first base," which is good American and easily understood.

Deportations Legal and for Cause. Judge Knox made short work of deciding that undesirable persons can be deported from this country when due process of law is observed by the officials undertaking the task. The irregularities, he very promptly discovered, had all been on the side of the little group seeking to prevent any reduction in our stock of Bolsheviki, members of the I. W. W., anarchists, and other would-be overturners of our Government. There was nothing for him to do, therefore, except to dismiss the writ which he had himself of necessity issued when it was requested. The Judge's decision will have a most encouraging effect on officers of the law and on good citizens in general, all of whom will be glad to see, for once, that legal technicalities cannot be invoked successfully for the protection of criminals. The curious folk who tried to prevent the deportations will have some trouble in satisfactorily explaining the ardor of their efforts in behalf of obnoxious and dangerous agitators.

FULL-GROWN.

It needs no chevron to denote the land
So lately left, the sights and sounds ye know,
Foul things that beat still in your brain, and grow
Black in the silent night. There is the hand
Nerve-tensed; a grayness in the cheek's outline;
Eyes that have peered too long into the night
Hint at some knowledge of an inner sight
Too much their own to give by word or sign.
Swift silences that breathe of strain and stress,
A gravity that comes with pain or prayer,
The studied smile, as though to con with care
The lesson of the old light-heartedness,
A lifting of the corners of the mouth,
Practice in unconcern. Dear lads of ours,
Thus is it, sometimes, Heaven exults, and dowers
All suddenly with strength the flame of youth—
Gives it through fiery trial and well-fought fears
What we must seek through painful plodding years.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Prohibition Amendment Invades Power Expressly Reserved to States.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A gentleman signing himself Hyacinthe Ringrose gives his opinion as a lawyer in a recent edition of a New York paper in regard to the prohibition amendment, that "No provision or amendment of the Constitution is subject to the adjudication of the Federal or State courts." This opinion indicates a very superficial knowledge of the Federal Constitution and the fundamental principles underlying our Government—a form of ignorance that never seemed so prevalent among all classes of our people as at present.

The United States Government is a federation of the States, which before the adoption of the Constitution were as sovereign and independent as are England, France, or Italy at this moment. In order to form our Federal Government it was necessary for the States to surrender nearly all of their sovereign attributes—which they did—particularly with respect to our international relations. There were, however, some sovereign powers which they not only did not give up, but which, on the contrary, were very careful to retain, because these powers were not only essential to their own welfare, but indispensable to the successful working of the federative system they were establishing.

While these reserved powers were generally understood to be recognized under the Constitution as originally adopted, the people of the States were not altogether satisfied, and preferred that these important matters should be put beyond any doubt or dispute; so shortly after the adoption of the Constitution ten amendments were added thereto, defining more certainly the respective rights and powers of the States and the Federal Government. The ninth and tenth amendments are as follows, respectively:

> The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.
> The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

For an authoritative statement of what are some of these reserved powers resort should be had to the decisions of the United States Supreme Court. In the so-called Slaughter House Cases the court held, for example, the police power to be among those that were reserved by and to the States, which power relates to the health, the morals, &c., of the people; and that the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth amendments of the Constitution, adopted after and as results of the civil war, did not impair in any way such power, nor limit the subjects in relation to which it may be exercised for the protection of its citizens.

No State can be properly deprived of these reserved powers without its consent, and any amendment of the Constitution which nullifies or abridges these powers of the States, no matter by how many States it may have been ratified, is fundamentally void and of no effect within the States that reject or refuse to ratify such amendment; or in other words, any amendment which takes from the States any of the powers or elements of their local sovereignty, expressly reserved by them to themselves, must be ratified by every State in the Union in order to be effective in all and every part of the Union.

Now, in answer to the assertion of Mr. Ringrose above stated, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and New Jersey have positively refused to ratify this proposed prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution, preferring, apparently, to retain to themselves their police power over the liquor traffic within their own borders, which power they refused to surrender when the Constitution was adopted, and the reservation of which was specifically recognized and conceded in the amendments of the Constitution hereinbefore quoted. Now, let us assume that the State of Connecticut licenses the sale of liquor within her territorial jurisdiction after Congress shall have passed laws to make effective the prohibition amendment, and a citizen of that State should be prosecuted in the Federal Court for a violation of such laws. Can it be doubted that on a motion to quash the indictment for the reasons and upon the grounds herein stated the court (and the Supreme Court on appeal) would have to pass on and determine the questions at issue, for they would involve the very guilt or innocence of the accused, which could not be otherwise decided; and, furthermore, that if it rightly decided the matter it would hold as herein indicated, or otherwise, in obedience to what appears to be a popular craze and obsession of a minority of the people, do violence to the compact between the several States under and by which the Federal Government was created and subsists as a nation.

A more impressive illustration of the principles involved is the exercise of the State's police power in the regulation of the relations of the white and colored people in the South. Would any one be so bold as to hold that an amendment to the Federal Constitution, against which the Southern States voted, authorizing the intermarriage of the races and otherwise forcing social equality among them, would be effective to deprive the Southern States of the right to regulate these matters in the way which they know from bitter experience to be best in the interest of both races within their respective borders? The two questions are the same in principle. If three-fourths of the States can by ratification of the prohibition amendment deprive the other fourth of their reserved police power, and force prohibition upon them against their will and over their protests, likewise could those States in which there are few negroes force upon the South the education of white and black children in the same schools, and the nullification of their laws forbidding the intermarriage of the two races. Such an idea is not only repugnant to every instinct of self-preservation and racial purity, but if ever attempted would produce a revolution in this country that would make our civil war seem tame in comparison.

Asquith-Lloyd George Letters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since questions have arisen both regarding the authenticity of the correspondence between Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George, appearing in the current Atlantic, and the propriety of publishing it, it seems proper to state that these letters, which are textually accurate, were handed to the editor, while recently in London, by a conspicuous friend and supporter of Mr. Asquith's, with the suggestion that it was desirable they should be published in the United States. In the correspondence Mr. George himself states that he wishes to have the letters published, and it was the clear understanding of the editor of The Atlantic that, while Mr. Asquith did not, for obvious reasons, wish to be privy to the disclosures, he was entirely willing that they should be made.

RAILROAD INCOME SHORT ONE-FOURTH

WAGES ROSE $5[illegible]3,000,000

Increase May Reach [illegible]900,000,000 for Full Year 1919—Abnormal War Conditions Pointed Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1[illegible].—The financial results of Government operation of railroads were disclosed tonight in a statement issued by Director General Hines showing that the net Federal railroad income for the year fell short of the standard return by $202,135,602. The standard return for the year is given as $890,383,685. The net Federal income was $688,200,083.

Operating revenue increased $853,868,213, or 21.4 per cent. Operating expenses increased $1,1[illegible]0,7[illegible]9,166, or 40.3 per cent. Net operating expenses decreased $276,901,953, or [illegible]3.5 per cent. Net Federal income corresponding to standard return guaranteed by the Government decreased $272,[illegible]92,028 under Government control and operation of the roads, or 28.3 per cent.

The statement points out that wage increases had the effect of increasing the 1918 operating expenses by $583,000,000. The full effect of the wage increase was not felt in 1918, as some of the higher wages did not go into effect until late in the year, and the effect of these increased wages for a full year could not be shown by the 1918 figures. There are some who believe these wage increases for the full year 1919 will reach $900,000,000.

"In considering the results for 1918," says the statement of the Director General, "it should be borne in mind that that year was almost wholly one of war conditions. It was necessary to move freight expeditiously, in many cases regardless of cost. Preference had to be given to munitions traffic and this naturally militated against economies. In addition, the railroads were compelled in many instances to employ inexperienced and inefficient labor, due to the inroads made upon their forces by the demands of the military service. It should not be overlooked in this connection that the railroads not only had to supply the demands of the military service generally, just as other industries did, but also had the special demand made upon them of supplying the men for the military railways in France. Therefore, in considering comparisons with previous years, the fact that 1918 was one of war conditions should be constantly borne in mind.

Financial Results in Detail.

"The results for the month of December, 1918, compared with December, 1917, were as follows:

MONTH OF DECEMBER.

Operat. revenues..	$4[illegible]284	$331,591,290
Operat. expenses..	38[illegible]080	246,086,629
Net operat. rev...	$5,[illegible]204	85,504,601
Operating ratio....	[illegible]9.5	74.2
Net Federal inc. corresponding to standard return guaranteed by Govt.	[illegible]31,[illegible]259	64,870,350
Standard return for one month...	74,1[illegible]49	......

Operat. expenses..	3,939,81[illegible]122	2,808,544,956
Net operat. exp...	903,[illegible]762	1,180,282,715
Net Federal inc. corresponding to standard return guar. by Govt...	688,[illegible]083	960,492,111

"Standard return for the year $890,335,685, so that the net Federal income for the year fell short of the standard return by $202,[illegible]35,602.

"The wage increases which were authorized throughout the year had the effect of increasing the 1918 operating expenses by approximately $583,000,000, which represents an increase of about 32 per cent. over what would have been the wages if there had been no increases in 1918. The increased cost of materials also added heavy burdens to operating expenses. The increased cost of locomotive fuel alone was equivalent to adding approximately $125,000,000 to the cost of transportation expenses. In 1918 operating expenses took 81.3 per cent. of operating revenues, compared with 70.4 per cent. in 1917.

"The 1918 results were adversely affected by the extreme weather conditions of January and February, 1918, and the extreme traffic congestion which obtained at that time. In January operating expenses took 95 per cent. of operating revenues; in February the operating ratio was [illegible] per cent. In comparison with the same months of 1917 the decrease in net Federal income in January and February, 1918, was $100,000,000.

Freight Train Operation.

"The results of freight train operation for December, 1918, compared with December, 1917, were:

	—Month of December.— 1918.	1917.
Miles of road operated..	[illegible]229,250	229,675
Revenue and non-revenue ton miles (thousands).	[illegible]059,507	31,960,171
Loaded freight car miles (thousands)	[illegible]129,960	1,101,427
Total freight car miles (thousands)	[illegible]714,168	1,553,277
AVERAGES.
Trainload tons..........	668	620
Carload tons...........	29.8	29.0
Per cent. of loaded to total car miles........	65.9	70.9

"The increase of freight traffic of 5.3 per cent. was handled with actually less freight train miles; in fact, the train miles were 2.3 per cent. less than in December, 1917. This result was accomplished by better car and train loading.

"The results for the year were as follows:

Revenue and non-revenue ton miles (thousands)	43[illegible]997,928	427,341,924
Loaded freight car miles (thousands) ..	[illegible]928,303	15,815,601
Total freight car miles (thousands)	[illegible]056,329	22,532,[illegible]07
Freight train miles (thousands)	637,924	654,580
AVERAGES.
Train load..............	682	653
Car load...............	29.1	27.0

"The figures for the year are more interesting than those for the month of December, as the former reflect the results of freight operations during the first year of Federal control, in comparison with those of the last year under private management. In making the comparison, consideration should be given to the fact that the 1918 figures were adversely affected by the severe weather conditions and the traffic congestion of January and February. Notwithstanding the heavy losses during the first two months under Federal control, the summary for the year shows that the 228,729 miles of railroad produced 435,000,000,000 ton miles in 1918, compared with 427,330,000,000 in 1917, an increase of 7,660,000,000, or 1.8 per cent.

"This increase in traffic was handled with an actual decrease in train miles and in loaded car miles. The train miles were 2.5 per cent. less than in 1917, and the loaded car miles were 3.6 per cent. less than in 1917. This was accomplished through an increase of 4.4 per cent. in the train load and 7.8 per cent in the car load, indicated in the above statement.

Empties in Solid Trains.

"The decrease in the percentage of loaded to total car miles was due principally to the relatively greater proportion of empty car miles as a result of the policy of the United States Railroad Administration to move the empties in solid trains to the regions where they would be needed for prospective traffic, such as grain, needed for war purposes. This policy, while somewhat increasing the empty car mileage, had the favorable results of ameliorating the car shortage and of expediting the movement of traffic.

"The passenger traffic for the year will show an increase in passengers carried one mile of approximately 9 per cent. The complete figures for the twelve months are not yet available. Those for the eleven months ended Nov. 30 show that in that period of 1918 the railroads, under Federal control, carried 39,000,000,000 passengers one mile—an increase of 3,250,000,000 over the corresponding period of 1917. These figures include the movement of troops and other military passenger traffic.

"On account of the elimination of many passenger trains which represented duplicate service, or were otherwise unjustifiable under war conditions, the number of passenger train miles in 1918 was less than in 1917, notwithstanding the increase in passengers carried one mile. The elimination of such duplicate passenger service had much to do with the better freight train performance. The passenger train miles for the entire year are not available, but the statements for November and December indicate that the total passenger train miles in 1918 were approximately 9 per cent. less than in 1917."

NEW HOME RULE BILL IN.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 14.—Legislative action to give the cities of the State some form of home rule will again be attempted by the lawmakers, despite the defeat of home rule suggestions offered to the 1918 Legislature. Coupled with the home rule proposal is seen resuscitation of the plan to either lessen the time of the present sessions of the Senate and Assembly or provide for legislative meetings biannually. Such a proposal last year was defeated.

The home rule bill was introduced today by Assemblyman Clarence S. Welsh of Albany. It is the work of a joint conference of representatives of the State conference of Mayors, the Citizens' Union, the City Club of New York City, and the Municipal Government Association. It is not as broad in its terms as previous measures. Instead of setting forth in detail the machinery for the framing, adoption, and amendment of city charters and the exercise of legislative powers by local bodies, the bill leaves these matters to be determined by the Legislature, but requires the Legislature to act on these subjects by general laws only. The bill further prohibits special local legislation. The great amount of local legislation sought annually by cities and smaller subdivisions of the State is one of the biggest reasons for the length of present legislative sessions.

Assemblyman Peter A. Leininger of Queens introduced a bill providing that in New York City all fines and penalties collected under the motor vehicle law must be paid over to the City Chamberlain and paid out to the Treasurers of the exempted or volunteer firemen's associations. Distribution of the funds is provided for, 15 per cent. to the Police Pension Fund, 20 per cent. to the Treasurer of the Children's Aid Society, the balance to be used for the maintenance and repair of New York City streets.

Senator John J. Mackrell's bill establishing a State motor vehicle department to take away the power of licensing motor cars from the Secretary of State's office, brought protest today from Magistrate W. Bruce Cobb of New York City, whom Senator Mackrell was quoted as saying supported the measure. Magistrate Cobb, in a letter to Secretary of State Hugo, declared Senator Mackrell had no authority for making the statement. Similar denial of support for the measure came from the New York State Automobile Association.

WILSON PRAISES SUPPORT.

Cables His Appreciation to the League to Enforce Peace.

The League to Enforce Peace received a cable message yesterday from President Wilson, expressing his appreciation of the support given him by the organization in the League of Nations cause. During the Atlantic Congress for a League of Nations held here last week a platform was adopted and cabled to the President, declaring that the purposes of the war can be effected only by the creation of a strong League of Free Nations, and expressing the belief that the public opinion of the United States stands behind the President in his efforts to secure this.

The President's reply was forwarded to William H. Short, Secretary of the League, by Charles H. Strong, who is acting as his representative in his absence on the transcontinental tour now being made by former President Taft and other notable speakers for the National Congresses for a League of Nations. The next congress will be in Portland, Ore., and four more are scheduled in important cities.

President Wilson's message was as follows:

"Your message from the 3,500 delegates representing the League to Enforce Peace has reached me and has given me just the assurance of support which I desire and which I most value, and I beg to express to all concerned my deepest appreciation for such support in the great cause.

"WOODROW WILSON."

Women Must Be Consulted, Paris Congress Declares.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—The Interallied Suffrage Congress today adopted a resolution proposed by Mrs. Juliet Barrett Rublee of the United States and seconded by Mrs. M. G. Fawcett of England, declaring that the coming peace should be a peoples' peace, which it could not be if women were not consulted, and that the League of Nations should not be an alliance of Governments only, but a general alliance between the peoples of the world.

It was declared that the league should include representatives of peoples so selected as to represent the different parties in their Parliaments. The resolution declared that working people and women must be made to feel that they were a part of the League of Nations.

A delegation of women called on Henry White, Sir Robert Borden, and George Nicoll Barnes yesterday and obtained promises of support for the recommendation that the League of Nations should consider the international condition of women and children. The commission will invite a committee from the Suffrage Congress to work with it in fixing details.

BERNE, Feb. 14.—At the second session of the Women's International Conference yesterday resolutions were adopted demanding the suppression of the blockade and equal political rights for women. It was decided to send three delegates, two British and one Swiss, to the Peace Conference in Paris to submit the views of the conference to President Wilson, Premier Clemenceau of France, and Foreign Minister Sonnino of Italy.

BRUSSELS RESUMES HER JOYOUS LIFE

HIGH PRICES ARE THE RULE

And Only the Wealthy Are Really Enjoying Themselves — Workmen Find It Hard to Live.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 14.—One has always heard that King Albert fought for a principle. A visit to Brussels these days convinces one that a principle was not all King Albert fought for. The capital of doughty Belgium is today Brussels. The joyous Brussels started celebrating the day the Germans left, and it found the celebration so pleasant it has not stopped yet. This city of elegance and beauty and dignity, of classic buildings and noble boulevards, is possessed of joy nowadays, joy that is the outpouring of abundance of reaction from the sombre life of four years of war. If one had not known what Brussels suffered one might say its joy is the pent-up joy of fifty-two months. Possessed as it is of this wonderful joy, incidentally Brussels is possessed of a hatred of the Hun which seems to me to transcend the hatred of the French for the boche, which, by the by, is no mean hatred.

Being within motoring distance of Brussels I came here because I had heard that President Wilson was coming to call on King Albert. The tip was worth about as much as most tips newspapermen get, but the trip is worth the trouble, and it may be set forth that President Wilson denied himself great personal pleasure by not coming. For the name of America is something to conjure with here where they tell you they would have starved had it not been for America, and here the name of Wilson stands for all that is admirable. Brussels is the heart of Belgium, and Belgium's heart beats strong for the U. S. A.

There are many in America who would find things to shock them in Brussels. Every night is much like an old-fashioned New Year's Eve on Broadway. But who denies Brussels the right to celebrate?

Coming through ravaged Louvain, where for miles you pass down streets where with fateful regularity every other house is destroyed, and then on to the ancient paved road that leads into the forest to the east of the capital. Winding through this beauty spot, you come at last to a great boulevard with a park in the middle and wide roadways on either side. There is nothing in America to match it. It was dark when we reached the city. Going to the Palace Hotel, near the Gare du Nord, we were told there were no rooms. After an hour's search we got into the Hotel Metropole, in the Place Brouckere, which had just been opened after the proprietor, as he told us, had spent weeks in cleaning it. The Germans had lived in it.

We hadn't asked the price of our rooms, and so the great shock awaited us at dinner. The prices of Brussels are the highest I have ever found. They make the proprietors of the boulevard cafés of Paris look cheap. In the café of the Hotel Metropole an order of fish is 15 francs, steak 22 francs, and ice cream 7½ francs. I know, because I paid for them.

When we finished dinner it was 10 o'clock. We called the head waiter and asked him what was open at that hour. "The Palace Café, the biggest," he said, "is not open. It opens at 11, Sir. You may find some few places open, but it is rather early, Sir. They are all open by midnight, however."

Now, we had come from the Rhine, where the lid goes on at 7 P. M., and had been to Paris, where nothing is to be had after 9:30. So we were surprised.

Major Bozeman Bulger, who was with me, said the Palace Café would do, so we started. We went out into a street ablaze and crowded with civilians and soldiers, Belgian civilians and English and Belgian soldiers. Every here and there was a French soldier but no Americans. Every other house seemed to be a café. From the doors of the first we passed came the strains of "Are You from Dixie?" We both were, and so the evening seemed well started. Reaching the Palace Café about 11 o'clock, we found it half filled, but filling rapidly. There I saw the first evening clothes since leaving New York a year ago. There were innumerable pretty girls, and every one was uncomfortably attentive because we wore American uniforms, and American stock is high in Brussels, as I have said. We found the same high prices we had met at dinner.

The Palace Café is fine. I know of no café in America so large. There was a large orchestra at either end, and the moment one ceased the other started playing, making the dancing continuous.

And the music was all American music, every last piece. I asked why and the orchestra leader replied that Brussels wanted joyous music, and the American ratime filled the bill. And those orchestras! About sixty pieces in each. They played our ragtime well, but performed an awful operation on "The Star-Spangled Banner" because one leader persisted in putting ragtime into it. It could just be recognized.

By 1 o'clock the place was packed to the doors. We stayed until 3 o'clock, and left the place still crowded. They said the crowd would thin out about 5 o'clock.

Next morning we decided to stay over a day, and, being well equipped with marks but without francs, went to a bank to do business.

"How much are marks worth?" the banker was asked.

"Nothing," was the reply.

"But," we said, "you understand the marks must be worth something. They are worth something in Paris. We wish to sell some marks for some francs."

"American friend of mine," replied the banker, "marks may be worth something somewhere, but they are worth nothing in Brussels."

What he said was true. No one would give a centime for marks in Brussels. Leaving there, we found that on all sides there was the most intense hatred for Germans and things German. This was true even among the shopkeepers, whom the Germans had enriched in many cases by their war trades. The Belgians are through with the Germans and all things German.

We made a tour of the beautiful capital from 11 to 1 o'clock through streets well-nigh deserted, for the city had not then awakened. It would take volumes to tell of the beauty of Brussels. Touching a few high spots—there is Palais de Jesc, one of the handsomest buildings on earth, standing atop a hill with a magnificent view. Near by is the new royal palace, which looks like twenty of the finest Fifth Avenue residences rolled into one. The Hotel de Ville looks more like a cathedral than a City Hall, and the world knows the dignity of Cathedral Saint Gudule. The Stock Exchange is a handsome Roman building. There are scores of magnificent buildings in this capital which grip one with their glory. One must mention the monuments and arches which dot the city.

After luncheon we found the city awake again, its streets filled, and joy everywhere, it seemed. But then we began to learn that the city, bright and beautiful and joyous, the city of wine and song we had seen, was only the glimmering surface. We saw that the shops were filled and that there was meat and food to be seen, but at what a price! We saw the street cars were not running, and learned that there was a strike of employes who said they could not live on their wages. We learned that there is much distress among the poor people, and that food and employment conditions are not good. I learned that Brussels, brave Brussels, was turning her best face to the world.

The bride went to France in March, 1918, as a member of the Red Cross, having served in the local organization since the outbreak of the war. She was stationed first at Bourges and later was placed in charge of one of the Paris hospitals. Her cousin, Mrs. Jean Cochery, is the wife of a nephew of President Poincaré of France. CRUTCHES THE BRIDAL ARCH

Wounded Comrades of Private Ferreira Honor Him and Bride.

Ernest Ferreira, a private in the Military Intelligence Department, and Miss Pauline Donahue, a Red Cross volunteer, were married yesterday afternoon in St. Stephen's Church, at Lexington Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, and as they came out of the church a dozen or more comrades of the bridegroom, all of whom were wounded in France, stood with their crutches raised to form an arch for the bride and bridegroom to pass under. Officers holding their swords for a bridal couple to pass under as they leave the altar is no novelty, but this was a strange double line.

The bridegroom lost an eye in a German air raid over England when he was stationed in barracks there. This is the first romance of Pershing House in Gramercy Park, where Mr. Ferreira first met his bride.

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

A Shakespearean Playhouse Production—Elsie Mackay as Rosalind.

Yesterday afternoon the Shakespeare Playhouse added "As You Like It" to its series of matinées at the Plymouth Theatre, Elsie Mackay playing Rosalind. In any generation it is given to very few actresses to catch the "native woodnote wild" of this gayest, most volubly feminine and most adorable of Shakespeare's heroines. Miss Mackay has youth and, what is infinitely more, the spirit of youth. Now and again she realized by flashes both the bubbling comedy of the part and its warm-blooded romance. But as yet she lacks the technique to sustain the performance on any high level; and there were whole scenes which she quite failed to fathom. Here is, however, a personality and a talent to reckon with. Shakespearean producers (if there are any such) would do well to keep an eye on her.

The production was only moderately competent and the acting as a whole semi-professional. Howard Kyle was Jacques; Leonard Willey, Orlando; Henry Herbert, Touchstone; Charles Webster, Oliver, and J. Harry Irvine, Le Beau.

The performance will be repeated this morning at 10:30 and Friday afternoon and Saturday morning of next week.

COMMISSION FAVORS A SOFT DRINK TAX

Argument for Such a Levy by Controller Travis at Tax Hearing.

Impost on Incomes Regarded as Undesirable in View of the Heavy Federal Levy.

Three of the committees of the Governor's Reconstruction Commission held hearings yesterday for the consideration of measures which are before the State Legislature or will soon be proposed in that body. In the morning the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment met in the Hall of Records and listened to taxation measures proposed by Eugene M. Travis, State Controller; Professor Henry C. Emery of Yale University, and M. Morgenthau of the Mirror Candy Company. In the afternoon at the hall of the Board of Education the Committee on Education heard opinions on military training from Dr. C. R. Mann of the Bureau of Education; Colonel E. Hunt of the United States Army; James E. West, Chief of the Boy Scouts of America, and Dr. Abner P. Way, assistant director of physical training in the New York public schools. In the evening the Committee on Public Health met at the Academy of Medicine to hear arguments for and against the Davenport-Donohue Health Insurance bill.

While Controller Travis gave it as his opinion that an income tax was highly desirable, it could not be imposed as a State measure now because of the heavy Federal income tax. To provide the funds necessary to carry the State through the next fiscal year he proposed raising the incorporation tax from one-twentieth to one-tenth of 1 per cent., increasing the tax on banks and trust companies, taxing nonintoxicating drinks, placing a tax of $2 per thousand on coupon bonds, and increasing the tax on vehicles. The Controller said that if these taxes were levied the State would have all the money it needed. Professor Emery agreed with Mr. Travis on the undesirability of levying an income tax, and further urged that a tax be placed on all luxuries of wide consumption, such as ice cream, ice cream soda, candy, and chewing gum. Mr. Morgenthau and other representatives of the candy and chewing gum interests strongly opposed such taxes, maintaining that they were discriminatory and difficult to collect.

At the hearing on education Dr. Mann said that he was at one time opposed to the military training of boys, and that this opposition had been strengthened by what he had seen of the military system in Germany. He said, however, that he had changed his mind, and now believed that military training, used in the right way, was of benefit to the boys, as it put into them the right sort of spirit. Colonel Hunt seconded Dr. Mann's opinions, while Mr. West urged the kind of training given by the Boy Scouts rather than that of the strictly military kind.

The proposed health insurance law met strong opposition from the physicians at the hearing of the Public Health Committee, but was heartily espoused by the labor interests and by Dr. Louis I. Harris of the New York Board of Health and Dr. John B. Andrews of the American Association for Labor Legislation. Others who spoke were James P. Holland of the State Federation of Labor, Dr. Lee S. Frankel of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Fred S. Wilkens of the Commercial Casualty Company, Dr. William L. Heeve of the Kings County Medical Society, F. Spencer Baldwin, manager of the New York State Insurance Fund, and Dr. G. W. Kosmak of the New York County Medical Society.

Dr. Kosmak voiced the general view of physicians in opposing the measure because of the "contract-doctor" provision, which they urge would lower the standards of medical practice and would give rise to all the evils of the "lodge doctor." Dr. Harris admitted that this was a great evil and should be eliminated from the bill, but berated the medical profession for its blind opposition to the bill without engaging statisticians and others who would scientifically work out the proper fee for a doctor, so that the bill might be amended and the good features retained.

"This is not the time for wild guesses," he said, "but for careful calculation. We must remember that there are 30,000 tubercular people today who are being held back from hospitals because provision is not being made. The results of an investigation made last year, and soon to be published, show of 2,084 families investigated, where there was tuberculosis, 20 per cent. had a total income for the family of less than $600 and another 30 per cent. of less than $900. This alone shows that people are not getting the fabulous wages they are supposed to be getting, and that they need the help that health insurance would give."

ST. VALENTINE FESTIVITIES.

Emerald Society Ball at the Waldorf Leads Day's Gayeties.

St. Valentine's Day was marked with several interesting social events.

An annual function, which was omitted last year on account of the war, took place last night at the Waldorf-Astoria when the Emerald Society of Brooklyn held one of the most successful balls in the history of the organization. The grand ballroom, Astor Gallery, and adjacent reception rooms were taxed to their capacity with the members and their guests.

The ballroom was festooned with American and allied emblems, and Shannon's Band played. The proceeds of the ball go to the various charitable institutions under the jurisdiction of the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum Society.

Twenty-five wounded men from Debarkation Hospital No. 3 were the guests of honor yesterday afternoon at a St. Valentine's tea held by the National League for Woman's Service at the Sailors, Soldiers and Marines Club, 257 Madison Avenue. Mrs. Edward McVickar, Chairman of the league, and Mrs. Winthrop Burr, acted as hostesses.

Mrs. Francis S. Hutchins of 449 Park Avenue gave the first of a series of luncheons yesterday at Sherry's, for her daughter, Miss Margaret E. White.

The Tank Corps League, of which Mrs. Everett Colby is President, gave a dance last night at its club house, 253 Madison Avenue, the proceeds of the dance to be devoted to the support of the club.

Two orchestras played for Roshanara's costume ball of the Orient, which took place last night at the Biltmore. A pageant of the East was presented at midnight. Many of the guests appeared in Oriental costume, and there were native singers and fortune tellers.

MINE STRIKE THREAT ALARMS BRITAIN

Workers Rejoin to Government Statement—Belfast Men Reject Terms.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Following the decision of the Miners' Federation to call for a strike ballot, the federation has issued an official reply to the Government's statement regarding the miners' demands.

This reply charges the Government with trying to turn public opinion against the miners and refuses to accept the data upon which the Government based its offer of a shilling a day increase in wages. It says that the miners' demand for a 30 per cent. increase, with a six-hour day, is designed to raise their standard of living and not solely to meet the increased cost of living.

These points are supported by long arguments, while the demand for the nationalization of the mining industry is forcibly reiterated.

The majority of the newspapers consider that the Government is dealing very reasonably with the miners, and say that the miners are unreasonable in placing a short time limit for a decision on a policy such as nationalization, which may mean the changing of the basic foundations of the industry, upon which other important industries largely depend.

The influence of Robert Smillie, the miners' leader, is so great that his advice to the members of the federation to vote in favor of a strike is likely to be adopted unless the tension is relieved. In the event of a strike, The Mail's labor expert remarks, the country may be confronted by a "wholesale idnustrial disaster and such suffering among the poor as even the war failed to inflict."

The Belfast workers today rejected by ballot the proposals of the employers by more than 2,000 majority.

In the meantime, negotiations between the Transport Workers' Federation and the employers seem to have reached something like an impasse, although a break has not come as yet.

In reply to a proposed amendment to the reply to the address from the throne suggesting the stimulation of national undertakings throughout the empire in fields of production too large for individual enterprise, Captain Amery, member for South Birmingham, speaking on behalf of the Government in the House of Commons yesterday, said that the nation was approaching the limits of ordinary methods of revenue, and that it was advisable to inquire whether a system of partnership with industry was not feasible. He said that this plan might create new sources of wealth where individual enterprise might not be tempted to venture.

"Undoubtedly," he said, "there are great fields over which the State might well ponder as to the advisability of development. The empire has reached a stage when such opportunities should be considered."

BIG LEAGUE PLAYERS IN SERVICE MAY NOT BE RELEASED IN TIME FOR TRAINING TRIPS

PLAYERS IN CAMPS SOURCE OF WORRY

Many Big Leaguers May Not Be Mustered Out in Time to Make Training Trips.

UPSET SPRING SCHEDULES

Benny Kauff Is Discharged from Camp Sherman and Starts at Once for New York to See McGraw.

With the training season only a month away, major league club owners have good grounds for worry in the fact that the players are not being released from army service as promptly as they had expected. Acting on the suggestion of the War Department, each club has notified the commands in France under which the soldiers are serving, but up to the present time not one club has any definite assurance that the soldier ball players will be out of service in time to go South next month.

The case of Bill Killifer, the Chicago catcher, has set the club owners thinking. Killifer is at Camp Custer and is with a casual detachment which attends to the mustering out of the troops as they return from overseas. Killifer made application to be discharged and it was denied. He was informed that the men in that branch of the service would be needed for another year. That is a sad blow to Bill and to the Cubs.

Over at Camp Merritt, at Tenafly, N. J., there are more than half a dozen major league players, including Rube Bressler, the Cincinnati pitcher, and Pickles Dilhofer, the Philadelphia catcher. This squad believed that they were going to be mustered out some time ago, but there is no sign of their being discharged. Hank Gowdy has sent word that he expects to be back in time to go on the Spring training trip, but he is with the army of occupation in Germany and Hank's wishes in the matter may not be followed out. No one knows just where Grover Cleveland Alexander is, and no definite word has been received about his home coming.

The Brooklyn club will be in a bad way if its players are not released within the next month, for no less than twenty-four men on the Dodger pay roll are in Uncle Sam's service. President Ebbets claims that this is the largest representation of any of the major league clubs. Some of the Brooklyn players have been released, but Manager Robinson is still awaiting news of others of his players.

Benny Kauff of the Giants, who was a corporal at Camp Sherman, was here on a furlough some time ago and announced that he would be discharged in a few days, but Benny wasn't set free until yesterday. He started for New York at once. The fact of the matter is, many of the ball players who were held in the camps in this country are now busily engaged in mustering out the other troops and are in the same position as Bill Killifer. Both the Giants and the Yanks have so many men at the camps that if they are not demobilized within the next month the Spring training plans are going to be badly upset.

Ed Sicking of the Giants is in a camp near Cincinnati. He sent in his signed contract yesterday to the New York club. He said that he was just about to be mustered out of service. Sidney Ross, the young pitcher who came to the Giants from the Texas League with Sicking, also signed his contract yesterday but he wasn't in the service.

Jess Barnes and Rube Benton, two pitchers Manager McGraw is counting on for the coming season, are not yet out of the army.

SMITH REFUSES TO SIGN.

Giants' Young Catcher Returns Contracts and Asks for Increase.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 14.—Returning unsigned to McGraw the contract the latter sent him, Earl Smith, the local boy signed by McGraw to catch for the Giants this season, is asking for more money.

"Understand, I am not a holdout," said Smith. "But I think I am entitled to more salary than the contract specified, so I returned the document, stated the case and I am waiting to hear from McGraw. I believe he will see my side of the case and meet the mild demand I have made."

Smith, it will be recalled, was secured from the Rochester, N. Y., club in exchange for Wilhoit, Kelly, Hoyt, and Rodriquez. His home is in this city, where he was born and raised and where he played amateur ball for years before entering the bigger leagues.

"The last letter I had from McGraw," said Smith, "was to the effect that he and his pitchers and catchers would come to this city. I was told to await them here. It is too bad the entire team is not going to train in Hot Springs."

FRISCH DEFEATS CANNEFAX.

St. Louis Billiard Player Loses Handicap Match in Brooklyn.

Harry Frisch won the handicap three-cushion carom billiard match against Robert Cannefax of St. Louis, former champion, which ended last night at Lawler Brothers' Academy in Brooklyn. Frisch made 134 to 165 by Cannefax. Inasmuch as the former champion had agreed to make 200 points to Frisch's 150, the latter was declared the winner.

Cannefax took the final block by a count of 40 to 24 in fifty-three innings. The St. Louis star had a high run of six, while Frisch's best run was four points. In an afternoon exhibition Cannefax, playing for 40 points, defeated James Lawler, playing for 30, by a score of 40 to 20 in fifty-six innings. Lawler had the highest run, a cluster of five. Cannefax's best run was four.

By defeating Manual Training High School's hockey sextet in their game yesterday at the Brooklyn Ice Palace the skaters of Jamaica High School advanced to the lead in the Brooklyn hockey championship series in the Public Schools Athletic League tournament. The score was 5 to 0. This game gave the Long Island lads their fourth victory. They are leading the league with eight points, one point more than Poly Prep School's team.

Clifford, playing at centre, was a big factor in the victorious team's success. This sterling skater was all over the ice from start to finish and he led Jamaica's attack. In the first period Clifford gave his team two goals, the first coming after 10 minutes and 12 seconds on a straight and clean shot, while the other came thirty seconds before the whistle from scrimmage.

Manual Training's defense tightened in the second period, but with an aggressive attack the Jamaica skaters smashed their way to two more goals. Clifford added another goal to his slate when he scored after carrying the puck from the far corner of the rink.

In another game Poly Prep School's skaters vanquished the Boys' H. S. sextet by the convincing margin of 9 goals to 1. Never was the issue in this clash left in doubt. The Poly Prep lads clearly outclassed their rivals in skating ability and team play so that the result was easily accomplished. Frank Farah led the victorious team. He scored two goals in the first period, which ended with Poly Prep leading by 4 to 0, and in the second collected four more markers.

MANY TEAMS IN MEET.

Record Entry List for Junior Indoor Championships.

Entries of nine teams have been received for the medley relay championship race which will be part of the program at the National A. A. U. junior indoor championship athletic meet to be held tonight at the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn. This surpasses previous records for the medley relay competition. The teams include quartets from the Glencoe A. C., Lafayette College, Boys' Club, Brooklyn A. A., Knights of St. Antony, Meadow Brook Club of Philadelphia, Princeton, Paulist A. C., and Columbia University.

The Columbia University officials have reserved their athletes expressly for the relay effort. Last year two Blue and White teams competed, finishing first and second, but because of irregularities in registration of the members of the teams, the performance was disallowed. Following the disqualification of the Morningside Heights athletes the Jersey Harriers' A. A. team, which finished third, was awarded the title. Bob Crawford, former Flushing H. S. champion runner, will run the mile leg in the relay for Lafayette. A total of 150 individuals have entered for the twelve events scheduled, making a total of more than 250 entries.

YALE HAS STRUGGLE TO DEFEAT RUTGERS

Eli Five Wins Hard Contest, 29 to 24, After Defense Succeeds in Suppressing Robeson.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 14.—Although Rutgers soared into an 8 to 2 lead tonight during the first five minutes of play, Yale's basket ball team overcame the handicap and led 14 to 12 when the first half closed, finally winning 29 to 24. Yale at no time accumulated a safe lead. The stubbornness of the defense of both fives is attested by the 21 fouls called. Robeson, Rutgers's football star, was suppressed by the Yale defense, but Taliaferro's goal throwing from foul and Van Slick's all around game featured the match. Van Slick's 15 points saved his side from defeat. Tonight's appearance at Yale was Rutgers's first in fifteen years.

WHO CARES? is a story of adolescence, of a boy and girl flung suddenly upon their own resources, buying their own experiences, and opening the secrets of life without guidance, and finally coming out of a great adventure undamaged, owing to their inherent sense of cleanness.

There are many surprising situations and much sparkling dialogue in this new novel.

Who Cares?

"Mr. Hamilton intrigues us with his story and his heroine. We finish the book with the sense of having taken a dizzy joy ride in a roundabout of dazzling romance."

They are not residuums of a depleted stock, but, for the most part, splendid handsome Suits and Overcoats, designed and tailored in our own shops within the past few weeks. The fabrics are wonderfully rich—neat patterns and modest colorings—and the variety would be impressive were it now the season's beginning instead of having passed its meridian.

SEEK OFFICERS CRUEL TO SOLDIERS

TO QUESTION GEN. CROWDER

Intense Indignation Aroused by Gen. Ansell's Revelations of Courts-Martial Proceedings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Condemnation of the severe penalties upon American soldiers by courts-martial as revealed in the testimony of General Ansell, the Judge Advocate General, was voiced by several members of the Senate in debate today. Senators Borah of Idaho, Knox of Pennsylvania, and Pomerene of Ohio were among those who expressed their indignation.

During the debate Senator Borah asked for the names of the officers who laid down the long sentences for comparatively trifling offenses which General Ansell spoke of yesterday before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in connection with the hearing on the bill by Senator Chamberlain to revise the court-martial system.

Senator Chamberlain said that when General Ansell appeared again before the committee tomorrow the names of the officers presiding at the courts-martial would be sought. The names of the prisoners about whom the instances were related have already been given to the committee in confidence.

"When a man assesses a punishment such as has been imposed in numerous instances for the slightest dereliction of duty," said Senator Borah, "it is not all due to the default of the law. There is a default in the man.

"I have in my possession information coming directly to me from a man in the War Department who examined the records. A boy was ordered to peel potatoes, which he declined to do, and he was sent to the penitentiary for twenty years by a court martial. The man who assessed that punishment is a dangerous member of society. He would commit murder if the place were secret enough so that the miserable coward would not be intercepted in his deed. It is that man that I want to reach. Militarism in the United States is just as objectionable to me when it is based upon such infamous practices as it is in Prussia."

Discussing the differences that exist between officers in the War Department upon the law of court martial, Senator Chamberlain said:

"In the last analysis one of the very great differences is between lawyers as to the construction of a certain provision of the law. General Ansell and those who agree with him insist that the Judge Advocate General's office has power to revise proceedings of the courts martial, while others in the same branch of the service hold that the law does not give that power. I am disposed to agree with General Ansell's construction of it."

Senator Norris of Nebraska asked if a newspaper article appearing this morning correctly portrayed the testimony given by General Ansell yesterday, and Senator Knox, who heard the testimony, said the article was in no way exaggerated. But when Senator Norris tried to have the newspaper article read, Senator Fletcher asked:

"What's the use of taking up time reading articles from newspapers? I think it is hardly fair to put one side of this controversy into the record and have the American people prejudge the case. General Crowder is the chief, and it seems to me to be fairer to wait until he makes his statement."

"I do not regard any difference of opinion between General Ansell and General Crowder upon the appellate jurisdiction of the right to revise by the Judge Advocate General's Office as at all involved in this matter," put in Senator Knox. "General Crowder's construction of the law did not procure these excessive and barbarous sentences which were imposed upon our men in France or in this country. The whole question is whether these excessive sentences can be reviewed. That is purely and simply a question of law. The fact is that they were reviewed, and in all of these very extreme cases the sentences were very much reduced by the reviewing authority."

Senator Pomerene of Ohio joined in the condemnation of the sentences, saying:

"I was very much shocked by the newspaper account, and I confess I was a little disappointed when the Senator from Pennsylvania said that it was not exaggerated. I had hoped for the sake of the army that it would prove to be exaggerated. I hope that the men who imposed those severe penalties will be dismissed from the service."

Home address, Peter Giacoumos, 284 Third Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

First Sergeant THOMAS JOSEPH SWEENEY, A. S. No. 89001, Co. A, 165th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Landres-et-Saint Georges, France, Oct. 15, 1918. Corporal PATRICK TRAVERS, A. S. No. 90923, Co. H, 165th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Sedan, France, Nov. 6, 1918. Without assistance, Corporal Travers advanced on an enemy sniper's post and successfully made prisoners of the entire crew, which included one officer, only being able to take the latter after a brief struggle. His action prevented a flanking fire on his platoon and aided greatly in their rapid advance. Home address, Mrs. Bridget O'Brien, 163 Eckford Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sergeant JOSEPH W. BURNS, A. S. No. 89,500, Co. C, 165th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Landres-et-Saint Georges, France, Oct. 15, 1918. Assisted by another soldier, Sergeant Burns voluntarily went to the aid of a comrade who was lying in front of his lines and in full view of the enemy. After administering first aid, they succeeded in bringing the wounded man to safety. Home address, Eugene Burns, brother, 711 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sergeant JOHN VAN HART, Co. G, 113th Infantry, A. S. No. 1,277,637. For extraordinary heroism in action near Molleville Farm, France, Oct. 10-25, 1918. Attached to the Battalion Scouts, Sergeant Van Hart repeatedly went out on dangerous patrols, secured valuable information, assisted in first-aid work, carried litters, rations, and water, and voluntarily made numerous trips through artillery and machine-gun fire with important messages. Home address, Mrs. Grace Van Hart, wife, 612 Elizabeth Avenue, Elizabeth, N. J.

Corporal JOHN E. FERGUSON, Co. M, 115th Infantry, A. S. No. 369,915. For extraordinary heroism in action near Samogneux, France, Oct. 8-29, 1918. Throughout the offensive east of the Meuse, near Samogneux, Corporal Ferguson displayed exceptional bravery and endurance as a battalion runner, repeatedly carrying important messages through intense artillery and machine-gun fire after other runners had been killed in traversing the same routes. On numerous occasions he alone was responsible for the maintenance of both forward and rear liaison. Home address, Mrs. Mamie Ferguson, wife, 101 West Eighty-eighth Street, New York City.

Second Lieut. EDWARD J. SULLIVAN, 104th Infantry. For extraordinary heroism in action near Los Eparges, France, Sept. 12, 1918. While leading his platoon forward, and finding no gap in the enemy's wire, Lieutenant Sullivan, although severely wounded, directed his men in cutting the wire and encouraged their advance, until he fell exhausted from his wounds. Home address, Mrs. Mary Sullivan, mother, 401 West Twenty-second Street, New York City.

Captain EDWARD V. RICKENBACKER, Air Service, 94th Aero Squadron. For the following act of extraordinary heroism in action near Billy, France, Sept. 25, 1918, Captain Rickenbacker is awarded an additional bar, to be worn on the Distinguished Service Cross awarded him Oct. 16, 1918. While on voluntary patrol over the lines Captain Rickenbacker attacked seven enemy planes, (five, type Fokker, protecting two, type Halberstadt.) Disregarding the odds against him, he dived on them and shot down one of the Fokkers out of control. He then attacked one of the Halberstadts and sent it down also. Home address, Mrs. William Rickenbacker, 1,334 East Livingstone Avenue, Columbus, Ohio.

SOLDIERS UPHOLD O'LEARY.

Two with Anti-British Leanings Say His Speech Made Them Enlist.

The defense at the trial of Jeremiah A. O'Leary called as witnesses yesterday two soldiers, who testified that addresses they had heard the defendant make had not stirred up mutinous feelings against the Government, but had inspired them to enlist. Private Michael J. Mullins, who said he was an Englishman by birth, with Irish sympathies, said he was at the meeting held by the Friends of Irish Freedom in the Harlem River Casino in August, 1917, at which O'Leary was a speaker. He admitted the trend of the talks was anti-British.

"Did anything I said cause you to have rebellious feelings against the Government?" asked O'Leary, who conducted the cross-examination.

"No, on the other hand, I felt cheap because I was not in a uniform already."

"Do you love England or hate her?"

"I don't exactly love or hate England, but I'd like to see Ireland free."

Private George Francis O'Neill, who testified along the same line, said under cross-examination that his love for the United States was chiefly the result of his hatred of England. He expressed agreement with the sentiments expressed by O'Leary in Bull that men of Irish extraction would welcome German bullets rather than fight alongside of the British "redcoats."

Mrs. Frances Brannigan, who said she had lost a son fighting with the old 69th Regiment in France, controverted evidence given by Government witnesses that O'Leary had advocated a fight against the Selective Draft act at a meeting held at 715 Lexington Avenue. She declared that O'Leary did not refer to the draft act in his speech. The trial will be continued on Monday.

Scott Nearing expressed the opinion yesterday at his trial that the Socialists really elected President Wilson.

In reply to a question as to what he meant by "not supporting the war," Nearing said he wanted to make clear that he would neither enlist nor buy Liberty bonds. He admitted making speeches opposing the first Liberty Loan. Cross-examined by Earl Barnes, Assistant United States District Attorney, he declared that the only war that met with his approval was a war against the "wealth lords." His trial will be continued on Monday.

JOURNET QUITS CAMPANINI.

Basso, Returning to France, Quoted as Saying 'Prima Donna Dominates.'

Marcel Journet, the French opera basso, who sang at the Metropolitan a score of years ago under Maurice Grau, and returned to New York this season with the Chicago Opera Company under Campanini, has given up his engagement and is going home to France. At the Hotel Knickerbocker last night it was said that Mr. Journet was sailing today on the liner Espagne.

The singer was quoted as saying that he "refused to remain in an opera company that was dominated by a prima donna." Mary Garden has been the chief star in French opera casts, both with Campanini and formerly with Hammerstein. She sings in Paris at the Opéra Comique, while Journet is a member of the Grand Opéra, an institution run on different lines.

In the Chicago company's performances of "Thaïs," "Faust," and "Carmen," it was said, Mr. Journet had desired to appear in his usual rôles, but that singers of the more dramatic Opéra Comique had replaced him. His departure follows that of Lucien Muratore, who left in the course of the Chicago season. Mr. Campanini declined to comment on the singer's withdrawal last evening.

MOTOR TRUCK SHOW ENDS.

First Two-Week Exhibition Justifies Dealers' Hopes.

New York's nineteenth automobile show will end tonight in Madison Square Garden and the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory with the close of the motor truck section of the exhibition. It is the first time that a continuous two weeks' show has been held, and although the present week has not drawn such large crowds as were present during the passenger car week, the wisdom of the Dealers' Association in holding a big commercial car exhibition has been thoroughly justified. It has given the business and industrial interests of the city the clearest object lesson ever presented of the growth of the motor truck industry and the rapid development of highway transportation in all parts of the country.

WILL MEET ALL RATE CUTS.

But Shipping Board Will Not Take Initiative, Says Hurley.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Chairman Edward N. Hurley announced today that it would be the policy of the Shipping Board, at least until a permanent mercantile marine policy had been agreed upon after consultation with commercial interests and Congress, to meet every reduction in freight rates by British or other foreign interests, and otherwise provide for the advancement and protection of America's trade.

For the present no effort will be made by the Shipping Board, it is understood, to institute rates lower than the British. The final solution of the rate problem, as it affects American industrial, commercial and shipping interests, will be one of the subjects treated in the comprehensive report on permanent policy which Mr. Hurley hopes to have ready for Congress within the next thirty days.

Since Jan. 1 Great Britain has reduced many of the war-time shipping freight rates by from 50 to 66 2-3 per cent. These cuts have already been met by the Shipping Board for all vessels controlled by it. The cuts have resulted in an increase in shipments. The Shipping Board is bending every effort to obtain additional tonnage for general trade channels. At present, of the 7,700,000 tons under the American flag, only 20 per cent. is available for European and Far Eastern trade, and 10 per cent. for domestic trade, including coastwise and South America.

UNIVERSITY BARS DR. LOUIS LEVINE

Montana State Suspends Noted Economic Expert for Insubordination.

TAX PAMPHLET THE ISSUE

Publication of Report Showing Copper Mines Do Not Bear Their Share Said to be Cause.

Dr. Louis Levine, Professor of Economics of the State University of Montana, and well known in this city, has been suspended from the Faculty of the Montana University on a charge of insubordination, his friends here learned yesterday. His suspension came on the day upon which he published a report of an investigation he made into the taxation of mines in Montana, in which he arrayed facts intending to prove that the mining interests of that State are not bearing their share of the burden of taxation and especially the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, which pays about 6 per cent. of the taxes collected in the State and is a power politically.

Professor Levine went to Montana from this city in 1916. He had been the economic expert for the New York State Department of Labor and a lecturer at Columbia University. He has already been selected to lecture at the University's Summer school this season. He is an authority on taxation and on labor and the author of "The Labor Movement in France" and other works. The news of his suspension came as a surprise to some of his friends here and one of them in speaking on the subject yesterday viewed his suspension as "the most recent instance of interference with academic freedom."

Early in last year the University of Montana assigned to Professor Levine the task of making a study of the taxation of property in Montana. The tax system of the State has been for years the subject of criticism. He completed his report and the following is the version of subsequent events given by friends here.

Montana University intended to publish Professor Levine's report and with this object in view late in last year he submitted to Chancellor Elliot his manuscript. The latter told him that he would have typewritten copies made and submit them to the members of the Montana State Board of Education. Later the Chancellor wrote that he thought it unwise to submit it and upon learning this the Professor wrote that he was willing to publish the essay himself.

He had a conference with the Chancellor at which it is alleged the latter told him that the University wished to bring the pamphlet out. It was the suggestion of the Chancellor that the work could go into type and be held until the Governor of the State as the head of the State Board of Education should say whether it should be printed or not.

Following the conference Professor Levine went to Washington at the request of the Department of Labor. On his return, it is said, he was told that if he published the report his usefulness to the University would be at an end. He published it and on Feb. 7, the very day it appeared, Chancellor Elliot announced that "under the rules of the State Board of Education, I have suspended Professor Levine from further duty for insubordination and unprofessional conduct."

In his report, "The Taxation of Mines in Montana," Dr. Levine declared there has been too much politics in handling the tax situation in that State. He devoted a whole chapter to the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, and this sums up that chapter:

"During the five years, 1913-17, the average assessment of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company was 6.6 per cent. of the total assessment of the State, and the company paid 6.7 per cent. of all taxes collected in the State. The company was assessed at about 25 per cent. of the true value of all its properties in Montana, while agricultural land is reported to have been assessed at 35 per cent., live stock at 45, bank stock at 60. During the same period the Anaconda Copper Mining Company paid about the same number of mills on its assessment as all other property in the State; but the Anaconda Copper Mining Company paid only about 8 mills on the estimated true value of its Montana properties, while all other property paid on an average of 12 to 14 mills. And finally, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company paid in taxes to the State about 6 per cent. of its income derived from operations in Montana, while other property, especially farming property, paid an average of 10 to 12 per cent. This, then, is the comparative tax burden in Montana in so far as it can be measured on the basis of available data."

The case of Professor Levine was to have been taken up by the university authorities on Monday. What action they took is not known here.

LOVING CUP TO MRS. SPEYER

Irene Club, of Which She Was a Founder, Now 35 Years Old.

Mrs. James Speyer received a loving cup from the Irene Club last night at the celebration of its thirty-fifth anniversary at the West Side Branch Y. W. C. A., 50th Street and 10th Avenue. The Irene Club was the first working girls' club to be organized in New York. Miss Grace Dodge, Mrs. Richard Irvin and Mrs. Speyer were the founders. Mrs. Speyer had been the Treasurer of the club from its organization until the death of Mrs. Richard Irvin, whom she succeeded as President.

Two of the charter members of the club who are now grandmothers were among those present. The club was started on the night of St. Valentine's Day thirty-five years ago, in 38th Street, with eight members. It now has 200 and meets at the Y. W. C. A. Mrs. Speyer was entirely surprised by the gift. In the cup were thirty-five red roses, the club flower. At the close of the meeting Mr. Speyer, who was present, made the Irene a gift of $500.

Some Stocks Strong, Others Irregular in Quiet Trading—Victory Loan Being Shaped.

The trading pace slackened considerably among stocks yesterday and irregularity developed, although the tone was strong at the close in respect to many of the more prominent issues. The oil shares which have seemed to be catalogued as the group most susceptible to constructive market operations during the current period of industrial uncertainty were again bid upward, several of them with considerable zest. It remains for the actual developments of industry and trade to prove whether or not a state of mind has controlled to an important degree speculative transactions among the industrial stocks, but it has been noted that petroleum concerns have been the subject of fairly persistent comment of an optimistic order ever since the armistice was signed. Quite likely many astute traders have made the most of this phenomenon, as the current position of many oil stocks shows, and no real test of forces has so far developed in the market to show whether or not the general cheerfulness over petroleum prospects has an unchangeable basis. The steel issues were among those which acted in rather an uncertain fashion, and railroad shares were quiet.

The market again paid no attention to international occurrences which were made memorable for the day through the publication of the draft of the League of Nations plan. Neither did stocks denote any change of opinion in respect to industrial activity, although the weekly survey of trade by the commercial agencies denoted a moderate degree of improvement in buying among lines which had recently felt the effect of price reductions. The reports were qualified, however, by comment to the effect that price readjustments would evidently have to go considerably further before a real awakening among consumers became patent to trade. Copper is still seeking lower levels, in so far as small offerings are concerned, with the major selling agencies still retaining the 18-cent quotation. In the steel trade semifinished iron prices have been giving way during the last ten days without affecting steel as yet, and steel mills are continuing varied degrees of activity, the tinplate works being operated close to capacity, while many basic plants are only partially engaged. A summary of the information from industry as a whole could probably be comprised in the assertion that while price cuts have brought an improvement of buying, still the point is yet to be reached where consumers and producers may get together in a confident way.

Secretary of the Treasury Glass impressed bankers with his preparations for future Government financing, as outlined before the Ways and Means Committee of the House, particularly in regard to the wide latitude he is seeking. The Secretary made it clear on Thursday that he desired to have authority to issue any one or more of three classes of Government paper that he believed would be most effective when the time arrived. As far as the financial outlook may now be grasped, there is no criticism to be made of Mr. Glass's ideas; on the contrary it seems an entirely prudent thing to do to make ready for any sort of contingency that might arise in the Spring when Government financing becomes necessary on a great scale. Doubtless further details of the Treasury Department's tentative plan and banking approval or disapproval of them will become public today or tomorrow as a result of the conferences now being held here. Liberty bonds yesterday lost a little more ground, but seemed not to be influenced by preparations for the new loan.

SHORT TERM NOTES

SURETY CO. NOT CONCERNED

Harold Norris Acted as an Individual in New Haven Suit.

William J. Griffin, First Vice President of the National Surety Company, announced yesterday that the company had no interest or any sympathy with the action brought in the Federal District Court for the appointment of a receiver to prosecute restitution suits against former Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company. It was feared that the mention of the name of Harold Norris, Secretary of a protective committee which instituted the suit, as an official of the surety company, would indicate that the company was somehow involved in the action.

Mr. Griffin declared that Mr. Norris was merely an employe of the surety company, with authority to execute bonds in its behalf within certain limits. He asked that it be made clear that the surety company has no interest in the action begun on behalf of some of the minority stockholders of the New Haven Company, "which Mr. Norris is a party to."

Silver Prices.

Some concern is felt by mining men over the possible curtailment of the silver output, now that there is talk of cutting down copper mine operations. Mines, such as the Anaconda and some of the other big ones, produce a considerable quantity of silver out of their copper ore, and if the amount of ore to be brought to the surface is to be reduced, the output of silver necessarily will be reduced, too. Some of the excessively alarmed are now talking about a "necessary" price of $2.50 an ounce for the white metal.

The Mexican Influence.

The idea is gaining wide currency in financial circles that something very good is soon to come out of Mexico, and in Wall Street it is becoming conventional to have a few shares of stock of some company more or less concerned with the southern republic. Thus, Mexican Petroleum is widening its circle of friends, but more particularly there is quiet and probably only light buying of stocks, such as Southern Pacific, American Smelting and Refining, and others, which, in days gone by, were regarded as "barometers" of the Mexican situation.

General Motors.

If one cares to believe all he hears, and all he heard yesterday, to particularize, he was convinced early in the day that members of a certain wealthy family engaged in the manufacture of gun powder and other high explosives were about to take over absolute control of General Motors. Of course, this family was reputed to be heavily interested in Motors a long time ago, and if it was becoming more heavily interested now, it must be looking for about every last share of stock there is, all of which might be regarded as a reasonably strong bull argument. The stock rose more than 2 points. Then it reacted, whereupon the believer-in-all-he-heard would be pardoned for believing that the powder interests had sold out.

Copper Still Declining.

Boston, the American capital of the copper industry, reported yesterday that small lots of the metal were being marketed at less than 18 cents a pound, and private cables from London said that casting copper there was being quoted at from £73 to £74 a ton, which is equal to about 15¼ to 15⅝ cents a pound here. Here there was some difference of opinion, some of the so-called "second hands" insisted copper could be bought for less than 18 cents, while the larger agencies insisted that it could not.

Woolworth Federal Tax Payment.

The F. W. Woolworth Company follows a procedure different from most other corporations in providing for its Federal taxes. It pays the taxes of the preceding year out of the earnings of the year in which payment falls due. The impost for 1917 was met out of 1918 income, as the annual statement showed yesterday. Amounting to $1,232,209, the taxes were equal to nearly 2½ per cent. on the outstanding common stock. The actual balance for the junior stock issue, then, could have been calculated as something more than $12 per share in 1918, instead of $9.96 which the statement showed after allowing for the tax payment.

Philip Morris Shares Active.

The Curb took kindly to the plan of the Tobacco Products Corporation to put the American business of Philip Morris & Co. into a new concern whose stock is to be offered to Tobacco Products' share-owners. On a "when issued" basis the Morris shares started off at $9 each, later going back to $8, but closing at $8.50. This market appraisal of shares not yet in existence could not be anything else except gratifying to Tobacco Products stockholders, who are to acquire the Morris shares at $4 each. At the top price the owners-to-be saw what amounted to an extra dividend of $5 per share on Tobacco Products stock, provided they were inclined to sell and were able to sell at the maximum figure. The turnover of 10,000 shares indicated that considerable selling was put through in order to seize the market advantage, delivery to be made when the new stock is issued.

Renewing Canceled Orders.

The precipitate cancellation of contracts in the steel trade which occurred after the armistice was signed has been followed by something of a reverse movement. A number of orders have been renewed after beng abrogated, with the result that threatened severe unemployment at some works has been checked and the industry eased during the readjustment period.

Tin Plate and Wire Makers Active.

The tin plate manufacturers report operations on a high level at the mills, and makers of wire products are meeting with a fairly good demand for their wares. Wire orders in January were estimated at a total of 10 per cent. greater than the month before and February has displayed a further increase. From Chicago comes word that the Illinois Steel Company turned out 500,000 tons of ingots in January, the maximum month in the company's history. Comment from various centres of the steel industry indicates that while buying and production are "spotty," there are indications of improvement in more than one line.

Security Holders to Meet.

Wall Street heard yesterday that a meeting has been called by the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities to discuss further the different plans that have been submitted for the return of the carriers to modified private ownership. It is understood that the meeting will be held in New York in the near future, and it was not considered improbable yesterday that it might be in the offices of S. Davies Warfield, President of the association. The information of this meeting, coupled with the recent news that there would soon be another meeting of the Standing Committee of the Association of Railway Executives, is taken to indicate that none of the interests which have been fighting for a return of the roads to private ownership and operation intend to let the matter lie dormant when they are no longer testifying before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Another Railroad Plan.

Still another plan for the return of the railroads to private ownership and operation has come to light. W. J. Wollman & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, in their bi-monthly review of finance, commerce, and economy, present several proposals for the readjustment of the railroad situation. Chief among them is the suggestion that the interest charges of all roads that have been meeting the interest on their bonds for the past five years have their interest charges guaranteed for a similar length of time after the roads are released from Government control. In the case of other roads it is suggested that special arrangements should be made. It is also proposed that each road should handle its own labor situation, with employes responsible to officials of individual lines instead of to a "mysterious entity known as the 'Government.'"

The Mercantile Marine Deal.

The financial district had more than the usual quota of Mercantile Marine rumors to contend with yesterday. The first was that the deal which has been pending for months was virtually off. This was soon crowded out by another that the negotiations were continuing, and this had hardly become widely circulated when it was reported from Washington that Edward N. Hurley, head of the United States Shipping Board, "hoped" that the purchase of the Marine fleet of 80 vessels by the board would be made within two weeks. P. A. S. Franklin, President of the company, was quoted as saying that there had been no change. Another disturbing bit of gossip had it that the British interests, which were about to purchase the ships when the Shipping Board stepped in, might participate in the deal.

Another Copper Dividend Cut.

The Shattuck-Arizona Copper Company is the latest to announce a dividend cut. The quarterly dividend declared yesterday was 25 cents a share, compared with 50 cents three months ago. It was learned that the Directors decided to retrench because of the curtailment in production and the uncertainty in the industry.

Rates Without Tonnage.

While the shipping world has generally approved the final schedule of the ocean freight rates announced by the Shipping Board, there are still shippers who criticise the board for establishing rates without providing tonnage. They report that while the new rates apply only to ships operated by the Shipping Board private owners are at liberty to fix their own rates and that when it is impossible to secure space in Shipping Board bottoms private owners have the American exporter at their mercy as to rates. On the other hand some private shipowners complain that competition with the Government will be ruinous.

GLASS OUTLINES NEW LOAN CAMPAIGN

Secretary Says He Will Make Wide Appeal to American Patriotism.

TALK TO ADVERTISING MEN

Head of the Treasury Denounces the "No Beer No Bonds" Slogan Propaganda.

Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, had a busy day in New York yesterday. He admitted it, when, at 6 o'clock last evening, at the Murray Hill Hotel, he said: "My New York friends have certainly kept me on the move today."

Mr. Glass arrived at the Federal Reserve Bank at 10:30 o'clock, was escorted through its different departments by Benjamin Strong, Governor of the bank, and then he conferred for about an hour with Mr. Strong and other officials.

Secretary Glass was due at the Advertising Club, 47 East Twenty-fifth Street, for luncheon at 12 o'clock. He was a little late and, because of that lateness, he was never able to keep his exact time schedule for the rest of the day. G. P. Sharpe, President of the club, presided at the luncheon and others at the head table were: Frank R. Wilson of Washington, National Publicity Director for Liberty Loans; Guy Emerson, Director of loan drives here, and B. F. Pope and J. E. Allen of the New York Liberty Loan Committee.

In introducing the Secretary, Mr. Sharpe said that, in previous Liberty Loan drives, the New York advertising men had given to the work the best that was in them and that they were ready, willing, and anxious to do it again.

In his address to the club, Secretary Glass said:

"Some one asked me the other day my opinion of the value of advertising a Liberty Loan campaign. It would be very difficult for me to find words to express my opinion on this subject. Of course I believe in advertising, and there is every reason why I should do so. I am the publisher of two newspapers, I am the Secretary of the Treasury and I have to have something to live on. Why shouldn't I believe in advertising? The very first thing I did when this job was offered to me was to write to my business manager to find out how much money he could give me for living expenses.

"I want to express my most unqualified appreciation of what this organization of yours did in the four previous Liberty Loan campaigns. Your drives were conducted with a patriotism and enthusiasm never, I believe, equaled before, and it was done with great artfulness and distinction. You accomplished with signal success your former tasks, but in this campaign you will be confronted with new problems.

"There is a reactionary spirit abroad in the land. There is a different state of mind among our people. They say that the war is over and give some indication that they are not so keenly interested in such matters as Liberty Loans.

Relies on Patriotism.

"I have been warned that the task of the Secretary of the Treasury in the next Liberty Loan will be a stupendous one, but I do not purpose becoming discouraged. I have an abiding faith in the patriotism of the American people, and I believe it can be appealed to successfully as long as there is a national need. For that reason, I am going out, in confidence, to talk to the plain people and some who are not so plain, and appeal to them to support this loan. I shall rely on this club as one of the great factors in putting the fifth, and, as I believe, the last Liberty Loan, over the top.

"The name, 'Victory Loan,' is a good one in this instance, because it emphasizes the fact that our entry into the war speeded the victory. This loan also might be called a Thanksgiving loan, for the people of this nation have much to be thankful for. We should be thankful that Congress is now engaged in writing off the books the authorization to spend $15,000,000,000, which will not be needed now that the war is over. We should be thankful also that only 60,000 brave American soldiers found their last resting place in France, and that the others are now returning to their homes and their loved ones.

"We should be thankful, my friends, that it was the commitments at Washington that stilled the guns all the sooner; that it was the commitments at Washington that enabled our troops to break the Hindenburg line; that it was the commitments at Washington, carrying millions of dollars in appropriations, that have made it possible for thousands of American mothers to change tears into smiles in welcoming some sturdy sons that otherwise might have fallen had the struggle continued.

"I shall not approach this next loan in the cold spirit of business. I shall appeal to the American people in the name and spirit that has always inspired them to highest patriotism, that has always enabled them to carry on. I wish I could say something that would be an inspiration to you today, but I don't think it is necessary. I am going to rely on you rather than that you should rely on me. All of you will have ready access to the Treasury Department and the sympathetic co-operation not only of the Secretary of the Treasury, but of everybody in the department."

Assails "No Beer, No Bonds" Slogan.

After the luncheon the Secretary's attention was called to the "No Beer, No Bonds" propaganda that has been launched by labor organizations in Newark and in some other cities, and asked if he had any comment to make. He replied:

"It is inconceivable to me that, no matter what the differences of opinion may be regarding prohibition, any particular class of the people of this great nation could fall so low in the social scale as to be willing to subordinate love of country to appetite for drink, to the extent of even thinking of, much less refusing, to aid the forthcoming Liberty Loan.

"I do not want to be unreasonable or use harsh words, but I do not believe that a man who would do such a thing deserves the right of suffrage or to share in the inestimable blessings of our Republican form of Government. I think there will be a speedy reaction from any such sentiment as that slogan suggests. I think the men who have started it will soon be heartily ashamed of themselves."

When Secretary Glass left the Advertising Club he drove to the headquarters of the Liberty Loan Committee in the Equitable Building and spent some time in looking over the various workshops and in conference with members of the staff. Then he went to the Hotel Biltmore to attend a reception given by the Liberty Loan Committee of the Second Federal Reserve District, at which he met members of district committees and members of committees representing many trades and occupations. Then he went to the Murray Hill Hotel to attend a meeting of the Racial Divisions of the Liberty Loan Foreign Language Bureau of the Second Federal Reserve District, at which Joseph Hartigan presided.

Secretary Glass made a short speech, repeating some of the things he said at the Advertising Club, to which response was made for the Racial Divisions by Ludwig Nissen. Mr. Nissen said that, while new arguments would have to be used in putting the Fifth Loan over the top and new conditions would have to be met, the workers in the Foreign Language Bureau would go at their task with all of the enthusiasm and all the patriotism which had inspired them in their work for the previous loans. They would do that, Mr. Nissen said, not only because it was their patriotic duty, but also because they desired to show that men and women who were citizens of this republic by choice were even more devoted in their citizenship than those who were citizens by inheritance and birth. To express that sentiment, Mr. Nissen offered a resolution pledging support, which was unanimously adopted.

Secretary Glass attended a private dinner at Sherry's last night given by Governor Benjamin Strong and the officers and Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank. Mr. Glass this morning will address the newly appointed County Chairmen and other leaders in the War Savings Stamp movement in New York and New Jersey at the Bankers' Club. He will attend a luncheon later at which editors and publishers of New York will meet him. Later in the day he will return to Washington.

DISCUSS GLASS'S PLANS.

Secretary's Explanation Held to Clarify Financial District's Views.

Bankers in the financial district were very much interested yesterday in what Secretary Glass had had to say to the House Ways and Means Committee on Thursday, especially his statement that in asking authorization for $10,000,000,000 in definitive bonds, $10,000,000,000 in one to five year Treasury notes, and an increase in the present authorization of Treasury certificates of indebtedness from $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000, he did not contemplate issuing all of these instruments, but wished to be empowered to use whichever of the three he might desire to avail himself of as occasion might require. Mr. Glass was quoted as saying:

"It cannot be too plainly stated that these three items are not cumulative. It is contemplated merely that authority should be given the Treasury to finance the existing and expected indebtedness, either by the issue of Treasury certificates or by the use of notes or by the issue of bonds. It may be desirable to adopt all of these methods in succession."

When the first plan was reported from Washington, it appeared that the Secretary wanted all three clases of obligations available at once, and bankers were somewhat apprehensive, because the size of the expenditures indicated by additional requests for $30,000,000,000. No one had expected anything like this total, and the reports received in New York were considered alarming. Now, the Secretary's explanation cleared the situation but at the same time it was contended in some quarters provisions should be made in the bill limiting the gross amount of all three classes of securities to $10,000,000,000.

Senator Smoot's proposal that the indebtedness of allied countries to the United States Treasury, which, in round numbers now totals $8,000,000,000, be refunded by the issuance of bonds guaranteed by the United States, but primarily the obligations of the foreign countries which have borrowed from us, met with considerable interest. It was pointed out that such bonds, bearing from 5 to 6 per cent., probably would be very popular in foreign countries, notably in those which had profited greatly by the war and were now looking for just such forms of investment.

It was suggested, for example, that a large volume of such bonds probably could be marketed in Spain, and it was considered likely that France would be pleased to buy back a fair share of her own indebtedness if such an opportunity was offered. Reports from Paris say that French municipal issues bearing 5 per cent. or slightly more are extremely popular just now and are going very well.

COTTON MOVES UPWARD.

Census Report of January Consumption More Bullish Than Expected.

Cotton prices again moved forward yesterday, the old crop months advancing early in the day approximately 50 points, while new crop options rose on an average of 30 to 35 points. The advance was based mainly on short covering and on some buying by Liverpool and Wall Street houses.

At the top, which was reached shortly after the turn of the day, some profit-taking sales by recent bulls appeared and soon the market had lost virtually all the early gains. However, in the last hour the market recovered and at the close stood about 10 to 15 points up on the day for the active speculative months.

The advance in the forenoon took the market up to the best levels reached this week. Since the low points were scored on Monday, which was the day the market turned, the recovery up to yesterday represented approximately 200 points for the near months and about 150 points for the active months of the new crop. This is a rather substantial recovery, and as it has been accomplished largely through short covering purchases, it is quite probable that the technical position of the market, which was unusually strong on Monday, has been considerably weakened. However, the ring still looks for an advance and there is very little bearish talk heard just now.

The Census Bureau report of consumption in January was much more bullish than expected. It showed consumption of 558,721 bales, as against 523,900 in January a year ago, and against a general expectation of not much more than 520,000 bales. For the six months, the consumption is placed at 2,952,332 bales, against 3,307,695 bales consumed in the corresponding months of 1918. From this, it is argued that consumption for the rest of the year will be increased in order to make up the normal quantity. The trade looks for a falling off in the February consumption, but will be surprised if March does not ultimately show a good-sized improvement.

Trade and labor reports yesterday were somewhat better. No new unfavorable features appeared and in cotton circles steady improvement is looked for.

British Explain Cable Delays.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Inquiries made here as to the delays of commercial cables between the United States and Sweden show that they have been exaggerated, and that such as occur are due to temporary cable conditions. The British authorities absolutely deny that American cablegrams to Scandinavia are subject to an average delay of ten days, whether from censorship or any other cause. Such general delay as does occur is due to the congestion of traffic.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Securities values were firm in a moderately active market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final quotations, while below the top levels attained in the morning session, represented substantial gains in the general list. Trading was restricted after midday and the active issues reacted under a considerable volume of selling pressure, but the closing tone was firm. The buying was most pronounced in the leading oil stocks and tobacco shares.

UNDERWOOD EARNINGS UP.

Typewriter Company Reports $4,020,437 Net for the Year.

The report of the Underwood Typewriter Company, Inc., for the year ended with last December, which was issued yesterday, shows a surplus after expenses and war taxes amounting to $2,130,846, which was equal to approximately 23 3-5 per cent. earned on the $9,000,000 outstanding common stock after the deduction of preferred dividends. This compared with about 22⅝ per cent. earned on the $8,600,000 outstanding common stock in 1917.

Net earnings for the year just passed were shown in the report to have been $4,020,437, which compares with $3,162,226 in the preceding year, while other net income increased from $68,893 in 1917 to $111,231 in 1918. The balance sheet of the company as of Dec. 31, 1918, showed quick assets of $13,637,808, which compares with $10,712,342 in the preceding year, and current liabilities were shown as $4,164,379, as compared with $2,821,641 in the preceding year.

John T. Underwood, President of the company, in his report to stockholders, said: "Not only are the conditions at the factory very satisfactory, but with the removal of restrictions surrounding the export trade by the War Trade Board, for the first time in a number of years the company has been enabled to make its shipments in response to urgent demands from every part of the world. And now that the war is happily over demands from foreign countries, added to the continuing pressure of large requirements throughout the United States, strongly indicate the prospect of a sound and profitable business in the year to come."

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

The trade reviews of the last week say that while there is a more cheerful tone apparent, buyers are inclined to limit themselves to immediate needs and put off their substantial orders until there is a more general indication of a deflation of prices.

Dun's Review says:

"More than any other single factor, and with increasing force, the price question dominates the economic situation. Response has come quickly in the isolated cases where recent readjustments have largely met buyers' anticipations, but price deflation has not yet gone far enough to induce general and vigorous operations, and the hoped-for trade revival still waits. Purchasing only for immediate and well-defined necessities, continuing the rule for many weeks in most leading branches, has brought a sharp industrial reversal, and strikes have been but a contributing cause of the steadily diminishing activities and lessening employment of labor. While manufacturing is not on a uniform basis, plants in the West being relatively busier than those in the East, and some lines doing better than others, hesitation remains a conspicuous feature in all directions and not a little machinery is standing idle solely through lack of orders."

Bradstreet's says:

"Trade advices are a shade more cheerful, the movement of peace-time industries outside of textile lines is a trifle faster, and collections are a bit better. These statements, of course, must be taken with knowledge of the fact that buying, especially of wearing apparel at wholesale, is conservative and not equal to that of a year ago; that rain or snow the country over has checked country trade and marketing of products, especially of corn and hogs at the West; that lower cotton prices discourage Southern buying and promote talk of crop area reduction; that a great many textile mill hands are striking or otherwise idle, pending the settlement of the shorter week issue, and that the number of unemployed is larger, owing mainly to the continued releases of men from the army."

TO BUILD A LOW-PRICED CAR.

Chandler Interests Organize the Cleveland Automobile Company.

F. C. Chandler, Samuel Regar, and Hornblower & Weeks announced yesterday the organization of a new automobile concern to be known as the Cleveland Automobile Company, to manufacture and sell a smaller and lower priced machine than the Chandler, which was originally financed by the same combination. The new concern will have an authorized capital of $1,400,000 preferred stock and 14,000 shares of common stock of no par value. It will be managed by Mr. Chandler and Mr. Regar, who at present manage the Chandler Motor Car Company.

The stockholders of the Chandler Motor Car Company who are of record on Feb. 27 will have the privilege of subscribing to the stock of the new company on the following basis: Each holder of 100 shares of Chandler stock can buy, at $100 a share, twenty shares of the preferred stock of the new company, receiving as a bonus four shares of the new common stock.

It is expected that volume production of the new automobile, which it is understood has been perfected at the expense of Mr. Chandler, Mr. Regar, and Hornblower & Weeks, will be possible in the early Summer. The new company will have a separate plant, and except for executive Directors, will be a separate organization.

WOOLWORTH EARNINGS CUT.

Company's Annual Report Shows a Surplus of $4,981,507.

The report of the F. W. Woolworth Company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1918, which was issued yesterday, showed a surplus after war taxes paid in 1918 and preferred dividends amounting to $4,981,507. This was equivalent to $9.96 a share earned on the $50,000,000 common stock, which compared with $16.72 earned on the same stock in the preceding year. In 1917 no deductions were made for the payment of war taxes, the item being carried over into 1918 for settlement. Because of this no deduction was made in 1918 for the payment of war taxes accruing in that year.

The report also showed that the company's current assets on Dec. 31 last amounted to $20,221,471, while current liabilities were $2,202,907, which left a working capital of $18,018,564, against $18,066,033 for the same purpose at the end of 1917. The current assets are shown in the report after charging off almost $2,000,000 as depreciation of the $19,800,797 inventories to lower them to market values. The balance sheet also showed that the company had cash on hand as of that date amounting to $1,259,721, compared with $445,552 at the end of 1917. The percentage of net earnings on sales was shown in the report to have been 5.46 in the year just passed, compared with 9.43 in 1917.

SENATORS HEAR BRESHKOVSKAYA

SEES RUSSIA IN UTTER RUIN

Says 50,000 Allied Troops Would Have Saved Country and Prevented Bolshevism.

MOSCOW LOOTED BY REDS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The investigation of Bolshevism, here and abroad, by the Senate Committee on Judiciary continued today, the principal witnesses being Mme. Breshkovskaya, who is known throughout Russia as the "Grandmother of the Revolution," and Roger Smith of the Petrograd staff of the National City Bank of New York.

Mme. Breshkovskaya was the first witness and remained on the stand until advised by her physician to forego telling the remainder of her story until a future day. Despite the fact that she is over 75 years old she insisted on standing up to talk and on speaking in English. It was, however, very difficult at times to understand her.

The venerable revolutionist admitted in answer to questions that under the Czar conditions in Russia were far better than is the case now under Lenine and Trotzky, both of whom, she swore, are under the domination of Germany. As things are going now, she said, unless the Russian people find themselves and shake off the monster that now shackles them, the country will plunge down to utter ruin and will end with Germany in control of European Russia and Japan dominating Siberia.

"Madame," Senator Sterling asked, "can you give us any fair estimate as to the number of people who have been killed by the Bolsheviki?"

"Well," replied Mme. Breshkovskaya, "in the little more than one year of Bolshevist rule there have been twice as many Russians, men, women, and children, killed as there were soldiers killed at the front during the almost three years that Russia was actively in the war. For instance there were 2,000 officers in one prison who were killed at one time. Every man, woman or child who opposes Bolshevism in any way risks his or her life."

"Do you know of any propagandists at work in this country who are operating under the direction of the Bolshevist authorities in Russia?" asked Senator Wolcott.

"I have been told that there are 3,000,000 people in this country, mostly of Russian origin, who are Bolshevist sympathizers. I do not know whether it is true or not," was the reply.

"What of conditions in Russia under the Bolsheviki?" Senator Overman questioned.

Country Depleted for Germany.

"Everything that made life worth while has gone," said the witness. "Every day trainloads of supplies and valuable things leave for Germany from Moscow. In Russia there is no industry, the schools are closed and if they were open there would be no books, not even any ink for the pupils. All over Russia there are no schools now. There is no food to amount to anything, no clothes, nothing at all. Transportation is paralyzed. We have no tools or implements of any kind, not even scissors or knives.

"Two years ago, when the Czar was overthrown, we were happy. We expected and had reason to expect excellent laws, we expected peace and political and social freedom. None of these things has been realized. We thought we were going to get a National Assembly and a Constitution, and we got neither. For six months we were free, and then came those German-dominated Bolsheviki.

"The Germans had been preparing for years—we know it now—for this very thing. Their spies have been everywhere in Russia for a long, long time. It was out of German spying and intrigue that Lenine and Trotzky came. Trotzky and Lenine and the group supporting them received millions from Germany for propaganda, and they carried it to a gruesome success. In the Autumn of 1917 we saw the clouds gathering and we hoped and prayed that our allies would come. Months and months ago I wrote along this line to Mr. Francis, the American Ambassador.

"So it was that Russia fell into the hands of these two ambitious creatures, Lenine and Trotzky. There are some who think that after the Bolsheviki will come another Czar, and then the freedom that we thought we had will be but a legend. Today Russia is in ruins. If you had given us 50,000 good soldiers there would have been no Bolshevism. The peasants are against the Bolsheviki, but they have no arms.

"The Bolsheviki rule with an army of Letts, Chinese, Magyars and Germans. Under them, when I was there, Moscow was ruled by a German, the late German Ambassador von Mirbach, and from Moscow he directed the Bolsheviki. We had and have no organization to fight the Bolsheviki. There was only the Czechoslovaks, and the Germans helped the Bolsheviki fight them.

"After the treaty of Brest-Litovsk, the Germans poured into West Russia and with them came every sort of disorder. Then began the civil war, and today, instead of two or three fronts, as was the case when Russia was fighting with the Allies, Russia is a land of more than 100 fronts. There is robbery everywhere, the brigands control, and everybody has been robbed. All Russia is physically and morally depressed and Bolshevism is spreading around us. All the best men in Russia, the professors, the littérateurs, all the rest, they have gone. We don't want another Czar, yet if Bolshevism rules for many years more Russia will be dead."

Knows Leaders as Tools of Germany.

"Do you really believe that Trotzky and Lenine are the tools of Germany?" Senator Sterling asked.

"I don't believe it, I know it," the old woman answered, as she banged her hand on the table.

"Isn't it a fact that the Russian people would prefer a Czar to the Bolsheviki?" Senator Nelson asked.

"Certainly they would prefer a Czar to Lenine and Trotzky, but we don't want a Czar again."

"What proportion of the peasants are against the Bolsheviki?"

"Practically all of them. In some places they are fighting them with sticks now."

Mme. Breshkovskaya said that she thought the British and French made a mistake at Omsk when they nominated a dictator, as she termed Admiral Kolchak, to administer the Government of that region. She thought a council elected by the people should have been permitted to rule.

"Do you think that we should withdraw our troops, and by we I mean the Allies?" Senator Sterling said.

"If they will fight with us against the Bolsheviki, no. The Czechoslovaks are standing all alone and they are far too few in number. There are only a few thousands of French, British, Americans and Italians with them."

"Do you think we should treat or deal in any way with the Bolsheviki?"

"Certainly not. They have destroyed all the honest and intellectual life of Russia. All honest people are their enemies."

"Are there any Soviets in Russian Siberia?"

"I do not know of a single one."

"How about the crops in Russia?"

"Everywhere they are diminishing."

Mme. Breshkovskaya complained at this point that she was very tired, and Senator Overman said she would be recalled early next week to complete her narrative.

Mr. Smith, who went to Petrograd in June, 1917, for the National City Bank, was examined next. During the period he was in Russia—which was up to Sept. 2, last—he was successively in Petrograd, Vologda, and Moscow. He was in Petrograd in November, 1917, when the Bolsheviki, under Lenine and Trotzky, accomplished the final overthrow of the Kerensky Government.

"I was in Petrograd during the entire period of the November, 1917, revolution and witnessed the marching of the prisoners to the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul the day following the Bolshevist coup. They won out with the slogan 'Peace with Germany, land and bread.'"

Met an East Side Agitator.

"Did you meet any of our east side agitators, I mean these apostates other witnesses have referred to, over there?" Senator Nelson asked.

"I only came in contact with one of them, a fellow who called himself Joe Shatoff."

"Who was he?"

"He was the commissary in charge of the operation of the Nicolaireff Railway. He said he formerly lived on the east side in New York. He was the Director of the railroad."

"Is that an important line?"

"The most important in Russia. It is the main trunk between Moscow and Petrograd. We had to show him our passports as we were leaving Petrograd for Vologda. We had gone some distance when the train was stopped and Commissary Shatoff came into our compartment and told us we would be held up for some time as a lot of people on board had passports that were defective. He was a good-natured sort of chap. I remember what he said at the time.

"'Well, boys,' he said, 'I guess you will have to stay on the island (Coney) tonight. I don't think there will be any trains for Brooklyn before morning.'

"However, Joe was all right and he allowed us to proceed after a short delay. He told us he was from the east side. He was the only one I met personally. Aboard the ship I went to Russia on in 1917, after the Czar's overthrow, there were about 300 men from New York on board. Some were Russians and some were Jews. They were all in the steerage."

"What happened to your bank?"

"We moved it to Vologda."

"What was the total of your deposits?"

"About 200,000,000 rubles."

"Is the bank still open?"

"No, it is closed."

"Where are your assets?"

"They are in Russia. I cannot state in open session where they are. You, of course, understand why."

From Vologda the bank staff transferred, last Summer, to Moscow. In Vologda conditions, everything considered, were comparatively quiet. In Moscow, however, said Mr. Smith, there was a continual sputtering of machine-gun and rifle fire. Shoes, he said, were selling there when he left at about $200 a pair. He told of the systematic looting of the city by accredited bands of looters who under the rules, were permitted to retain three-fourths of all they stole. A member of one raiding party was a man Mr. Smith had known in Petrograd. This man was afterwards killed in a row between two bands which raided the same house simultaneously.

"When a peasant gets a little more property than his next door neighbor he ceases to be a peasant and becomes a bourgeois," said Mr. Smith.

"Have you any idea of the amount of money, stocks, or securities that were taken from banks by the Bolsheviki?"

"No, I do not know the total amount. I was informed that 72,000,000,000 rubles in gold, silver, stocks, bonds, and other securities were taken from the State Bank in Petrograd and afterwards removed to Nijni-Novgorod."

Mr. Smith said he knew of instances where manufacturers and other business men were working for the Bolsheviki. The Bolsheviki, he said, had to have the assistance of these men and with them it was a case of help or else starve.

William W. Welsh, also of the staff of the National City Bank, will be the first witness tomorrow morning.

NEW EXCHANGE RULES.

Funds May Now Be Transferred to Finland, Bohemia, and Moravia.

The local Federal Reserve Bank announced yesterday that the Division of Foreign Exchange of the Federal Reserve Board had issued additional regulations whereby dealers defined under the executive order of the President dated Jan. 24, 1918, are permitted to make transfers of funds to persons not enemies or allies of enemies resident in all parts of Finland, and in the provinces of Bohemia and Moravia, as existing on Aug. 1, 1914, which provinces are at present under control of the Czechoslovak National Council. Similar regulations have been promulgated by the division permitting the transfer of funds to persons of the same description residing in Belgium, Alsace-Lorraine, Palestine, Syria, Mesopotamia, Rumania, Serbia, and the Austrian territory now under Italian control.

Fred I. Kent, Director of the Division of Foreign Exchange of the Federal Reserve Board, made this statement yesterday:

"Until otherwise instructed the exportation or importation of Russian rubles or the transfer of funds for their purchase by persons and dealers in the United States as described under the executive order of the President of Jan. 26, 1918, is prohibited."

An order some time ago prohibited the exportation and importation of the notes, but there had been no ban placed on their purchase in foreign countries if they were not brought into this country.

SAYS MASS OF JEWS OPPOSE BOLSHEVIKI

EAST SIDE NOT A HOTBED

Statement Calls Testimony to the Contrary Before Senate Committee "Ridiculous."

Louis Marshall, President of the American Jewish Committee, has given out a statement taking issue with the testimony of Dr. George S. Simons last Thursday before the Sub-Committee on Judiciary of the Senate, which is investigating Bolshevism. Dr. Simons testified regarding the activity of Jews in the Bolshevist movement in Russia, and said that the present chaotic conditions there are due in large part to the activities of Yiddish agitators from the east side of New York City, who went to Russia immediately following the overthrow of the Czar. Mr. Marshall's statement reads:

"I do not know Dr. Simons, who has made a sensational statement affecting the Jews before the Overman Committee, but the fact that he seems to love the Russia of 1907, the period when Czarism was at its height, would indicate that his association with the Jews has been but limited. He is entirely correct in one statement, that the so-called Bolshevist Jews of Russia are apostates. They are more than that. Like all Bolsheviki, they bitterly hate all religion, and all that is comprehended in the abhorred word bourgeoisie.

"The statements made by Dr. Simons, in other respects, are inaccurate, unreliable and unfair. The Jews of Russia, as a mass, are the opponents of Bolshevism, both because they belong to the bourgeoisie and because they cherish their religion. The Bundists are an organization of Jewish workingmen whom the Bolsheviki are seeking to exterminate.

Jews in Other Parties.

"The Jews are also largely represented in the Social Democratic and the Constitutional Democratic parties, who are the sworn foes of Bolshevism. When Prince Lvoff, who became the Premier of Russia at the outbreak of the revolution in March, 1917, was here recently he stated to me that in his opinion 95 per cent. of the Jews of Russia are anti-Bolshevist, that there are some men, however, who were born Jews, like Trotzky, who had become prominent members of the Bolsheviki Party and whose sins were seized upon by the anti-Semites for their own illegitimate purposes.

"He told me that shortly before he came to this country he had been for a time imprisoned by the Bolsheviki, and while incarcerated he was visited by one Poliakoff, who held an office of some importance under the Bolsheviki. The Prince had known him for some time, and expressed his surprise that he should have affiliated himself with that party, 'for,' he said, 'you know that, being a Jew, whatever you do will, as usual, be charged against the Jews as a whole.' To this Poliakoff replied: 'Although I was born a Jew I have no interest whatever in the Jews or in any other religious body. I am an internationalist, and I am not in any way concerned with what becomes of the Jews.'

"At about the same time there had been an outbreak, which resulted in the loss of many Jewish lives, and a committee called on Trotzky to urge upon him the necessity of taking steps for the protecting of their lives. He very coolly answered that he was not interested in the Jews or in what might happen to them, and that he did not regard himself as a Jew in any sense.

Calls Deductions Illogical.

"The fact that Dr. Simons may be able to prepare a list of Jews who are Bolsheviki means nothing. I could go to Ossining tomorrow and prepare from the records there a list of criminals who may happen to be of English, French, Italian, or Slavonik parentage or who may belong to the Episcopalian, Methodist, Baptist, or Catholic churches and seek to deduce from such lists conclusions derogatory of the nationality or of the church to which they belong with as much reason as Dr. Simons has to deduce from his list the conclusion which he is apparently seeking to inculcate. In fact, Lenine, who heads the list, is not a Jew, and Martoff, who appears upon it, is strongly opposed to Bolsheyism.

"He says that Jews from the east side went to Russia immediately after the revolution and are now active Bolsheviki. It is well known that when the news of the revolution came, there were quite a number of Russians, both Jews and non-Jews, who returned to their native land. Some of them placed themselves at the disposal of Milukov and Kerensky. Others doubtless joined the Bolsheviki. Their return was encouraged by the Russian Government, which supplied them with the means of transportation. The suggestion that any financial or other assistance came from the east side is a ridiculous fabrication.

"There is an intimation that there are Jewish Bolshevists in this country. The term 'Bolshevist,' as now used, means anything or everything to which the speaker may for the moment be opposed. I deny that there is on the east side any considerable number of those who are opposed to government or who adhere to or sympathize with the anarchistic conceptions of Lenine and Trotzky. In fact, several of the leading Socialists who knew Trotzky when he was in this country looked upon him as a lunatic, and are unable to conceive how it was possible for a man of his character and mental qualities to attain the station that he now occupies. They deride him today, as they did when he was a Bronx penny-a-liner.

Jews Love Law and Order.

"Everything that real Bolshevism stands for is to the Jew detestable. His traditions wed him to law and order, make of him a legalist. The Bolshevists are the enemies of law and order. The Jew makes the very centre of his life and of his existence the home and the family. The Bolshevists decry marriage and contemn morality. The Jew is justly noted for being thrifty and economical, and with recognizing as necessary the institution of property. The Bolshevist is seeking the destruction of the very concept of property. The great mass of the Jews are faithful to their ancient religion, and are ever ready to help their brethren in distress. The club of the Bolshevist knows no brother and he despises religion.

"The innuendo is also thrown out that the Jews are not patriotic. Let their record during this war speak for them. They constitute but 3 per cent. of the population of this country, yet more than 5 per cent. of their number entered our army and navy, and a larger proportion of the number as volunteers. I expect shortly to supply an authentic list of all the men who served under the colors, so as to be able to present to our maligners irrefragable proof that the Jews have furnished in proportion to their numbers a larger quota to our military and naval forces than any other part of our population.

"Let me also refer to the casualty lists to establish the fact that the Jews of this country not only served, but that they were brave and heroic, and were prepared to make the supreme sacrifice for America because they love it. Let me also refer to the list of citations for exceptional heroism, to the men who fought in the Argonne Forest, to those who constituted a part of the Lost Battalion, and who participated in every movement of our troops. You will find among them east side Jews in large numbers.

"It is difficult to understand the motive behind this attempt to arouse unworthy passions. Attack Bolshevism as much as you please, and the Jews of America are with you. But what justification is there for charging the Jews with Bolshevism, when in reality there is a smaller percentage of them who can truthfully be so denominated than there is in any other section of the American people? I might illustrate this point by referring to the recently published list of I. W. W.'s who are awaiting deportation, the vast majority of whom are non-Jews."

Good Season for Silverware.

Several of the local silverware manufacturers have already received such a large volume of orders that some difficulty is being had in filling them. Some of the firms have warned the retail jewelers that if they expect to receive their goods in time for the Easter season, they should place their orders early. Although it was anticipated that this year would show a decided improvement, it was not expected that business would start in with such a rush.

Suit Cases Going Well.

In almost every instance the sales this season by the manufacturers of traveling bags and suit cases are greatly in excess of those of the previous year. The demand for these goods in the West is very large. In the South some of the firms find business rather quiet. Through the East and in the city the sales have shown a considerable increase. Some of the local manufacturers selling the higher-priced lines have been receiving some very substantial orders for black leather bags from the retail jewelry stores.

Toilet Sets in Demand.

Some marked changes have been made in the new lines of celluloid toilet articles which have greatly improved their appearance, and have also helped to increase sales. Comb and brush and manicure sets are now being offered in white ivory, decorated with hand-painted and gold incrustation effects. These articles retail for $75 a set. Despite the apparent high prices, these articles have met with an exceptionally good sale. In the more moderate priced lines the Western trade has shown a great deal of interest, and has been buying very liberally.

Behind on Filling Orders.

There is a big demand for children's colored rompers that retail from $2 to $2.50 a suit. In fact, one of the manufacturers has so many orders ahead for these goods that he is several months behind in making deliveries. The local trade is a little slow in placing orders, but the out-of-town buying is very heavy. In almost every instance the merchandise now being sold is for immediate delivery. From the 13th of last month to the 3d of this the shipments made by one firm were 80 per cent. greater than those of a year ago.

Men's Apparel Club Luncheon.

Plans were completed yesterday for the charter luncheon and meeting of the Men's Apparel Club of New York State, which will be held in the Green Room of the Hotel McAlpin at 12:30 today. The preliminary work is in charge of Victor Hiller of the Kaynee Company and Albert S. Salsbury of the Snellenburg Clothing Company of Philadelphia. Up to yesterday 125 reservations had been made for the luncheon. They were from salesmen covering this State and representing houses manufacturing all kinds of men's wearing apparel with the exception of shoes.

Bead Girdles for Fall.

An Indian wearing a long, feathered headdress is one of the adjuncts in a big bead house just now. This is to be a big bead year, and he is making girdles which will be worn next Fall and instructing the girls of the house and of others who come in to learn how the work is done. The girdles are an inch and a half wide, in brilliant colors and in Persian, Mexican, or Indian designs. They are long enough to go loosely around the waist and tie with ends falling. Some are finished with bead tassels and others are broader at the ends and rounded. Some have the beads on both sides, and others are faced with silk in harmonious colors. For Summer girdles there are long cords of beads set at intervals with bead balls.

Accessories Are Brilliant.

While manufacturers report quieter colors in women's gown materials, the accessories are brilliant. Nothing can be too gay. The most elaborate and brilliant of the wide cut velvet ribbons are made into vestees, many colors together or there may be one predominating tone, as a rich orange. Bright red is good in ornaments, and one wholesale house dealing in these has bought up everything in sight like necklaces with many red ornaments and strings of brilliant red glass beads. The red in these is made in the glass and is not merely dye. Dyeing gives a poor result, the color fading.

Knit Goods for Dolls.

A dolls' knit goods factory in this country has been one of the incidental results of the war. Many of the dolls from Germany came ready dressed and now many of the retail houses dress their own dolls and the factory supplies the underwear to big department houses, &c., all over the country. There are tiny undervests and union suits, baby bands, and stockings. With these come blankets, little Red Riding Hood capes and hoods in all colors; wash cloths, with colored scalloped edges; tiny Turkish towels and little roller towels, and there are clothes pin aprons with pockets for mother dolls to wear in hanging out clothes. A few of these dolls' clothes have been made as a side issue in knitting factories for a number of years, but it is only for the last three that an entire factory has been devoted to the work.

GO TO CAPTURE TRADE.

Many Representatives of American Firms Sail for South America.

The Lamport & Holt liner Vauban sailed yesterday for Brazil and the Argentine with 235 first, 155 second, and 160 third-class passengers. It was the first real sailing since the war and the majority of the cabin passengers were representatives of American firms going to try to capture some of the South American trade.

Thirty-five men who had been unable to obtain passage went to the pier in Brooklyn with their baggage in the hope some of the passengers might cancel their bookings, but there were no changes.

I. Henry Hirsch, a New York importer who sailed for Buenos Aires, said the British, French, and Scandinavian merchants were three months ahead of the Americans in South America. The trade boards at Washington had not kept in touch with those markets, he said.

Among the other passengers were Alfred H. Benjamin, an independent packer of Argentina; Commander Augusto Carlos de Souza e Silva of the Brazilian Navy, William B. Adamson, Captain A. B. Fontana, Lieutenant H. H. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Fowler, Lieutenant M. T. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lawrence, Captain J. Nogueira, the Rev. W. P. McLoughlin, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Pond, and C. D. Randall.

Weekly Review of Dry Goods Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods is running a little less than for the same period of 1918. Road sales for at once delivery are slightly ahead. Merchants are placing liberal orders for handkerchiefs, delivery to be made in the Fall. Retail business continues excellent. Collections are continuing good."

WOOL MARKET QUIET.

Little Has Been Offered Since Last Week's Auctions.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say:

"There has been a little business during the week in scoured wools, which were bought at last week's auctions, but otherwise the market has been quiet. Pullers have had little wool to offer, but are quoting firm, specially on fine wools. The situation in the goods market is reported irregular, but with somewhat better demand on the whole. The foreign markets are generally firm."

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The coffee and insurance district furnished several interesting realty sales yesterday that are typical of the buying movement inaugurated by commercial and financial firms south of Brooklyn Bridge since the close of the war.

Many firms who have heretofore kept their surplus locked in safe deposit vaults and banks because they did not know what was going to happen from day to day, while the war was on, have renewed confidence and are putting their money now as never before in real estate. In numerous cases firms have purchased for all cash the buildings they have occupied for years on leasehold.

The coffee district deal involved the five-story building 92 Front Street, which was sold by Pease & Elliman for the estate of Pauline K. Schrenkeisen to Fromm & Co., members of the Coffee Exchange. The property, which adjoins the corner of Gouverneur Lane, has a frontage of 25 feet, is 90 feet deep, and has been occupied for many years by Brewster & Co., who are one of the oldest firms in the coffee district. It was held at $50,000, and it is reported brought close to that figure. The sale was an all cash transaction, and is the second sale for all cash made by the same brokers in this section within the last ten days.

All property that is being sold is sold for occupancy, which means, if this continues, the tightening up of the renting market still more, or the more property is sold the less there will be for rent in the future. Five Tenants Combine and Buy Maiden Lane Building.

To protect themselves against a possible sale of the property to other interests and assure themselves permanent occupancy five tenants occupying space in the five-story business building at 87 Maiden Lane pooled their interests and purchased the property from George McK. Brown of Huntington, L. I. The property is in the heart of the insurance centre, where there has recently been unusual buying activity. Directly opposite is the plot of 14,000 square feet assembled by Sigsbee Graham, who has negotiations in progress for a resale. Within a few hundred feet of the building is the site acquired by the Federal Reserve Bank for its future home.

The tenants who acquired the property are, with one exception, jewelers, as follows: The Bonner Manufacturing Company, Shiman Bros. & Co., Somers & Braunstein, Silverman, Cohen & Wallstein, and the Consolidated Stamp Company. They plan to form a corporation to take title to the realty, which is understood to have cost them between $275,000 and $300,000. The property fronts 29 feet on Maiden Lane, 107 feet on Gold Street, and forms an "L" in the rear, extending westward about 54 feet.

The Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company and Horace S. Ely & Co. negotiated the transaction.

Sigsbee Graham Increases His Maiden Lane Holdings.

Another Maiden Lane deal involved the property at No. 97 which was sold to Sigsbee Graham by Abraham Goldsmith as trustee. The property consists of a four-story loft covering a lot 21 by 62 and valued at $60,000.

This purchase completes the rounding out for Mr. Graham of a plot of 14,000 square feet, valued at $600,000, and comprising seven buildings purchased from different owners in all cash deals. The plot has a frontage of 50 feet on Maiden Lane, 42 feet on Gold Street and 47 feet on Pearl Street. The Charles F. Noyes Company negotiated the transaction. Negotiations are pending for the sale of the entire plot.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—While pressure is still abnormally low east of the Mississippi River, the disturbance is gradually losing its intensity and there are three distinct centres tonight between lower Michigan and the East.

The western disturbance over southern Lower Michigan is decreasing, but a secondary disturbance off the New Jersey coast will probably move northeastward Saturday.

General rains and snows continue from the Missouri Valley eastward, mainly snow in the upper lake region, the Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valleys.

In the South Atlantic States the weather has cleared and it was fair in the West, except in the North Pacific States. It is considerably colder in the Central Valleys, while in the lake region and the Atlantic States temperatures remain high for the season. In the West there was little change.

Snow will fall Saturday in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, the upper lake and west lower lake regions, rain in the Middle Atlantic States, and rains and snows in New England, and scattered snows will continue Sunday in the South and on Monday in the southern portion of the Middle Atlantic districts.

It will be colder Saturday in the lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the South, and colder Sunday in the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and New England.

SAID BEEBE HAD NO PHONE

Twenty-Hour Trip of Special Delivery Parcel Told by Col. Harvey in Attack on Federal Control.

Dr. Silas P. Beebe of 417 Park Avenue, this city, confirmed yesterday an account in the current issue of The Weekly, Colonel George Harvey's publication, of an experience which a Philadelphia physician had early last month with the telephone, telegraph, and mail service in an effort to get from Dr. Beebe a serum that was urgently needed to save the life of a woman patient. The incident is held to show the inferior service the public is receiving since the Government took over the control of the telephone and telegraph companies.

According to the article it took thirty-one hours and twenty minutes to get a "rush" telegram from Philadelphia to Dr. Beebe's address in New York; twenty-four hours to establish telephone connection between Philadelphia and the New York physician who has been a telephone subscriber for ten years, and twenty-four hours for a special delivery package containing the serum and marked "urgent," to get from New York to the Philadelphia address, ninety miles away, with an hourly train service covering the distance in two hours.

"Altogether," says the article, "fifty-seven hours—two twenty-four hour days and nine hours over—were consumed by the Politicalmaster General's combined telegraph, telephone, and mail service forces in doing an errand between Philadelphia and New York which a messenger could have done in six hours, with time for a leisurely luncheon in New York before starting back.

Chance to Save Woman's Life.

"We are not calling attention to this speed record of the Politicalmaster General's co-ordinated telegraphic, telephonic and mail services because it is unusual. The interest in the case lies solely in the fact that it is an interlocking demonstration of Burlesonian efficiency in all of his three systems of service. To be sure it involved the sacrifice of a human life. But that is an irrelative detail."

The circumstances of the case, as related by the Weekly and confirmed by Dr. Beebe, the New York specialist, in a talk with a TIMES reporter, so far as the New York end is concerned, are as follows:

"A woman in Philadelphia was in imminent danger of death. There was a chance that her life might be saved by a serum in possession of Dr. Silas P. Beebe, 417 Park Avenue, New York. Her physician, at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning [Jan. 2], sent a 'rush' message to Dr. Beebe. At the latest the serum should have been delivered early the next morning. It did not come. Dr. Teller, the Philadelphia physician, then tried the Politicalmaster General's telephone service. The urgent nature of the case was explained at the Philadelphia telephone office with an earnest plea for speed.

"After a long interval the report came back from the New York telephone office that there was no such person as Dr. Beebe among the New York telephone subscribers. Dr. Silas P. Beebe, the only Dr. Beebe in the telephone book, has been a telephone subscriber for ten years. His number, plainly printed in the last telephone directory, is Plaza 9576. Dr. Teller insisted that Dr. Beebe did have a telephone. The telephone office insisted that he did not have one, and informed Dr. Teller that he, Teller, had the name wrong. This deadlock continued from Friday morning until along in the afternoon of Saturday, when at last the telephonic communication which should have taken fifteen or twenty minutes was established after an interval of over twenty-four hours.

"In the meantime things had been moving at breakneck speed in the Politicalmaster General's telegraphic service. The 'rush' telegram which Dr. Teller had sent at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning reached Dr. Beebe at 5:20 on Friday afternoon."

Beat Mails With Big Handicap.

The article goes on to say that as quickly as he could prepare the serum Dr. Beebe personally directed the parcel containing it, marked it "urgent," paid the full postage rates, put on a special delivery stamp, and with his own hands mailed it at the Grand Central Branch Post Office in this city. This was at 9 o'clock Friday night. Eighteen hours later, when telephone connection was at last established, Dr. Beebe was told that the parcel had not been delivered in Philadelphia.

Dr. Beebe prepared more serum and sent it by messenger to Philadelphia, who reached there two hours ahead of the special delivery mail package marked "urgent," which arrived about twenty hours after it was mailed in New York. But the messenger arrived too late, the woman having died an hour before he could get there with the serum.

Dr. Beebe said that the facts related above as regards the Philadelphia end of the affair are as given to him over the telephone by Dr. Teller when the connection was finally established, though he did not furnish the information upon which the article in the Weekly was based. He said that the telegram, which was sent from Philadelphia on Jan. 2 was delivered to him at 5:20 P. M. on Jan. 3. The telegram was sent through the Western Union Telegraph Company, he said.

Postmaster Patten said yesterday afternoon, when asked about the delay of the special delivery package, that he could not make any statement about it unless he saw the package showing the stamps and postmark, and that in any event his office had jurisdiction only in New York City.

It was said at the office of the telephone company that it would require some little time to make an investigation before any statement could be made explaining the failure of the company to give prompt telephone connection, as charged. This investigation, it was said, would be made today. At the executive offices of the Western Union Telegraph Company, late yesterday afternoon, it was said that there was no one at the office who was authorized to make a statement for publication, as the officials had all gone for the day.

CRUISING DIRIGIBLE BUILT BY BRITAIN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The Daily Mail publishes particulars of one of the latest types of British rigid airship, the building of which has been done secretly. These vessels known as of the R-33 class, are practcially equal in size to the most successful Zeppelin type, and preliminary tests have shown that they will equal, if not exceed, the Zeppelin performances.

The first of the type, built for the Admiralty by W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., near Selby, Yorkshire, was originally designed for ocean-going war service. H. H. Golightly, the works Manager, gives the following details: Length, 670 feet; diameter, 79 feet; capacity, 2,000,000 cubic feet; fuel for eight days of continuous running. A speed of at least seventy miles an hour is expected on trial.

The ship's weight in flying trim will be more than sixty tons, including a carrying capacity of between twenty-seven and thirty tons. She is considered by her builders capable of a non-stop journey across the Atlantic and back. For war purposes, she was to have carried four 580-pound bombs and eight 250-pound machine and other guns fore, aft and on top.

All along the internal corridor in the hull there runs a bridge girder, from which the petrol and water ballast tanks and so forth are supported. In the cabin space hammocks for the crew of twenty-two can be slung from this girder. The five engines total 1,250-horsepower. They are carried in cars suspended below the hull and directly coupled to the extremely large propellers.

There are four fins on the tail portion of the hull, each fin being about 90 feet long by 30 feet wide. At the rear end of the two horizontal fins are elevators, used to steer upward or downward, while attached to the two vertical fins are two rudders which steer the ship in the same way as a ship at sea.

Baker Pledges Senate Committee to Investigate Other Army Complaints.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Conditions at the Brest embarkation camp, the care of wounded soldiers on trains after their arrival in this country, and other army questions were discussed today at an executive session of the Senate Military Committee by Secretary Baker, General March, Chief of Staff; Surgeon General Ireland, and former Surgeon General Gorgas.

A recently prepared report on the Brest camp was promised by Secretary Baker. He said careful investigation would be made of complaints that detachments of wounded soldiers had been transported without adequate accommodations and nurses, and at times without a commanding officer.

MANY SLIGHTLY HURT BY SEWER BLOWUP

Forty Manhole Covers Blown Skyward in 42d Street and Third Avenue District.

ONE HITS CROWDED CAR

Traffic Tied Up an Hour by Bombardment Soldier Likens to Barrage Fire.

Several persons were hurt last night when an explosion of gas in the sewers in the vicinity of Forty-second Street and Third and Lexington Avenues blew several manhole covers into the air. Three of the injured were passengers in a trolley car at the intersection of Forty-second Street and Third Avenue, which was struck by one of the manhole covers. The others were pedestrians. None was reported seriously injured.

Examination showed that forty manhole covers had been blown off in the district. Nine or ten of the forty manhole lids were broken in falling. These were hurled, according to witnesses, more than twenty-five feet high. The average height the covers reached in their ascent, spectators said, was from fifteen to eighteen feet. The explosion broke many windows in stores and houses. Four large plate glass windows in a drug store at Forty-second Street and Third Avenue were broken and several pedestrains were cut by flying glass. Some of these refused attention by ambulance surgeons but were treated in the drug store.

John R. Lane, a soldier, recently returned from France, who served abroad with a Brooklyn regiment, declared the exploding manholes reminded him of an artillery barrage in France.

"I was standing at Forty-second Street and Third Avenue," he said, "when I heard a loud report, and I saw a big manhole cover sailing my way. It was coming with some speed, and it looked as if it had my name on it, so I made tracks for a drug store on the corner. I just got inside the store when it landed at the wooden base of the glass window and smashed the window to bits.

"As fast as the echo of one report faded away another one would start, and I stayed in the store until I thought it was all over. I didn't know when I came home I was due for another dose of war."

One of the manhole lids hurtling through the air struck the rear weather shield of a southbound surface car at Forty-second Street and Third Avenue, smashing the glass. The crash of the breaking glass caused excitement on the crowded car, and several women were knocked down. They were attended for bruises on the body and lacerated hands by ambulance surgeons. Two of these women, who fainted, were carried to a drug store at Forty-second Street and Third Avenue, where they were soon revived. Traffic on Forty-second Street was tied up for more than an hour.

The police said that while most of the accidents occurred in the vicinity of Forty-second Street, manhole covers as far north as Eighty-fourth Street were blown into the air. The first cover to be hurled skyward was at Lexington Avenue and Forty-second Street. It flew through a window in the building of the Manhattan Storage and Warehouse Company, struck a desk, and hit Joseph Clark, a bookkeeper, cutting his head. Otto Krouse, 657 Third Avenue, was also struck by one of the flying manholes and slightly cut. He notified the police, who called out the Emergency Home Defense, a hospital contingent with three ambulances in charge of women nurses. One of the ambulances was sent to Forty-second Street and Lexington Avenue, and the other two to Forty-second Street and Third Avenue. Three ambulances from Bellevue Hospital were also sent to the scene.

At Seventy-third Street and Third Avenue Michael O'Day, 21 years old, a chauffeur, of 339 East Twenty-ninth Street, was struck in the shoulder by a flying manhole. He was treated by a physician for a badly lacerated shoulder and was then taken home. The last manhole to let go was at Eighty-fourth Street and Lexington Avenue. It flew through the window of a florist shop owned by John Kyle, breaking the window to bits and filling the store with flying glass.

According to officials of the Sewer Department, the explosions were the result of garage owners washing gasoline down the sewers while cleaning automobiles.

QUITTING LAWRENCE STRIKE

Many Resume Work, but Labor Leaders Threaten.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Feb. 14.—Mill agents tonight professed confidence that the workers were returning to the mills here in such increased numbers each day that the strike would soon be of practically no effect.

U. F. Shackelton, agent of the Pemberton Mills, said that if the situation continued quiet his mills would be reopened next Tuesday.

The Strike Committee, on the other hand, distributed circulars saying that many thousands of operatives were still out and urging the strikers to remain firm in their demand for a forty-eight-hour week with fifty-four hours' pay. The circulars told of plans to ask workers in other trades to walk out in a general sympathetic strike.

Four arrests for alleged intimidation of operatives who are at work were made during the day.
